The Bible is not a book, but a library—perhaps I should rather say a literature. It is composed of sixty-six different books, written by between forty and fifty different authors—written centuries apart, in different languages, to different peoples, for different purposes, in different literary forms. It is the selected literature of fifteen centuries. It includes law, history, poetry, fiction, biography and philosophy. It is to be read as a literature, judged as a literature. One may therefore reject a book from this collection of literature and yet believe in the literature. It is not like a painting which either is or is not the work of one master. It is a gallery of paintings, in which some works may be originals and others copies.—Lyman Abbott.

TRINITY ENDEAVORERS PLAN ANNUAL MEETING

The regular monthly meeting of the Trinity church Y. P. S. C. E. was held in the church parlors Monday evening. After hearing reports from the various committees, a nominating committee was elected to name the officers for the coming year. Those who were named for this committee were William Kriney, chairman; Miss Lucie Coriell, Miss Anna Bach, Miss Marie Hahn, Russel Doeringer and William La Tourette.

During the session it was decided to hold a social Thursday evening, September 21. Announcement was also made by the treasurer that $77.-50 had been raised for "Camp Endeavor." The annual meeting of the society will be held on October 2.

The power of the press can be applied to any business by using good Printing.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

Press' printing is the result of ceaseless efforts to render the best service.

"EXPERTS ADVICE CLEANLINESS IN HOMES"

—Important words these, when you link them with the statement of Garret P. Serviss, the scientist, that in half an hour a single germ can reproduce millions.

—And then add the fact (which any physician can verify) that germs exist in ordinary housedust. Micro-photographs at our show room also prove this.

—This means "eternal vigilance," but not with the common broom. That does more harm than good. Witness the clouds of dust it raises—to be breathed into human lungs!

—The Hoover Suction Sweeper offers a safe, thorough way to clean house. Its specially devised motor-driven brush with two rows of soft hair gently shakes and beats the dirt out of the carpet-meshes, which suction quickly conveys to the dust bag.

—You can buy a Hoover for $47.50. Terms, $4.75 down, $4.75 monthly, or 5 per cent. off for cash with order.

—Have our man call with a Hoover and draw forth some real evidence. 'Phone or write.

LOCAL OPTION WORK PROGRESSES IN BORO

An enthusiastic meeting of the North Plainfield Local Option League, of which Dr. H. K. Carroll is president, was held in Debele Hall last evening, an unusually large number of people turning out to hear the speakers.

Reports of the work already accomplished by the league were read and an interesting talk on local option was given by the county organizer. William De la Roche Anderson, who is attending to the management of the campaign for John Ammerman, Assembly candidate, also made an informal address. William G. Gray was elected temporary secretary during the course of the meeting.

That the cause of local option was given a decided boost at the gathering last evening is the belief of those interested in the movement. The large assembly of voters present heard convincing arguments for the movement.

MARTIN'S FRIENDS PREDICT HE WILL BE NOMINATED

Friends in this city of Colonel William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, one of the Republican candiates for the county clerkship nomination, feel confident of his success at the coming primaries. He has three opponents for the nomination—Edward Bauer and Neil MeLeod, of Elizabeth and Richard Fordham, of Rahway. Colonel Martin is now a member of the Excise Commission of Elizabeth, and he says that if he is nominated and elected as county clerk, he will not resign his phesent position unless he finds it conflicts with his new duties.

Colonel Martin draws no salary as an excise commissioner and has been advised that he could hold both offices. He was captain of Company K, this city, from 1902 to 1907. He has been a member of the State and National rifle teams and accompanied the National team to the Olympic games in England, where he won high honors.

TROOPERS PLANNING TO COME HOME SOON

Get Ready for Return Trip, Though No Orders Have Come.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 88.—Despite plans for the long hike ninety per cent. of the soldiers here insist that they will leave Douglas for home before the fifteenth of this month, and many of the men already have part of their packing done and others are hurriedly making boxes and trunks in which to ship souvenirs and other surplus baggage so as to be ready for the jump.

All is hustle and bustle about the quarters of Acting Adjutant Claude E. Lanterman, of East Orange, who is also acting as captain of Battery A of the Field Artillery. To assist him in what appears to be a final checking up he has selected Privates James B. Felsenheld, of East Orange, as chief clerk, and Corporals F. H. Benjamin and William Fenwick, also of East Orange, as assistant clerks. During the past few days he has been forced to turn down many written applications for college entrance and dependency discharges owing to the recent government ruling putting a stop to them. It is also noticeable here that several colleges have taken up the cause of the enlisted students and are writing to the adjutant pleading for a release of these men that they may be allowed to take up their studies at the beginning of the term. One came today from a student registered at Stevens Institute, Hoboken, applying for the release of Private Edward Hayden, of Batter A. The adjutant has no other choice than to explain the Federal order to these applicants.

The sudden appearance of paratyphoid in the camp has caused all commanders to take every precaution against the malady, and it is believed that the disease will be confined solely to Company A(of the Fifth Infantry where it originated. Many imaginative ailments have sprung up within the last twenty-four hours, and a number of the nien and several officers claim there is an epidemic of backache running through the camp. A score or more of individuals having this complaint were located today, but it is believed that the cause may be attributed to the damp weather of the last few nights. This section has been hit by a rainy spell and rain has been either falling or threatening to fall for the last three days.

Footballs have made their appearance in camp and plans are being made by each company to organize a formidable eleven. Newark and Paterson have some crack players on their rosters and it is proposed to found a pigskin league with a trophy as an incentive to keen competition for the camp championship.

The tent frames and wooden shacks left behind by the First and Fourth regiments were bought up today by Douglas second-hand lumber dealers and carted away. This dispels the rumor to the effect that they would be kept here for other infantry units which were said to be on their way here to take the place of the two that left Monday.

PLAINFIELD ELKS GET SECOND PRIZE

While the Plainfield contingent of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks did not carry off any first honors in the parade of that oragnization at the third annual reunion held in Newark yesterday, No. 885, however, came home with the second prize for the prettiest float in the parade. The prize consists of statuary valued at $25. Plainfield lodge was represented by eighty men in line yesterday morning. When the party reached Newark they were met at the Broad Street station by Pennoyer's Military Concert Band of New York, and a float. The latter consisted of the large Elk from the local lodge rooms, a woman impersonating Betsy Ross, making the first American flag, a man impersonating George Washington, and another one of his aides. The float was drawn by four white horses, being led by a herald dressed in white.

Prizes offered for the lodges presenting certain features in the parade were eagerly contested for. The largest prize offered was a $75 elk's head, given to the lodge presenting thebest and neatest appearance.

The three-day reunion was brought to a close with a ball in the Olympic Park pavilion last evening. Many of the Plainfielders with their wives remained for this event and returned to this city late last night.

CHILD MISSING.

Mr. Goldberg, of 111 Washington street, reported to the police this afternoon that his three year old son, Sidney, had been missing since 9 o'clock this morning. When he left home he wore a brown suit with blue trimmings, a gray sweater and black shoes and stockings. He is dark complexioned.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature recorded at the State Trust Company today was as follows: 9 a. m., 67 degrees; 11 a. m., 71 degrees; 1 p.m., 70 degrees.

THE FORUM

Neil McLeod, of Elizabeth, who is a candidate for the county clerkship on the Republican ticket, requests the publication of the following letter from Frederick J. Faulks, of the law firm of Lindabury, Depue & Faulks, regarding his candidacy:

"Newark, N. J., Sept. 25, 1916.

"Neil McLeod.

"Court House, Elizabeth, N. J.

"My dear Mr. McLeod:

"I want you to know that I am interested in your candidacy for the Republican nomination as clerk of Union county and that I hope you will be successful at the primaries and elected in November. I am sure from your experience in the office that you will if elected prove to be a very satisfactory official. During all of the time that you have been at the Court House I have noticed that your duties there were performed not only well and promptly but with courtesy and satisfaction to the members of the bar and every one else with whom you came in contact. I know of no one else better qualified for the office and shall be genuinely glad if you are elected.

"With the best of wishes for your success in the campaign, I am

"Yours very truly,

"FREDERICK J. FAULKS."

Editor of the Plainfield Press:

While the whole country ih in a struggle for supremacy, I note through the columns of your paper where the negro soldiers could not serve with the whites. Now that is some narrow minded government that will allow its prejudice to go so far. When the negro volunteer lays down his life for his country, still because his skin is black he cannot serve with a white outfit. Take our city, which is very progressive, yet the limitation for employment for colored both male and female is very meagre. The police department has but one negro, the fire department has not any, the Public Service Railway has not any negroes. Now, we have men capable of filling positions in any of these services but the opportunity has never been theirs. Your paper daily advertises for men on the Public Service works. It says: "Men Wanted!" but if a negro goes it is nothing to it. Now they are clamoring for Local Option, but the negro voters should vote for men that will remember them after being elected and sever this narrow-minded business asunder. Out of one blood God made all mankind. If you can find space in your paper kindly publish this in your forum, and oblige,

ARRESTED HERE TO ANSWER HIGHWAY ROBBERY CHARGE

Joseph Hubbard, of 217 New street, was arrested on West Front street this morning by Patrolman George Muir on a warrant issued by Judge Campbell at Dunellen and was taken to that place to answer a charge of highway robbery. Hubbard, it is alleged held up Walter Lewis, who works on the New Jersey Central, on the night of Sept. 11, and took three or four dollars from him.

RELEASED ON BAIL.

After spending a week in the county jail, Thomas Harvey, of this city, was released this morning after Captain Charles Peterson, of Co. K, had gone his bond of $200. Harvey was held under bail by Judge DeMeza to await the action of the Grand Jury on the complaint of Fred Harrington of stealing sole leather from him.

FALSE ALARM.

The fire department was called out shortly before noon today by some one pulling Box 32 at Central avenue and East Seventh street, but when the firemen appeared on the scene all they found was a smouldering fire in a tree at 40. East Seventh street. As near as could be learned, a woman was trying to smoke some bugs out.

KENNEL CLUB MEETING.

There will be a meeting of the Plainfield Kennel Club Bench Show Committee and Board of Governors on September 18. Final arrangements for the fifth annual dog show to be held on September 23 will be made at this meeting.

BICYCLE MISSING.

George Ewald, of 258 Duer street, reported to the police last night that someone had stolen his bicycle from in front of Boice & Runyon's, on Park avenue during yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. A. M. McKee, of this city, is spending sometime at Becket, Mass.

RACING, DISPLAYS FOR TRENTON'S FAIR

More than fulfilling its motto of "Bigger and Greater," Trenton Inter-State Fair has perfected plans to conduct this year from Sept. 25 to 29 an exposition that is promised to surpass in completeness any that has been arranged in its remarkably successful career.

Colonel Mahlon R. Margerum, secretary of the Inter-State Fair Association, is directly supervising every detail this season, and he early mapped out ideas to inject new enthusiasm into every branch of the Fair's activities.

Every department of the exposition has been enlarged this season, and the free open air program in front of the grand stand will present celebrated performers in their first visit to this part of the world.

In Department A, devoted to ladies' art and fancy work, arrangements are being made to have the judging of exhibits done by experts from Drexel institute, Philadelphia. Increasing the total of several thousand articles that may win premiums in this department, a score of awards have been placed for the members of the boys' and girls' canning clubs.

Robert A. Fairbairn, who directs the New York horse shows at Madison Square Garden, will again have supervision over this department of the Fair and will bring to it all the ardor he has for his pet hobby, horses. The Percherons, Clydesdales, saddle horses, etc., will fill classes to win prizes for their owners and arouse the admiration of the crowds that fill the Horse Show building.

Horses for speed will again be under the direction of Horace P. Murphy. He has placed more than $7,000 in prizes for the trotters and pacers, and he will have a remarkable field of runners and automobile racers in addition. Motorcycle races are to be a new feature this year, and the speed fiends will be more than satiated by the program that will combine skill and daring. Four harness and three running races will be conducted each day of the Fair until Friday, which will have the automobile and motorcycle contests. Some of the greatest drivers in the country will appear at Trenton Fair.

Breeders of Berkshire swine from all parts of the east will attend the exposition for their annual show. To accommodate the swine they have entered Professor F. C. Minkler has had erected fifty additional pens to provide space for 300 more animals. More than 125 breeders will be in attendance.

The breeders will also hold their sale during the Fair, and farmers will have their best opportunity of buying pedigreed animals.

No Fair can excel the entries made of Ayrshire, Holstein, Jersey and Guernsey cows for the Trenton exposition. Special premiums in money and cups have been placed.

Several new acres of land have been found necessary for the machinery display, which will be enlarged this year under the direction of Colonel Harry B. Salter. Every variety of implements will be on view, and practical demonstrations will be held on their use. Applications for space in the Industrial Building have been made by a half dozen firms that lead in their respective lines of manufacture.

New classes have been added to the Agricultural and Horticultural Departments, which are among the places of beauty and utility at the Fair. Fruits and vegetables piled mountain high, rare orchids, beautiful dahlias and other plants will be artistically arranged by Professor Arthur J. Farley. Harvey E. Rogers has expanded the department under his direction, and the display of poultry, pigeons and pets will be the most varied.

The newest model of automobiles will be seen in the Auto Show, and hundreds of thousands of dollars will be represented in the value of the vehicles. Both commercial and pleasure cars with special bodies will be shown

For the free open air programs everything will be presented from "scrambled air" served by the famous aviators to the Australian woodcutters and the whirling Azimas. The Australians will have a genuine novelty in their thrilling exhibition of tree felling under competitive conditions. The marvelous rapidity with which the bushmen hew through mighty trees provides, it is announced, one of the most exciting scenes ever presented to the public.

Fifteen acts have been engaged in addition to the aviators, and they will be leaders in the world of amusement.

On the famous Midway the Leavitt & Taxier celebrated Pit and Tent Shows will be featured. This firm, which has an established reputation, will have the show and the riding device privileges. Freaks, giants and dwarfs will be in the number, but nothing will be presented that is any way undesirable. The attractions will be open to each member of the family.

The Fair Supply & Carnival Co. has take blocks of space and will bring new inventions? The shooting gallery, ball game and standard Midway concessions are to be there, but the other newer amusements will give more attractions than can be viewed in hours, it is stated.

Mrs. Harry Van Emburgh and daughter, of East Second street, are spending a few days at Asbury Park.

ROSY REPORTS ON COLGATE CAMPAIGN

Leaders Confident That Colonel Will Be Winner in Primary.

Newark, Sept. 13.—Rosy reports concerning the campaign of Austen Colgate for the Republican nomination for Governor were received at a State-wide conference of Colgate leaders and workers at The Robert Treat Hotel here yesterday afternoon. About 100 representatives of the different counties were present. After the meeting the conferees were entertained at dinner in the hotel by former Postmaster Frank J. Bock, of Newark, manager of the campaign.

One of the chief points dwelt upon by the speakers from the various localities was that the Colgate candidacy has greatly increased in strength within the last few weeks by reason of the growing belief that Colonel Colgate would poll a larger vote in November than any other candidate the Republicans could name. It was also stated by a number of the speakers that the Democratic leaders had admitted to them that the thing they had most to fear for the Wittpenn candidacy was the nomination of Colgate.

In this connection the general sentiment of the speakers at the conference was crystallized into a few brief sentences by Judge Charles C. Pilgrim, speaker of the House of Assembly, when he said:

"The strong and growing belief that the Republicans should nominate their strongest candidate for Governor can be interpreted to mean only one thing, and that is that the successful candidate on primary day will be Austen Colgate. People are talking that way wherever I go. There is a general demand among Republican voters for the man who will command the same relation with the Republicans of this State that Hughes commands with the Republicans of the nation. They want the man who will not only poll the full party vote but also get the largest support from the independents."

Colonel Colgate was present at the conference and got a big ovation. In a brief talk he thanked the workers for their effective efforts in his behalf and expressed his confidence in the successful outcome of his campaign. He attributed a large part of the success of the campaign thus far to the energetic work of his manager, Mr. Bock.

MUMFORD AND BERRIEN LOST TO RED AND BLUE

It is now practically certain that the football match scheduled to be played between the P. H. S. and East Orange H. S. elevens will not be contested, inasmuch as the date, September 30, is considered too early. The fact that school does not open until October 2 necessitates a late practice.

It was announced by Dick Pennock, the Red and Blue captain, that Warren Mumford and Clinton Berrien would be lost to the team. Pennock, who has been stationed as a life-saver at Asbury Park, stated that he intended taking a trip to Pennsylvania and that he would not return until the first of the month. In the face of these facts it is highly probable that the first Red and Blue game will be staged on Columbus Day.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" can be found in almost every European language, but it is doubtful if one in a thousand of those who use it has an idea of its origin. We are told in the Bestiary of Guillaume le Clerc that when the crocodile finds an unwary traveler it devours him, but afterward weeps over him all the rest of its life. This is very evidently the allusion in "Othello," "Each drop she falls would prove a crocodile."

There is another version of the fable, however, which is more often referred to in literature and according to which the crocodile sheds tears in order to allure the traveler to destruction. Shakespeare alludes to this in the passage where he tells how

With sorrow snares relenting passengers.
—2 Henry VI., 1, 226.

Conflicting Duties.

The most difficult thing in life seems to me to recognize which is the higher of two conflicting duties, and those to whom it is easiest must have, I think, not only the most happiness, but genius. If goodness were always quite simple, what could be more delightful than to be good always? It is, however, a sad thing, when the understanding and the affections are at variance, when one has to stop and consider which of two courses is morally incumbent on one, and without always finding a solution. It is sad, because it shakes one's faith in that which ought to be the surest of guides—namely, in one's own conscience. And, let one choose what he will, it leaves in his mind a sting, something to regret.—Paul Heyse.

Dangerous Locality.

"Now, if this proposition appeals to you, sign here," said the brisk agent at the end of a half hour harangue.

"No, but I saw an expression of pleased interest in your face."

"Oh, that wasn't due to anything you said. I just happened to remember that Mike, our head porter, is due here in about three minutes. The last time he put an agent out the fellow was carried to a hospital. Oh, must you go? Well, good morning."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

HAPPY DAYS ON THE BORDER WITH TROOP D

"Who's got any money?" next to "when are we going home?" is the most popular phrase in Troop D these days. A majority of the men are flat broke and those who are not all "spent out" are so badly beat that they're afraid to risk two cents on a stamp.

No signs of the paymaster have been noted as yet. Although the guardsmen's monthly stipend is due the first of each month not since they have been down here has it shown up before the fifteenth. Rumor has it that the government is going to hold up the money until the men get back to Sea Girt and if this is the case the soldiers are wondering how they are going to get cash enough to buy souvenirs promised to those at home.

Johnny Rinehart "busted" into the first tent last night all out of breath with this one: "Say, fellers, there's eleven cars on the siding with Troop D marked on them. Yea bo! we're going home."

Reggie Rowland awoke from a snooze and retorted: "Yes, and there's eleven hundred rumors right in this troop marked 'N. G.'" But Reggie was a mile from the tent by the time the rest of the squad saw through his pun and he's still in hiding.

Jimmy Conway, who has been sojourning at the base hospital for two weeks with an ailment nicknamed rheumatism is now well on the road to recovery and expects to be back with Troop D doing kitchen chores within a few days. Jimmy in telling of his experiences as an invalid remarks that the government substituted six pretty feminine nurses for a squad of male ones the very day he was received as a patient.

Mexican cigarettes have made their appearance in the Troop. They are different from the American coffin nails in that they are square in shape and the paper wrapping is black in color. One of these "pills" is stronger than a dozen corncob pipes, and that's going some.

Sergeant Alberts missed a horse from the picket line the other night. The animal returned after breakfast, probably having decided that the Troop D chow was a little better than he got at the place he visited.

Since he has been made a corporal "Gus" Fisk has found another way to increase his "unpopularity." He has become a regular student of militarism and burns the midnight oil much to the discomfort of his tent mates, trying to master the commands. Seriously speaking, though, Fisk has become known as one of the hardest workers in the troop and his promotion to corporal was one of the most popular moves the official staff has made since it landed here. Fisk is the first up in the morning, as well as the last to bed at night, and whenever there's any work to be done he's right in line to give a hand.

Private Schultze is glad the troops came to Douglas and not to some city where they have real vaudeville and first run shows. He thinks he is possessed of remarkable talent as a comedian and declares he would have been kidnapped long before this if there were any real circuit "bookers" around these parts.

Private Dawson tried to stop a horse kick the other day by putting his face in front of it. His good looks were considerably scratched up, but today he is around the camp as well as ever, receiving congratulations on the hardness of his head.

Sergeant "Turk" Righter pushed his way into the limelight the other morning while a group of early men were waiting for the tardy troopers to saddle their horses preparatory to a hike. Righter spent fifteen minutes in explaining to the "rookies" th best way to capture Hill 13, and the men didn't get wise to the fact that he was kidding them until the fourteenth minute was up.

Saddler Updike has captured and tamed a pair of gophers which he is planning to bring back to Plainfield with him. These little animals resemble in many ways a ground squirrel and are as common here as mosquitoes are back home.

RANDOLPH MAY HURL FOR SCOTT'S TABS

It is repored on excellent authority that Cliff Randolph, Plainfield's premier pitcher, will be on the mound for the Tabs on Sunday, when the "Philadelphia Colored Giants"—otherwise known as the "Royal A. C."—play at Avon Oval.

Cliff Randolph has been doing considerable pitching of late and has proved his ability time and again. According to the report, Cliff will be held on the bench until Mickey McFadden shows signs of weakening. Perhaps Cliff will not be given an opportunity to do any work, but it is highly probable that, if he is present at all, he will do most of the hurling. It is understood that Bradford will do the pitching for the Royals. While it is not certain, it is thought that Waldorf is through as a catcher. Stewart, a Newark player, of Tommy Washington, another Newark star, may draw the assignment.

PLANS BEING COMPLETED FOR ANNUAL KENNEL SHOW

The Plainfield Kennel Club Show, to be held at the Horse Show Grounds, Saturday, September 23, will possibly be the leading kennel event of the 1916 season, held within the Metropolitan district. Over 500 dogs are entered, and a large number of the leading kennel owners of the United States will be represented among the exhibitors at this popular event.

This club numbers among its officials and members, prominent dog fanciers and social leaders of New York and New Jersey. They have offered liberal money prizes in all breeds at a popular entry fee, and their liberal policies have attracted the attention of the kennel owners throughout the country, to this, the fifth annual show of this popular club.

Extra baggage cars and passenger coaches will be attached to train leaving New York at 8:15 a. m., via New Jersey Central Railroad, and upon arrival of this train at Plainfield, special trolley cars have been provided to convey exhibitors and their dogs, from the railroad station direct to show grounds.

A KITCHEN EQUIPPED LIKE THIS IS NEEDED EVERY MONTH IN THE YEAR

For cooking light, golden brown biscuits, tender, juicy roasts, chops, steaks—in fact for cooking anything to just the right turn, the Cabinet Gas Range is far ahead of the coal range. That is why so many housewives use the Cabinet Gas Range all the year 'round.

For heating water quickly and economically winter or summer, there is nothing like a Gas Water Heater. It heats water for the bath in from 10 to 20 minutes for less than 2 cents; for washing dishes in from 3 to 5 minutes for less than a cent, and for wash day all that is needed for less than 10 cents.

Sum up the time these kitchen necessities can save in the course of a year and you will have the equivalent of many days' vacation.

PRICES AND TERMS:

Cabinet Gas Ranges, $30.50 up. $2.00 with order and $1.50 monthly.

Gas Water Heaters, $15.75 up. $2.00 with order and $1.00 monthly.

Gas Iron, $3.50. 50 cents with order and 50 cents monthly.

BORDER TROOPS OF NEW YORK PRINT REAL LIVE NEWSPAPER

Doctored Clinical Thermometer Gives Field Sergeant a Scare—Gossipy Stories From the Front.

A REAL "live" newspaper is the Rio Grande Rattler, printed and published entirely by New York state troops encamped on the border. Its motto is, "It is not the purpose of the Rattler to sting, but to get out a rattling good newspaper," and that it has succeeded seems evident from the fact that it already has a circulation of 15,000.

One of the leading articles on the first page deals with the "remarkable health record" of the troops and should greatly reassure friends at home who have been hearing disturbing stories of life on the border.

An interview with Major General O'Ryan on the purpose of the trip to the border, an account of the arrival of the adjutant general in camp, a message from Governor Whitman and an article dealing with the program for practice marches of the troops make up the first page.

The managing editor is Major F. W. Ward, assistant chief of staff, and the rest of the publication staff includes Major Fred M. Waterbury, division ordnance officer; Captain Wade H. Hayes, Seventh infantry; Lieutenant Samuel J. Fisher, Twelfth infantry; Captain Arthur L. Howe, signal corps; First Lieutenant Clarence B. Martin, Third infantry; First Lieutenant Percy E. Barbour, corps of engineers; First Lieutenant Wheeler C. Case, aid, Third brigade; Corporal Conrad Crawford, Seventh infantry; Private A. L. Jenks, squadron A; Private Howard I. Young, Seventh infantry; Corporal N. B. Starkweather, Twenty-third infantry; Lieutenant C. B. Baines, Twelfth infantry; Private Donald Emory, Third ambulance company; First Lieutenant Ernest C. Dreher, Seventy-first infantry; Corporal Fred B. Barton, First cavalry; Sergeant Moses King, Jr., Seventh infantry; Corporal George B. Barnhill, First cavalry.

Asleep at the Switch.

The old saw "asleep at the switch" is being rejuvenated in Camp Cotton, Michigan troops. Within a month eight men, both privates and noncommissioned officers, have been found sleeping at their posts. In the first cases it was believed the youthful offenders were not fully impressed with the importance of their duties, and for this reason light sentences were imposed.

A sergeant and corporal in Company K of the Thirty-first were found asleep while on duty. In all likelihood the men will be severely punished, as it is the general opinion in camp that sufficient leniency has been shown. Only a week ago a guard on the viaduct removed his side arms and lay down to rest. He will probably be given a stiff punishment.

It developed at the trial of Private Paul of Company E, recently charged with sleeping on post, that he was on duty nearly four hours instead of two and that the corporal of the guard was asleep. After Major John Roehl had brought out these facts Paul was discharged. Private McCuen, charged with the same offense, was given five days extra duty.

Poets In Hospital Camp.

There are several "poets" in the field hospital camp. Only a few of them are brave enough to come forward and publicly acknowledge that they have been "dabbling in verse." Among them are four of the members of the Seven Angels' quartet. They are Sol O'Brien, C. B. Dugan, R. J. Dugan and Joe Perron of the District of Columbia. Their poem is sung to the tune of "Are You From Dixie?" and the words are:

Are you from D. C.?
Are you from D. C.?
The best little town on the face of the earth.
Are you from D. C.?
I say, old D. C.
The place where I claim my birth.
Are you from National rifles, Marble club or Glen Echo,
Or any place where all the good guys go?
Are you from D. C.?
Then shake hands with me,
For I'm from the D. C. too.

Battery B, O. M. D. C., always has had a weakness for poetry. When it was encamped at Fort Myer some unknown friend of the company kept it well supplied with original verse and parodies on popular songs. This person, apparently a woman by the handwriting, always signed her "pomes" with the nom de plume "Me."

Her two latest "efforts" were received at the battery camp recently, being addressed to a certain corporal who is engaged and has asked that his identity be kept a secret. He says he is afraid a certain young person would object if she knew he was receiving verse from another young woman, no matter if she does hide behind a pen name.

Thermometer Was "Doctored."

It's a shame the way the men of the field hospital play jokes on "Top" Sergeant Hart, who doesn't seem to mind them in the least. In fact, he seems to get fat off them.

The other afternoon Sergeant Hart went horseback riding. It was an unusually hot afternoon, and Hart had a hard time of it. When he returned to camp he complained of a headache and stretched out on his cot to take a nap. When he awoke he announced to some of his camp mates that he believed he had a fever. Sergeant Barnes was asked to bring him a clinical thermometer.

Barnes did so, but before handing it to the "Top" he "soaked" it well in hot water. This drove the mercury up to well over the hundred mark. Hart failed to examine the thermometer when he put it in his mouth, and when he withdrew it a few minutes later he insisted that he was a real sick man and immediately set about to doctor himself. The joke was so good that somebody began to laugh, and all the fun was spoiled.

Soldiers Were Left Behind.

Brooklyn friends of the guardsmen of the Twenty-third regiment are enjoying the story of a peculiar accident that occurred at Pharr, Tex., which had the effect of making involuntary deserters of a portion of the regiment. The story is told in a bulletin published by Company A's veteran association in "Notes From the Front."

"We reached here, Pharr, Tuesday at 8:30 a. m. and saw the Seventy-fourth detraining. Our train was held up by them just east of the station. General Wilson (Fourth brigade, New York) came to the train and ordered us to detrain. We were about half off when the train started. The other men stayed aboard as we supposed they would pull up into the station. Instead of that the train steamed over the horizon, leaving a handful of us, the K. O. (Colonel Norton) and the adjutant gaping. Quick telegraphing stopped them by flag at the next station, five miles west, where the conductor informed the K. O. over the wire that his orders were to deliver the regiment in Mission, and he proposed to do so as far as he was able, not being responsible for us deserters. After a brief, but forcible, exchange of opinion he wired the dispatcher for a schedule to get back on this single track and congested road. So after an hour or so we were cheered to see smoke in the west, and finally our train backed in and we were reunited."

A Soldier's Funeral.

H. O. Boldtmann, a private in L company, Seventh regiment, New York, died at the new hospital. He started on the Seventh's hike, but was sent back at the end of the first stage. The exact nature of his illness has not yet been established. As preparations were being made for funeral services over Private Boldtmann, the body of Sergeant Arthur Lockwood, L company, Twelfth regiment, was being escorted to the train that will bear it home. The regimental band played a dirge at the head of the column, and behind it marched Captain John J. Dean and Chaplain James N. Connolly.

Between the platoons of the company eight men bore the flag draped coffin. Taps were blown as the coffin was lifted into the baggage car. Lockwood, who was a crack half miler under the New York A. C. and Paulist A. C. colors, was the third man of the Twelfth to die here. Boldtmann was the second of the Seventh.

An artist of the pen with the Twenty-third New York regiment writes concerning the townspeople:

"The town is tiny and truly western in effect and full of people that I have hitherto suspected of being movie actors. I am now beginning to think they are real. They are as charming as they are picturesque, and I hope we shall soon be able to overcome the prejudice caused by their own militia who were apparently but little better than Villa's bandits."

The men of the regiment are gradually being made more comfortable, wood floors now insuring dry sleeping and dry clothes in case of sudden cloudbursts. The money subscribed by friends and by the veterans has been put to good use, and on the whole the Twenty-third is about as comfortable as can be.

Days Pass Quickly.

"Every day in the army is like Sunday on the farm." With this expectation some of the soldierly element of the Washington regiment at Calexico, Cal., joined, dreaming of the time when there would be three squares per day and the rest of the hours devoted to sleep and other pleasant recreations.

After following the troops through the first six weeks' training on the border a correspondent concluded his investigation with the opinion that such is far from the case.

The guardsman has a busy life, and his duties from day to day are numerous. He must arise at 4:15 a. m., and at 8:30 or 9 taps sounds.

The days pass fast, and, although they dream of the time when they shall return home, yet the average guardsman is contented with his lot and some even loath to leave. The first few weeks were hard as the process of acclimation was taking place, but that period is over, and in many respects it is an admirable vacation for many of the fellows.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

HOW TROOPERS SPEND THE DAY

Description of Work Done by Borden's Men in Twelve Hours.

RUMORS FLY THICK

Noon Mess is Time to Hear "Gossip" of the Camps—Arrival of Mail Always Biggest Event in Routine of the Men.

Following is the continuation of a Plainfield trooper's story of life with the guardsmen at Camp Douglas.

At seven fifteen the sun is at full shine and the troop is again at the picket line, saddling. Fifteen minutes later in a long brown column of twos it moves out upon the sandy road to the great plain that is the drill ground. "Trot!" The men gather and touch their horses; hoofs beat dully on the soft ground, saddle leathers creak in unison, the brown dust rises. Halt is given among the musquite, sage and cactus. At several distant points the troopers see erratic clouds of dust they advance, wheel, retreat, some to a stop and rise—they are from cavalry at drill; an accustomed eye can discern the files of men. Near the distant pointed tents a deeper, denser cloud shows where the batteries are swinging into line. The rock strewn flanks of the mountains, darkly shadowed in the hollows, are plain under the sun; the pommel of the giant saddle rises bald and clear.

Then begins the three-hour daily drill, in three platoons. Lieutenants Runkle and Charles each command one. Sargeant Cox the third.

"Platoons!" shouts the captain. "Right forward, fours right—trot—Ho!" Every horse is in motion, every man alert as the line breaks into three columns; and above the shuffling of hoofs in sand and the creak of leather, you hear the Non-Coms warning and urging: "Now watch your four, don't crowd;" "Halt there on the pivot;" and as the columns come to the parallel, "Guide is left in fours!" Now, watch your distance—four feet from head to croup." It is rough going, for the bushes and holes—the horses jump and dodge and crowd and the men must ride them well to hold their place, especially in commands that bring them from the columns into lines.

"Platoons, right front into line—gallop—Ho!" Each four on a long curve rushes up to the right of the four ahead, which comes to the trot as it reaches the line of the first: horses strain, bound, jostle, and leap, scattering the sand and stones.

"Platoons, right turn—Ho!" Each platoon wheels to the right. They are in three successive lines.

"Gallop, Ho!" The long lines of dripping horses bound forward in seeming unison. Each rider, watching his "centre guide" pulls down or lets out according as he tends to advance too far, or to fall back; and as they leap ahead a trooper in the first swing round, points down and calls out "Hole!" The man behind, as his line sweeps on evades it, but in the third platoon a horse's foreleg goes in and down he comes, his rider shooting over his shoulder.

The troop is green and the drills are rough and crude enough, though better every day. There are pauses when the men can talk and smoke, and amusing incidents are many. Take the case of the little brown mule that escaped from the picket line. The troop was at a halt, in line, when he trotted out, and he took his place beside the captain. When they tried to drive him off he pranced playfully but in a manner to remind you what the hind legs of a mule were made for. At the order "forward" he twitched his long brown ears and took the lead. The troop followed.

"Right turn!"

As the drill book prescribes he turned to the right "on the arc of a circle whose radius is two yards." The troop followed.

"Trot!"

He trotted beside the captain; and the troop followed. So it went—the brown mule always where, as commanding officer, he ought to be, the delighted troopers watching and chuckling. He brought the troop back to the picket line when "recall" sounded at ten-fifteen, in good order.

Soon after drill the picket lines swarm like ant hills; all the horses in the camp are being cleaned, fed and watered at once, and the ways to the troughs are as completely choked as the roads to a cattle fair. As they are taken off the lines and led by twos, or ridden bareback, some kick and some pull and others hold back, while the men tug or push with their shoulders, or shout at them words that wouldn't go at home; for you must speak the language a horse can understand. But soon again all is quiet, the horses are munching their oats, and the troop marches back in columns of twos to clean their sadles and bits and bridles, and to wash for mess.

Noon mess is light and usually cold—iced tea, tomato salad, bologna sausage, perhaps, and over it camp rumors are likely to crop up—and by the way, the reason Homer and Virgil bestowed upon the goddess "Rumor" or "Fame" so many thousand ears and eyes and wings, was obviously that so much of the life of those times was lived in camps.

"A man from 'A' told me," says Smith, "that he knows a man who was orderly at headquarters; and he overheard General Hines say on the telephone that wouldn't be home till after Christmas." Some listeners look amused, and others discouraged, but one of the hard-headed simply calls down the table, "Pass up the sausages, will you?"

"Well, the signal corps has had orders to pack all supplies but those they will need this week. I know, because Brown in our tent has a friend over there, and the major there, he says, expects orders home right off; and if they go we'll go." "Oh, hell!" says a pessimist, "do you think they'd have brought thirty motor trucks here now in that case. We're going into Mexico, that's what; and I have it pretty straight, too, from——"

"Pour me a cup of tea, Dick, will you?" says the hard-headed one.

The great midday event is not the mess but the mail. If people knew the eagerness for letters they would write many more. The men crowd around the door of the first sergeant's tent, where they are sorted till he must call out: "Everybody away from the door; give us a little air!" They group around the noncom of each squad as he brings out the letters and distributes them—unfairly, for three go to one man, none to another, and you hear so much remarks as "Confound you, Reg, you've had a letter every day," and "Hang it, you'd think they'd write now and then to a man in the middle of a blooming desert." Then they go back to their tents and lie down—for the sun is at full blaze and there is no place to sit—then for an hour or so to sleep and gossip.

There is a non-com school at one in the mess hall, where the captain lectures or examines the sergeants, corporals and high privates, on tactics; and then each man has some duty—practice in aiming and sighting, perhaps or in exchanging semiphone signals with flags, one corporal and two privates from each squad; but the next general event is stables at four, and after that retreat.

Between the two you clean your gun most carefully, with oiled rags and dry, remembering that as Jim Conway says "it's no dry-rag that makes the barrel shine;" rub your shoes and leggings with saddle soap, strip, get into a slicker and walk down to the shower baths. Probably the little wooden shed is crowded and you enviously watch the torrents pour upon the five lucky ones who got there first. But your turn for the exquisite moment comes; the cold flood envelopes your hot body, you lift your face and spread your arms to it, and hardly can you get yourself to step aside, though you have had your share of ecstasy and must make way for others.

Face Saddle at Retreat.

At five-forty-five the men, fresh and clean, stand in line for retreat, facing toward the great and distant saddle which, now with the whole range a delicate cool lavender, rises beyond the rows of yellow tints confronting them. "Atten—tion" calls the first sergeant. Talk ceases, the line straightens. Squad leaders report." The sergeants step forward and each in turn, according to the case, says: "All present or accounted for—two men sick, one on detail, three on guard." Then a few moments of the manual of arms while "The Star Spangled Banner" from the infantry band sounds, till the squadron begin to play "To the colors."

"Atten—tion!" Again the line shifts, forward now, and stand mobile while the clear bugles sing in the cool air.

"Inspection—Arms!" The captain and a lieutenant walk down the line, squint through the barrels and examine the breech, but Mr. Dry-Rag has done his work and only two or three are told to show their guns to their squad leader before eight, clean.

"Troop Dismissed!"

Those who have applied for passes turn back to their tents for black necktiees and perhaps blouses—not allowed in line—for they will dine at the "Gads" on shredded wheats and lots of cream, three poached eggs on toast and coffee and cream—things you seldom get in camp; and the others congregate once more at the mess hall, many counting on an evening ride, to hurry through their stew and iced tea.

None will forget those rides through the cool evening wind along roads or trails that lie level with the plain, toward the now purple mountains; rides in little groups of four or five often rather silent—silence is suggested by the vast quiet of the desert and the hills. And as the dark comes down they turn their horses back toward the four great smoke pillars of the smelters and riding at gallop for a time, bound through the wind. But slowly by dark they walk in toward the lanterns at the ends of the picket lines.

"Halt! who's there?" It is the guard—"Corporal of our troopers, Troop D."

"Dismount Corporal, and advance to be recognized," calls the guard; and when that's done, "Pass!" he says, and you all ride in.

In the troop street the lanterns glow through many tents where circles of men, elbows on knees, play bridge or poker. In the yellow lantern light in the mess hall, others write letters home. Some one is playing a guitar in the first tent to men who silently sit on the edges of their cots, although the battery piano is banging out to the tune of John Brown's body.

"Battery B will soon be marching—On the road from Mexico——(it used to be to)

Then the well fed men from town begin to straggle in. Even before tattoo many have spread their blanhats and stripped off their outer clothes, while the sad notes of taps are whining the last lantern goes out and all the camp's asleep. All but the guard.

Guard duty is the most detested feature of the life. It falls upon each man little less than once a week—each of the four troops takes it in rotation for twenty-four hours. Guard mount is at five p. m. before the two dirty guard tents that stand somewhat apart near the platform of the prize ring where on Saturday nights fights are held. Twenty-two privates, a sergeant and three corporals compose it. They work in shifts of seven men each, two hours in post with loaded pistol and four off with the hot, heavy cartridge belt and suspenders still tight about you. Perhaps it sounds easy, but it's long and weary and at night, on post, lonely.

The Chocolate Egg.

There is one chance to evade it even when on the list; the most spick and span and soldierly of the lot is selected for the major's orderly—a full night's sleep, riding, and plenty of time for mess, that means: 'the chocolate egg," the men call it and compete keenly for it. Leather puttees are essential to win it and those who have none often borrow from others not on the guard that have. The Stevenson boys are always likely candidates. Ogden Rogers used to take the egg more often than not. Ned Cady carries odds in his favor—a pleasant countenance and a Stetson hat cannot but count. Once the chocolate egg is bestowed, the pistols inspected by the officer of the day, and the first shift posted, the guard off duty settles down to consume the weary hours—generally till dark with a game of craps, the players crouching in a circle on the prize ring platform. At seven the game is broken by the corporal for the next two hours. He marches his men by twos to the A troop picket line, the first spot, and asses from line to line, dropping the new guard, picking up the old.

Toward ten the men off duty begin to curl up for a little sleep—even their shoes they must keep on to be ready for immediate action. No one sleeps in the tents. The cots are dragged out under the stars, and as not enough are in condition, many take to the canvas carpeted prize ring. At the time for each relief the corporal of the guard wakes his successor, who goes about waking his squad, brutally flashing his lantern on them and shaking their legs and shoulders till they rouse up. "Come on!" says he, "hurry, got to go to post." And when all in line off they go, corporal's lantern swinging, to the first post.

"Halt!" who's there?" comes from the dark.

"Corporal of the guard with the relief."

"Advance corporal of the guard, to be recognized;" which corporal does holding the lantern to his face, and then calls up his squad. "How many?" he asks.

"Eighty-nine horses and eight mules," says the old guard and the new gaurd takes note for now he is in charge of those mules and horses. Then, for two hours the new guard walks his lonely post—only by day can he perch on the lofty alfalfa pile—trying to make two counts that agree of the double row of ever shifting animals whose forms he can so dimly see; or, at some peril, going among them to untangle one whose leg has got over the halter shank; or trying to catch another that has somehow slipped off the line; watchful for the officer of the day who more than likely is skulking about to see that he is on his job and will no doubt command that he recite his general orders which are as bad as the catechism used to be. He runs them over between horse counts: "To take charge of this post and all government property in sight. To walk my post in a military manner, keeping always on the alert." A black shape looms up ahead—another horse loose. It snorts and recedes as he advances, again and again, and he sees he will need help.

"Corporal of the guard, Post No. 2," he calls into the night.

A tossing lantern approaches; the corporal on the run, and he and the guard together finally get the horse.

But the day is even worse. You are in the situation of a man undergoing that branch of the third degree in which he is allowed to doze from exhaustion only to be instantly awakened; you crave sleep and cannot quite get it for the flies. Or if you do not get off soundly, as like as not you will awake to the call "Turn out the guard!" And a corporal will hustle you out to stand in line of attention before the major. It's bad, and there are twenty-four long hours of it. You make for the Gadsen if you can when those long hours end.

Comparatively, however, the guard is not so badly off; his comrades are having no easy time; on the day the troop takes the guard it is the fatigue troop—does all the laborious work of the squadron and has no drill. One squad is exercising horses, in column, each man riding one and leading, as likely, dragging two—strenuous work for arms and legs, to manage three horses and keep your place in line. Jack Caulfield in a squad of amateur carpenters—Bess Andrews, Ry Rowland, Roger Mellick and others—is at some constructive work—a new incinerator of adobe brick, or a stable for officers' horses. But most of the men are clearing the picket lines, three to a wagon, with pitchfork and rakes. That is a full morning's hot and heavy work—the loading, the long rattling wagon ride behind the mules to Hood's ranch—where there are real trees and honeysuckle vines and sometimes, if Mrs. Hood takes to you, lemonade—and there the unloading and the jolting journey home. But the drivers are excellent company. To have mastered the difficult art of "Mule skinning," as they call it, implies a wide and rough experience; and since the art is largely vocal, a certain vivid eloquence as well; you hear tales of railroading, fighting, even life before the mast on those three mile rides as you cling to the seat beside the seasoned mule skinner, while the hot sun soaks into your back. And the exhortations of the mules are a liberal education alone, though not for printed repetition. Yet the worst thing a man can call a mule is—mule! The most adept mule skinner finally comes to that. Verbal fireworks exhausted and the mule not yet exhausted in his perversity, he utters the one all-insult comprehending word—"Mule"!

It Made Them Boys.

Such are the more general features of the life of the Watchung troopers; all of them see and do all of these things. But there are innumerable other incidents and episodes— the expedition into picturesque but dirty Pirtleville, where there is a one-eyed sheriff, and two or three of Villa's former lieutenants; the motor rides to Bisby in its mountains cleft, where they play cricket on the green, and on whose mountain trails you encounter droves of littel four legged wood piles that turn out to be laden burros; and best of all those Sundays with an all day mounted pass when your horses, nose to tail, twist and zigzag through the desert mesquite, or scramble round the interlocking shoulders of the mountain, where the ground is strewn with rocks; buzzards swing aloft and your water gets too hot to drink, and you rest with your head in the feeble shadow of a century plant or a cottonwood three, and open youh can of provisions with a rowelled spur, having forgot a knife; or perhaps you leave the horses and climb by foot—by hand as well, most likely—to the top of the cliff crowned ridge; the view of the other side bursts upon you, a vast sea of empty country with great blue mountain waves and their wide green desert troughse.

Nor can the fellowship and humor of the life be reproduced, and that connuism which, when pay day is late, and almost every one "broke," makes the money one has belong to all who want it for anything from an ice cream cone to a Steson hat; nor the grumbling which is rather a form of complaint, always humorous and never bitter; nor many other of the most characteristic elements in the rough hardy life. Some grandiloquent writer at the time the troops had just got to the border, wrote "From a New York desk some guest—an account of the border life which closed with some such phrases as—'The great West desert is making us men.'" For the Watchung troopers, considering the circumstances, it did far better—it made them boys.

as directed and required by the ordinance of the City of Plainfield, entitled "An Ordinance Concerning the Construction and Repair of Sidewalks and Curbs," approved July 15, 1910, as amended, not having been completed, the Common Council of said City has directed such improvement to be made under the direction and supervision of the Street Commissioner, and further directed notice of such contemplated improvement to be given to the owner or owners of any lands thereby affected and further directed that if such improvement shall not be completed within the time and in the manner directed in this notice, the Street Commissioner shall thereupon forthwith proceed to cause such improvement to be made by the city under his direction, as authorized by said Ordinance and the Act of the Legislature hereinafter referred to. The foregoing is a description of your property affected, sufficiently definite in terms to identify the same and the following is a description of the required improvement, viz., on North Avenue, Berkeley Avenue, Leland Avenue and Woodland Avenue, the construction, adjoining said property, of the sidewalk, and on West Fourth Street, the construction adjoining said property, of the curb, all to be laid as directed in said ordinance (to which ordinance and record thereof in the City Clerk's office reference is hereby made for greater certainty), at the expense of the abutting land owners, composed of concrete to be laid in conformity with the specifications for cement sidewalks and curbs as set forth in "Standard Specifications for Portland Cement Sidewalks and Curbs," filed in the office of the City Clerk, April 11, 1910.

The Street Commissioner shall give the correct lines and grades in all cases.

Notice is further given that unless said improvement shall be made within thirty days after the publication of this notice, it is the intention of said City to make said improvement or cause the same to be made, pursuant to the authority of the Act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, entitled "An Act to authorize cities to construct and repair sidewalks and curbs and to provide for the payment of the cost thereof," approved April 13, 1908, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Proof under oath of the publication or service of this notice will be filed within two days thereafter in the office of the City Collector, being the officer charged with the duty of making official searches for liens.

Said Act of the Legislature provides that in case of non-payment of the charges authorized thereby, the land and real estate subject to the liens of such charges may be sold in the manner provided for the sale of lands for the non-payment of assessments.

0 last a London illustrated d on its back page a large of a man in yachting dress naval cap. Underneath the was the inscription, "Cap- lentiner," and over it: nia pirate. No murderer's en in the dock was more this. Yet Germany hails s. Captain Max Valentiner, an of the Sonderburg ca- he Lusitania pirate who torpe- doed the Lusitania. He looks capable of so dastardly a deed."

The photograph itself, despite the description, is that of a rather handsome man wearing a beard which bears traces of having been touched up a little in order to make it look fiercer.

It now turns out—so the story goes—that the photograph is not that of Valentiner at all, but of Cornelius Vanderbilt, the American millionaire, taken some time ago in yachting costume.

It is understood that Mr. Vanderbilt has served the proprietors of the paper with a writ for libel and that he feels very keenly about the newspaper's characterization of his photograph.

WAITING FOR THE BIG FELLOW

By BRINKERHOFF.

Plainfield Theatre.

Ruth Wesley, With "Merry Rounders," Plainfield Theatre, Matinee and Night, Monday, September 18th.

The current vaudeville bill at the Plainfield Theatre continues to attract local theatre patrons. Capacity houses have greeted each show and much favorable comment regarding the calibre of the entertainment provided has been heard. The feature act is a musical comedy, entitled "The Country Girls." Ten winsome maidens as viacious as any Winter Garden chorus, comprise the cast in this act, which is a revelation to devotees of the terpsichorean art.

Gilbert Ward, a comedian who, unlike a great number of others, is really funny, furnishes a shower of laughs and has already taken the city by storm. "The Village Trio," who render popular songs in a high class manner, contribute a lively bit to the bill and introduce the very latest efforts in song hits. This trio, composed of a woman and two men, provides a first-class attraction, being equal to feature acts on less select programs.

In addition to the unusually attractive array of vaudeville offerings, Manager Shannon has contracted for the first run of all the latest photoplay offerings. The newly organized Pathe Exchange, releasing only the best in the motion picture line, furnishes daily a news pictorial and a lively comedy in addition to a feature offering.

For Thursday, Friday and Saturday the management has secured the "Junor Revue of 1916," a classy act, in which pretty maidens play an important part. The Carroll Sisters, juvenile entertainers, presenting their famous "Dutch" act, have made this "Revue" what it is—the best juvenile offering on any bill. This act contains all new features, imitations of famous stage celebrities playing an important part in its composition. The "Junior Revue of 1916" played here last year and was such a decided hit that the Plainfield Theatre box office was besieged with requests for a return engagement. Comedy, singing and dancing, intermingled with plenty of "spice," all go to make up an act that is worth while.

"This is the Life," a two-act revue in ten scenes, is the title of the show that will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre, September 18, Monday matinee and night, presented by "The Merry Rounders." Max Spiegel's wonderful production in which "Abe" Reynolds, the foremost delineator of Hebrew character roles in this country today and Geo. F. Hayes, peer of all "rube" impersonators, are featured.

The fact that the "Merry Rounders" is a Spiegel roduction is sufficient guarantee of its class in point of equipment, costumes, scenery and excellence of cast, and the mere announcement that Spiegel is bringing a show to this city next week should result in a record breaking business, for his productions in the past have stood out over all others and the past season "The Merry Rounders" was the sensation of the country.

Abe Reynolds is again seen in the character that he has made famous, that of "Jacob Rosenbloom," the Hebrew merchant, with his quaint and funny sayings and his ability to make one laugh and cry within the turn of a hand. Geo. F. Hayes, a "rube" impersonator that stands alone in his particular character, is again playing alongside of Reynolds, and they make a team that is seldom found together.

Proctor's Theatre

By a special arrangement made with both the Fox and Metro corporations the management of Proctor's local theatre are enabled to offer their patrons a double feature photoplay entertainment today, consisting of the William Fox production, "Sporting Blood," starring Dorothy Bernard and Glen White, and the Metro attraction, "Dorian's Divorce," with Lionel Barrymore in the leading role. "Sporting Blood" is a very interesting picture and one which is out of the ordinary run of photoplays. It deals with the race track and abounds with fervid and realistic atmosphere, the direction being handled by Bertram Bracken. The story has been worked out very completely and with infinite care and as is usually with the Fox photography, setting and location, there is nothing to be desired. Dorothy Bernard and Glen White in the leading roles are excellent, while De Witt C. Jennings will make a decided impression by his forceful acting. As for "Dorian's Divorce," we consider this picture the best Metro offering since "A Yellow Streak." It is easy to be enthusiastic about it, first, because the story is excellent; second, because Lionel Barrymore has a typical Lionel Barrymore role, which he handles very admirably; third, because the direction is very fine, and fourth, and again, because the story is excellent—and clean—and swift moving—and worth looking at. Space, unfortunately forbids, our telling the story here, but suffice to say that it will positively hold the rapt attention of every spectator viewing it. Barrymore has an excellent supporting cast, which includes Grace Valentine, William Davidson, Edgar L. Davenport, Lindsay J. Hall and John Leach. These are all excellent types and thoroughly convincing in their work. The authorship of the story is credited to A. C. Lund, also the director, and he deserves full credit for the excellence of the picture. Tomorrow is Triangle day—"Shell 43" being the attraction, really one of the greatest pictures based on the present European war ever produced on the screen, and in which H. B. Warner assumes the leading part.

TO BUSY TO EXERCISE.

Then the lungs get weak. One hundred and twenty-five out of every thousand die annually of consumption in this country. The digestive organs get weak. Even more suffer from disorders of the digestive organs than from consumption. The nerves become weak. The new American disease is "Neurasthenia." The heart gets weak. And a weak heart means imperfect circulation in every part, shortness of breath, heart disease. The brain is starved. For it cannot feed upon impure blood and be well nourished. The muscles become like putty. If they are not used they atrophy. Recall how small and soft a limb becomes if inactive after a sprain or fracture.

NOW:

Isn't there an hour each day unaccounted for in your life? Spent in talking about nothing in particular? In glancing over important news items? In vague reveries? In idleness? Wouldn't the total average an hour? That is all the time you need to exercise.

Ten minutes to get ready.
Thirty minutes to exercise.
Ten minutes to bathe.
Ten minutes to get back into you street clothes.
Total, sixty minutes.

26,000,000 PAIRS OF SHOES.

Huge Orders Placed by Allies For Their Armies.

Orders for 26,000,000 pairs of shoes for the British, Servian, French, Russian, Italian and Belgian armies have been received by British manufacturers since the outbreak of the war.

One-fourth of the total, or more than 100,000 pairs a week, have been alone supplied by the workmen of Northampton, the chief seat of the English shoe manufacture. The manufacturers are turning out a second installment of 3,000,000 pairs of footwear for the Russians, this time boots known as the Cossacks.

Owing partly to their preoccupation with army contracts, partly to depletion of their staffs of male operatives and partly to restrictions imposed by the government on the disposal by tanners and merchants of leather suitable for army purposes, boot and shoe manufacturers are finding considerable difficulty in supplying the demands of the civilian market.

"FOR BEAUTY I'M NOT A STAR," SAYS WILSON.

"My Face, I Don't Mind It, Because I'm Behind It," He Quotes.

President Wilson during his recent visit to Atlantic City, N. J., threw an audience at a charity musicale into a roar of laughter by reciting the following limerick when called on for a speech:

For beauty I am not a star.
There are others more handsome by far.
But my face, I don't mind it
Because I'm behind it.
It's the people in front that I jar.

The president went to the musicale with Mrs. Wilson, not expecting to speak. He was reminded of the limerick, he said, by the request of the man in charge that he stand up and allow the crowd to see his face. He added it was a pleasure to hear good music. He was warmly applauded.

CRYING FOR HELP.

Lots of It in Plainfield, But Daily Growing Less.

The kidneys often cry for help.
Not another organ in the whole body more delicately constructed.
Not one more important to health.
The kidneys are the filters of the blood.
When they fail the blood becomes foul and poisonous.
There can be no health where there is poisoned blood.
Backache is one of the frequent indications of kidney trouble.

Upon the Floor Lay a Big Heap of Gold.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How a Father Met His Little Boy.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

THE children finished the last bit of their bread and jam, and then daddy told them: "Once a dwarf agreed to give a merchant all the gold he needed if the man would give him twelve years from then the first thing he met on his way home. But the first thing the merchant met was his little boy, Heinel. The child was so glad to see his papa that he crept up behind him and held fast to his legs. Then he looked up in his daddy's face and laughed.

"But the father, startled, trembled with fear and dread, for he saw what he had just bound himself to do twelve years ahead. But, since the dwarf had promised him gold for his bounden word and no gold was in sight, the father tried to make light of his meeting with the dwarf. He decided that it was only a joke the little man was playing on him. He decided that if the money should come he would surely see whoever fetched it and so refuse to take it.

"About a month after this the merchant, who had lost all his money at sea, remembered some old iron that he could sell and make a little money. So he climbed up a ladder to his lumber room where the iron was stored. And there, instead of the iron, upon the floor lay a big heap of gold.

"At the sight of so much wealth the merchant was overjoyed. He forgot all about his little son, Heinel. He took the gold, went into trade again and made so much money that he was far richer than before he lost his two ships.

"Meanwhile Heinel grew up. At the end of the twelve years the merchant began to call to mind his agreement with the little black dwarf. He became very sad and thoughtful, so that care was written all over his face. Finally Heinel noticed this and asked his father what was the matter. But at first his father would not tell him.

"At last the father told his son that he had years ago, without knowing it, sold his little boy for gold to a little rough looking black dwarf; that the time to keep his bounden word to the dwarf had now come.

"Then Heinel said: 'Father, give yourself no trouble about that. I will be too much for the little black man.'

"When the twelve years were up the father and his son went to the little plot of ground where the father had made the hard bargain with the dwarf, and Heinel drew a circle around the plot of ground and set himself and his father in the middle of it," said daddy, with two bedtime hugs.

Training a Husband

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Morris Southy is a Different Man When Away From His Home.

It was long since Marian had spent so happy an evening as the first evening of the Neighborhood Club proved to be. There had been frequent moves in her married life, and she had been so tied down with her babies that social pleasures had been rear. She forgot the wearisome planning for meals to make a little go as far as possible. The never-ending washing and ironing and the patching and darning were forgotten as she listened to the cheerful chatter of the friendly ladies or overheard the men talking politics. She notice with pride that Morris' opinions were listened to with respect.

"He is another man away from home," she thought sadly, as she watched the intelligent vivacious face and heard the cheerful laughter. "He never laughs at home." Her gloomy reflections were interrupted by an amused exclamation from Mrs. Morton at her elbow.

"We will have to call you the 'Lady of the Decoration,'" she was saying.

"You see, Mrs. Gordon is a novice in cooking and she is displaying her burns with pardonable pride," she explained to Marian, as she looked at the little beauty's scarred arms.

"I am prouder of those red marks than I would be of diamond bracelets," gloated the beauty's husband, "for they show a wealth of pluck." He smiled down on the little scar under his fingers.

"Let us have some music while we wait for that old duffer Parsons," said the doctor's cheery voice. "I shall have to collect those good people and bring them with me when I come or we shall have to vote a fine for any one who is more than a half an hour late."

"Surely nothing so rash as that or you would make every one punctual," chaffed his wife.

"I have a new record, a beauty," Dick rose to start the talking machine. A hush fell on the gathering for they all loved music.

"Why, what is the matter with it?" asked Nell. "It does not sound right. Have you a good needle on?"

"I believe the thing needs oiling. I have been intending to send Jordon up here to see about it for some time, but it is one of the things I have forgotten."

"If you will allow me, I think I can oil the machine in a very short time and we can have the pleasure of the music." It was Morris who spoke. "Is the screwdriver here?" He had his coat on a chair and was busy unscrewing the top in short order. The men gathered around and discussed the merits of vaseline and oil on the different parts. Morris disseminated information and was the soul of obliging neighborliness.

"Our little phonograph has been out of order for two months," thought Marian. I have asked him to fix it till I desisted for very shame. He knows, too, how much it meant to me. It must be my fault I have failed to manage him in the right way. He had such possibilities of cheerful comanionship." She felt her eyes sting and hastily wiped them. "I never could demand anything. I always preferred to do without anything than to have to ask for it, but it was the wrong course. Morris has forgotten that I exist as far as doing little things for me is concerned. A wife has no right to allow a husband to get in that state and it is my hard task to cure him of it now." Her dismal reflections were interrupted by the entrance of Mr. and Mrs. Parsons and the commotion that ensued when every man present rushed up to him watch in hand to make plain the fact that he was thirty-five minutes late. He turned tragically and pointed to his wife, saying:

"The woman thou gavest me——" but his voice was drowned in the general clamor. "None of that, old man. We don't believe a word of it. You waited for him a quarter of an hour anyway, didn't you?" They turned to Mrs. Parsons.

"Surely," she grinned; "sixteen minutes."

"Well, I move that the culprits be foriven, for if they had not been late we should not have had our victrola fixed," said Dick. "The ayes have it," he announced after silence had been restored. "Now we will hear the new record before we begin the game."

"We must have our machine in order before the club meets with us," said Marian on her way home. "It would not do to have ours out of order after you have so ably proved your ability to keep them in order."

Morris coughed.

CONSIDER QUESTION OF DIVORCED PERSONS

If Recommendation is Adopted Episcopal Clergymen Cannot Marry Them.

If the recommendations of a commission consisting of five bishops, and an equal number of clergymen and prominent laymen of the Episcopal Church are adopted by the General Convention which meets at St. Louis in October, it will be impossible for any divorced persons to be married by an Episcopal clergyman.

Hitherto the Canon law of the church has allowed an exception in the case of the innocent party in a divorce for adultery. But this exception was carefully guarded against abuse. Twelve months must have elapsed after the granting of the divorce, and a copy of the court's decree and record had to be submitted to the bishop before any clergyman could officiate at such a marriage.

Notwithstanding these stringent restrictions the commission is convinced that more rigorous action is necessary. Divorce is increasing by leaps and bounds, especially in the Western States. In the opinion of experienced lawyers collusion is widely prevalent, and it is becoming increasingly difficult to determine the inocence of either party to a divorce. It is therefore proposed to adopt a new Canon absolutely prohibiting marriage in the Church between either of whom has a husband or wife living, and who has been divorced for any cause arising after marriage.

The adoption of this proposal will afford great relief to many clergymen upon whom great social pressure is brought to solemnize such marriages.

This legislation does not affect cases where the marriage relation is anfulled by the court for causes arising before the marriage.

The difficult question as to whether divorced persons who have re-married by the civil authority or by a clergyman of some other church shall be admitted to the Holy Communion is to be referred by the parish priest to the bishop of the diocese, and his decision is to be final.

SIMPLICITY A FEATURE OF FROCKS.

Two Materials and Two Colors Often Combined—Youthful Line.

By Mary Glynn.

The woman with a youthful figure has more of an opportunity these days to accentuate that youthfulness than ever before. The lines of the frocks this season are essentially youthful and therefore extremely attractive. The use of two fabrics is a notable feature, also two colors—combinations of plaids and taffeta are articularly attractive, and these two have been used one some of the smartest one-piece frocks obtainable. The frock illustrated was shown in navy blue and white plaid in clever jacket effect. The skirt, being of plaid, is bordered with navy taffeta, and the smock jacket is also of navy taffeta. A narrow belt of self material confines the fullness at the waistline. The narrow yoke and band in front is outlined with silk stitching and narrow cording. A soft roll collar of white satin softens the neckline. The trim tricone and smart button boots afford suitable finishing touches.

There is much diversity in bathing caps. Some of them are trimmed with rubber posies, others are more tailored in style, with rubber rosettes or long pointed quills. Broad trimmed bathing hats are rather a nuisance in the water but a great comfort on the sand. For sand wear also, is a long scarf of rubber which may be slipped over neck and arms to ward off freckles. The aviator bathing cap fits the head like an ordinary diving cap and has an attachment which may be turned down over ears and back of neck, with strings to tie under the chin. No better cap for keeping the hair dry has ever been thought . . .

BIG COLLAR ADDS DAINTINESS TO FALL COSTUME.

Large collars of sheer white fabric add a fresh, dainty touch to dark blouses and frocks, and these collars will be very fashionable this fall and winter. Such a collar is becoming to the average woman, the soft, white, or cream touch at the neck, making a dark costume more flattering to the complexion—and the big collar is always youthful in suggestion. The collar pictured is an especially pretty one. It is of sheer white organdie embroidered by hand with little bowknots. A frill of hemmed point d'esprit net is attached to the edge with hemstitching. A particularly dainty feature is the tie, of flesh tinted soiree silk, trimmed with tiny white beads.

GLITTERING BAUBLES FOR THE EVENING COIFFURE.

Now that evening coiffures are high, fancy pins and ornaments of various sorts are in demand, for the high hair dressing admits of decoration of this sort and a sparkling pin or comb high on the head adds a decidedly telling touch to the evening costume. Here are four new ornaments for the hair; three combs and a small barette, and all are of tortoise shell set with fiery brilliants and colored stones in very brilliant effect. The butterfly comb has brilliants and garnets. The barette is a combination of brilliants and jet; the comb at the lowed right hand corner is all brilliants.

PRACTICAL SCHOOL FROCK.

Back to school she hurries once again, in her practical little fall frock, which, though partially woolen, will stand a tubbing just the same. It is an unpretentious bit of a model in yellow-tan crash, laid in wide pleats beneath the belt banded in harmonizing brown. Suspenders, crossing the shoulders, hold the little skirt in place, and with it she wears a dainty blouse in écru handkerchief linen, the cuffs and wide collar finished with narrow ruffles, and buttoned with tan bone buttons matching the skirt in shade. She has another frock exactly like it developed in navy serge with scarlet banding about the belt and scarlet buttons fastening the ecru colored blouse, which has the advantage of staying clean longer than the regulation blouse of white.

Nature's Moth Ball.

If some botanical wizard could effect a "cross" between this wild flower of the fields and some of the agricultural crops the farmer wouldn't need to worry about summer droughts. If the corn crop, for example, had some of this flower's power of resisting dry weather the farmer could fill his silos and corncribs with little trouble. The flower is the moth mullein.

Like its big sister, the great mullein, it prefers dry, open fields and meadows. Call it a weed if you will, call it an agricultural pest, and it will answer your epithets with stalks of pretty white blossoms. If they grew in a garden you would call them beautiful.

The thick leaves of the plant have long been used by housewives in the country to pack away with winter clothes to keep out moths. So by nature this drought loving flower is a camel; by adaptation it's a moth ball.—Philadelphia North American.

Blossoms That Bees Love.

A person who has had no experience with bees commonly makes the mistake of supposing that the roses, peonies, sweet peas, dahlias or other gaudy blossoms of his garden will furnish a quantity of honey. Their value is almost negligible, except that some of them yield a little pollen. It is to the modest white clover in the orchard or on the roadside or the weeds of pasture or wood lot or the blossoms of trees like the basswood that the bees go for the bulk of their honey. It does not pay to cultivate any plant for its value as a honey producer. The orchard is a splendid place for the apiary, where the bees can build up on the first nectar in the spring, and the blossoms have the benefit of the bees' visits. — John W. SINCE WAR BEGAN 1,475 SHIPS HAVE BEEN SUNK

Represent 3,324,719 Tons, or 6 Per Cent of World's Shipping.

The Bureau Veritas (the French Lloyd's Shipping News) has just issued the statistics of all merchant ships sunk or seized from the beginning of the war until the end of April, 1916. The losses amount to 6 per cent of the world's shipping if the total of shipping, sail and steam, is placed at 50,000,000 tons. The totals given are:

1,204 steamships ..... 3,134,790 tons
271 sailing vessels ..... 189,929 tons
Making 1,475 ships and 3,324,719 tons.
Neutrals have lost 180 ships (247,427 tons).

The losses among the entente allies have been:

			Tons.
British	543	steamships	1,422,253
	98	sailing vessels	24,346
French	45	steamships	121,612
	18	sailing vessels	26,375
Russian	15	steamships	34,255
	10	sailing vessels	9,338
Italian	18	steamships	50,372
	3	sailing vessels	2,725
Belgian	11	steamships	22,938
	1	sailing vessel	2,208
Japanese	3	steamships	9,128
Portuguese	1	steamship	623

The losses of the central powers have been:

	Ships.	Tons.
Germany	441	1,703,467
Austria	49	173,217
Turkey	36	76,851

Great Britain's loss represents 7 per cent of her total tonnage, while Germany has lost nearly 25 per cent. Many of the ships that Germany has lost have been added to the mercantile fleet of the allies, while those Germany has destroyed have become utter losses. More than 795,000 tons of German shipping have passed under other flags, thirty-three ships of 162,750 tons by sale to Americans and others by capture or seizure to the entente allies. England has thus acquired 126 steamships (490,032 tons), France eight steamships (19,095 tons), Japan four (11,306 tons), and Russia fifty-one (90,598 tons).

HITTING ABILITY COUNTS.

The American League is considered far superior to the National in hitting, but figures do not show it. True, fellows like Cobb, Jackson and Speaker stand out so prominently that their marks are taken as an indicative of the general showing of the league. The American circuit, collectively, is lower in hitting this year than at any time during its existence. Speaker, Cobb and Jackson are the greatest hitters of modern baseball. They form a class that other players cannot hope to attain. These three have an average of .350 or better, but when the next regular is considered, with a percentage of .310, the general average falls below the National. There have been great hitters in baseball, but under the revised rules, and new ones are added each year, it is more difficult to get the bigger figures. Had Cobb, Speaker and Jackson batted in the olden days, under old rules, they would have scampered around the .500 figure. Honus Wagner is the only modern National Leaguer who can be compared with this "Big Three."

HIGH COST OF LIVING.

The announcement that Manager Jim Scott, of the Tabs, is to raise the price of grandstand seats at Avon Oval may or may not be greeted with enthusiasm by local fans. But Manager Scott has been forced by necessity to take this action. It is not that the club needs funds, but some sort of distinguishing mark must be employed to relieve the unfairness that now seems to exist. One fan pays fifteen cents for a seat and his friend, who comes a little later, pays fifteen cents to stand. Of course the second gentleman should arrive on time, but let us assume that he did not. When he goes to the game on Sunday he will find a twenty-five cent seat waiting for him. For it is generally known that not all fans will pay out twenty-five cents for a seat. Not while there is standing room.

EMPLOY LOCAL TALENT.

Several managers of baseball teams in this city seem to believe that there is nothing valuable about "local" talent. When a big game is carded these managers go outside of the city for their material and it is not always that this talent proves successful. But, of course, there is no law in the land to prevent any manager securing all the outside talent he can get. Still there is one objection to so doing. If the title of champion is annexed by this "outside" combination, there can be no exultation on the part of the manager who secured the players.

PRINCETON PREPAREDNESS.

By the shores of Lake Minnewaska, in the wilds of Ulster county, miles from a railroad and other distractions of civilization, thirty-five Princeton football players reported for practice. It was the first response to the call of Speedy Rush, and the turnout, both in quality and quantity, pleased the coaches.

"The senior national A. A. U. championships can take their place with the pageant as one of the two big successful features of the 250th anniversary celebration—measuring success, of course, by the enjoyment which a large number of people secured and not by the financial returns," says the Newark Evening News in an editorial. Continuing the News says, "The crowd was the largest that has ever attended any sporting event in Newark. Fully 30,000 were there. The bike track one year had about 16,000 during a world's championship race, the Federal League opening in Harrison drew about 15,000, and there have been one or two horse racing meets which have drawn about 15,000. With the exception of the pageant, it was probably one of the largest crowds that has ever gathered for a single attraction in this city. Parades are also excepted, of course. It was an impressive sight. The grandstand was packed. Persons sat in the aisles. People overflowed from the boxes along the inside railing of the track and the hillside east of the grandstand was a solid, moving mass of faces. Around the railings outside of the half-mile racetrack was an unbroken ring of automobiles, and inside of the main inclosure was an army of officials who displayed their badges and obstructed the view of those who had paid for seats. Those who worked though, worked well, so the superfluous ones can be pardoned. From a sporting point of view the meet was a wonder. The conditions were ideal. The air was still and warm and perfectly clear. Six new records were made. Four had been smashed the preceding days. This is an astonishing performance."

FOOTBALL ELEVEN ORGANIZED BY TROOP D WILL CHALLENGE HOLY CROSS TO SERIES

Plainfielders on Border Form Strong Combination — Jack Caulfield, Holy Cross Star, Will Play Left End—"Doc" Doyle Will Be Communicated With at Once—Series Would Be Popular.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 9.—Although several of the units have purchased footballs and are chasing the pigskins around the parade ground each evening, Troop D is the first to form an eleven to take part in the inter-unit gridiron league which will be started in the near future. All of the outfits will probably enter teams on the circuit and it is expected that the officers will donate a trophy as an incentive to keen competition.

Following is the lineup of the Plainfield team: Centers, Roger Mellick and James Fleming; right guards, Staats and James; right tackles, Alpers, Walker, Ralli and Sickler; left ends, Ivins, Caulfield, Earle and Robbins; right ends, Gallagher and Hibbard; halfbacks, Van Deventer, Rowland, New Stevenson, Powers and Cady; quarterbacks, Cox and Cherry; fullbacks, Ransome and Effenger.

The above is a list of the most likely candidates and these will be given a vote in the selection of a captain in the near future and hard drilling will be the order from now on. The evenings are fairly cool, thus affording an hour or two each night for practise.

Providing the unit is mustered out before Thanksgiving the pigskin stars are planning to challenge Holy Cross to a series of games upon their return to Plainfield. The management of the Plainfield team will be communicated with immediately with a view to making him understand the importance of such an engagement as a drawing card.

League Limelight

NOTE—Short, snappy articles relative to the personality, popularity and prowess of each of the many baseball players in this city will appear in the "Sport Topics" daily. This department is conducted by the sporting editor, who welcomes suggestions.

JOE MORLEY.

It is not generally considered that the Farmer baseball team is of league caliber. But one cannot get away from the fact that there is at least one baseball player on the club's roster. Joe Morley is the gentleman to whom we have reference just now.

It is a difficult task for one to endeavor to name Joe's favorite position. He has played at second and has done considerable catching. In addition, he can pitch. Being, as he is, an all around baseball player, Joseph is invaluable to his team. It was his clever work that kept the outfit in the league and it is expected that it will be his prowess that will keep the Baptists in the running next year. It is reported that he will play with the Firsts next season.

There is a congenial air about Morley and one cannot help but admire his ways. Although always eager to fight for victory, he is cool-headed and will listen to reason. All fans agree that Joe Morley is one of the best all around baseball artists in this vicinity.

YANKEES WIN.

The New York Americans won yesterday afternoon, 9 to 7, from the Columbus American Association team in a loosely played game of ten innings. New York made fourteen hits and seven errors and Columbus (A. A.) ten hits and four errors. Love, Buckles, Cantwell and Alexander composed the Yankees' battery.

BILL DANIELS WILL HELP RED AND BLUE

P. H. S. Athlete's Return From the Border Heralded With Joy.

Williams Daniels, who departed for the border as a cook in Troop D, started for home the day before yesterday, having been released as a result of an order regarding colored cooks. Bill, undoubtedly, will return to school on October 2.

The loss of Daniels would have been felt severely by the Red and Blue football eleven and his return to the fold will be greeted with joy by Coach Ralph S. Patch. In addition to being of much service to the football squad, Daniels will be a tower of strength to the track team. He and Wilson Field are expected to put the Red and Blue track team on the map.

Leslie Kingslow, another Plainfield High School lad, will return home with Daniels. Leslie is not an athlete, but his return will be greeted with enthusiasm just the same.

JACK MARTIN MAY MANAGE FROM BENCH

At Present Jack is Trying Out Some New Talent.

Jack Martin, the local boy who is leading the Milwaukee baseball team, is now a bench manager. At least, Jack is warming the boards just at present.

It is said that Martin is experimenting with new talent and that he expects to retain the job of manager for at least one more season. Stutz is being used at second base, while Stow, a new man, has been playing in shortfield. Each of these two lads has been doing well and Manager Martin hopes that he can resurrect the Brewer machine. His will be some task. And he knows it.

LOCAL ATHLETES TO ENTER COLLEGE SOON

Plainfield and North Plainfield Lads to Depart in a Few Days.

In a few days Plainfield and North Plainfield boys will be departing for the various colleges and universities. Some of the fellows have already gone.

Ralph Runyon, the former Plainfield High School vaulter, will resume his studies at Penn State, as will Craig Blair, also a former P. H. S. track man. Leroy Apgar will enter Lehigh University and will undoubtedly make a place on the baseball team. Richard Borden will enter Colgate, where it is highly probable that he will take a prominent part in elocutionary work. Jim Noonan, an athlete, will start his studies at Georgetown in a few days. Marty McDonough, of North Plainfield, will also enter Georgeton. Francis McDonough will be enrolled as a student at the Catholic University. Warren Townley expects to enter Carnegie Institute. Gerald Linke will, in all probability, begin his studies at Annapolis.

WOMEN'S "MET" GOLF TOURNEY RESUMES PLAY

Englewood and Glen Ridge won from Cranford and Hackensack respectively in the team competition under the auspices of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association yesterday. Englewood had a strong side out with Miss Georgianna M. Bishop, formerly national and metropolitan title holder, in the lead, Miss Bishop brought in 2 points and Miss Gertrude Pickhardt, playing last, added three more, so that Cranford was defeated 5 to 1. Mrs. T. Stephens made the long point for the losers.

In the match between Glen Ridge and Hackensack Mrs. E. C. Koempel and Mrs. John Sands scored for Glen Ridge and Mrs. T. H. Thomas and Mrs. C. F. Uebelacker for Hackensack. The latter club was defeated 4 to 3.

The teams representing this city and Arcola did not compete.

PRACTICAL HEALTH HINT.

Typhoid Fever.

The question: Who should be vaccinated against typhoid fever? has recently been answered by a noted physician of this country. He says all who come under the following heads should be vaccinated against typhoid, as their positions largely increase their chances for contracting it: Drummers and railroad men; all vacationists, especially campers; people who travel much; practicing physicians and nurses; all people who live in towns and small cities; people who live in the country; people who live in a town or community where typhoid is epidemic; people who eat at various hotels and restaurants; people who have no means of knowing whether their food has been free from flies and filth, and finally all people who have not big bank accounts or who have loved ones dependent on them. The doctor does not say as much, but he evidently means to include the whole world, for fear somebody will willfully be left out.

Another doctor who does not want to be responsible for any person's remaining unvaccinated and contracting typhoid fever and perhaps dying says that there are only two classes of people whom he does not advise to take the treatment—the dead and those who have already been vaccinated.

Profit by the experience of three centuries of building in America—use for all exposed surfaces

WHITE PINE

King of structural woods. It does not shrink, swell, crack, twist, warp or rot. Once in place, it "stays put" after years of exposure, even in closest-fitting mitres and in delicate mouldings and carvings.

And it takes paint perfectly.

We carry at all times a complete and carefully selected stock of White Pine and all other desirable lumber.

The safest way to buy building material is to visit our yards—see the stock before you pay for it—benefit by our personal service on the ground—and know you are getting full value for your money. Our reputation guarantees the quality of the goods.

WHY TROOPERS ARE HOMESICK

They Have Tired of Being Insulted and Robbed by Mexicans.

LONG FOR PLAINFIELD

Not Very Holy Soldier Boys, But Men Who Know That They Have Done "Their Bit," and That the Need of Sacrifice No Longer Exists.

(BY JAMES J. MacNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 8.—Has the two months' stay at the Mexican border been a profitabe one for New Jersey's National Guard and how many of the men now here would voluntarily return if worst comes to worst in the Mexican muddle? These are but two of the questions that high salaried cartoonists, imaginative story writers and irresponsible talksters have been trying to settle in Eastern offices, street corners and common gathering places. The persons trying to solve the issues are the ones who would be the last to cut loose from the apron strings of civil life to serve their country in a crisis that this gave every indication of being. If the cartoonist who sketches the cry-baby soldier boy pleading to be allowed to go back to Mother Jersey or the novelist who ridicules the hardships of a two months' sojourn on the sun baked sands of Arizona only had the opportunity to gather from a day's acquaintanceship with the genuine conditions existing hereabouts, how quickly would their views be changed.

Douglas isn't the Hades it has been pictured by some disgruntled war correspondents, but the surroundings of the soldier element here are just about as far from the ideal class as New Jersey is from Arizona. The Jerseymen have camped, not soldiered, here for two months. They were sent here to settle the Mexican trouble, but the nearest they have gotten to settling any trouble has been to pull the city of Douglas from the depths of bankruptcy to a high financial status. Now they want to go home and Uncle Sam is keeping them in suspense for some reason that is not apparent. Every time the subject of departure is broached in this city it gives rise to a wildcat scare or some similar cry designed to give the government to understand that Douglas feels safer with the border guarded and, incidentally, enjoys figuring on how to give as little as possible for the private's fifty cents a day government wage. There are certain necessities of life which the soldiers must purchase in Douglas, and the merchants here have seen to it that the prices on these articles are fixed in accordance with their importance.

There are some red blooded Americans living as citizens of this Western frontier city through force of circumstances, and these tell us that there are just as many Mexicans in Douglas and Pirtleville, where the New Jersey troops are actually located, as there are in towns of this size across the international boundary. The soldiers are sick and tired of being insulted, jostled and imposed upon by the ill-kept greasers as "spics," as they are known commonly to the white men of this section. The town is fairly infested with the grim coated unshaved Mexicans and they pass up no opportunity to show their hatred of the United States soldier. They are all of the low, ignorant and treacherous class, for there is no middle or higher grade of Mexican living in these parts.

Only last night a group of Mexicans staged a demonstration on the main street of the town here which might have resulted seriously but for the intervention of the military police who are called upon to patrol the entire city twenty-four hours a day. A regular army sergeant was insulted by a sneering, drunken greaser who pointed his finger in a menacing fashion between his eyes. The soldier calmly accepted this slur, well knowing that he would be arrested if he did what he wanted to, but when the Mexican wandered out into the middle of the street and continued his abuse it proved to much for even a soldier. The khaki clad youth rushed at the "spic" and as he did so the half breed reached for his hip pocket, fifty or more Mexicans at the same time swooping down upon the American. The police brought their clubs into play and had soon dispersed the mob, but only after the army sergeant had been in severe danger of losing his life. This is a typical example of the feeling that exists and exhibitions of this nature are common. Scores of Mexicans who hang around the street corners are always ready to come to the rescue of a fellow countryman, providing the attacking force does not appear too formidable. As a race they are cowards and will try nothing unless they are sure of victory.

Many of the stores in Douglas are maintained by Mexicans and nearly every business enterprise in Pirtleville is controlled by this foreign element. The soldier is welcome in their place as long as his money holds out, but after that he is soon made to feel that his presence is no longer desired.

The country resembles in many respects the Mexican nation. The ANNIVERSARY MASS FOR FATHER MILLER

The Rev. Peter J. Hart, pastor of St. Joseph's church, was the celebrant at the anniversary memorial mass for the late Rev. William H. Miller, held in the borough edifice this morning at 9 o'clock, while the Rev. John Baldwin, chaplain of Mt. St. Mary College, was deacon, and Rev. Thomas Campbell, the subdeacon. The church was filled with parishioners of St. Joseph's as well as many friends of the deceased priest. During the service Mrs. H. G. De Meza presided at the organ, while Mrs. Alfred Seidel, the contralto soloist of the church, sang several selections.

Father Miller died on September 14, 1914, after a lingering illness, borne with remarkable fortitude until the end. He was beloved by all who knew him and was held in the highest esteem by his borough neighbors. Two years before his death the twenty-fifth anniversary of his ordination to the priesthood was observed by a public demonstration arranged by his friends in the Park Club. The present handsome church in North Plainfield is a monument to his effort and it is said that his overzealous ardor in doing good was responsible in no small measure for his breakdown in health.

LOCAL MAN INJURED IN NEW YORK STRIKER'S RIOT

Police Chief Patrick Kiely received a telegram last night from Inspector Faurot, of the New York department, stating that Ditson W. Fairman, of Park and Shrager avenues, this city, had been injured in the disturbances in New York incidental to the strike disturbances. Fairman was taken to the Knickerbocker Hospital for treatment.

When he was able to return to his home after midnight, Fairman said he was a passenger on a car that was attacked by strikers who were trying to get at the motorman and conductor. A general fight resulted in which he was shoved from the car to the roadway.

GEORGE J. F. SKILLMAN WEDS MISS CORNELIUS

The marriage of George J. F. Skillman, signal electrician for the New Jersey Central at Somerville, and Miss Lottie M. Cornelius, of Pen-Argyl, Pa., took place in the parsonage of St. John's church, Somerville, Tuesday night at 9 o'clock. The ceremony was performed by the pastor, Rev. Clarence Sylvester, in the presence of the immediate relatives of the couple. The ceremony was witnessed by Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Derr, of Somerville. Mr. Skillman is the son of Mrs. E. Z. Stalter, of Somerville, and popular with the younger set of that vicinity. He and his bride will make their home there.

PLAN FORMATION OF PHYSICAL CULTURE CLASS

A regular meeting of Abraham Lincoln Chapter, No. 122, I. C. SC. Fraternity of the World, will be held this evening in the "Frat" rooms in the Frost building. At this meeting George A. Keene will be present, and final arrangements will be made relative to forming a class to take up the study of physical development and health culture. All members are urged to be present. The initiation team will also work the degree on candidates tonight.

GREAT QUEBEC BRIDGE OVER ST. LAWRENCE AND CENTRAL SPAN WHICH FELL

The completed anchor and cantilever spans of the immense $17,000,000 bridge are shown in the photograph at the top. Below is the central span which was being hoisted to its place when it fell into the river. Bridge builders over the country are beginning to believe that the bridge is a "hodoo" job. This is the second serious accident. Some of the greatest engineers and scientists in the world have studied the Quebec bridge plans and pronounced them O. K., yet the casualty accidents occur.

ANNOUNCEMENT OF BELATED WEDDING

Miss Susan Stewart and Jacob Kiefer Were Married July 5 in New York.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Susan M. Stewart, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Stewart, Jr., of 37 Summit avenue, north Plainfield and Jacob Kiefer, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Chicago. The ceremony was performed at the Church of the Transfiguration New York city, on Monday, July 5, the Rev. Dr. George Houghton, the pastor, officiating.

After the wedding Mr. Kiefer returned to Chicago where he is employed by the Edison Company, and the bride came home. She plans to join her husband about October 1. Mrs. Kiefer has been in charge of Dr. Harold D. Corbusier's office during the latter's absence at Douglas, Ariz., with the First Field Hospital Corps.

SILVER LOVING CUP FOR MRS. FIELDER

Governor and Wife Given Farewell Surprise at "Little White House."

(By Staff Correspondent.)

Sea Girt, Sept. 1.—Governor and Mrs. James F. Fielder were given a farewell surprise party at the Governor's Cottage here last night by about thirty of their friends who have summer homes at Spring Lake. During the evening they went to Spring Lake to dine with Major Gray, of General Hine's staff, and Mrs. Gray at the Essex and Sussex Hotel, and upon their return they found that the cottage had been invaded by the Spring Lake party, who had turned the rugs up and prepared the house for dancing, and brought musicians along with them.

During the evening Mrs. Fielder was given a large silver loving cup inscribed "To Mrs. James F. Fielder from her friends at Spring Lake 1913-1916." The Fielders plan to close the house here on Friday. Among those in the party last night were former Governor and Mrs. J. Franklin Fort, Miss Margretta Fort, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Heilner, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Roebling, Jr., Dr. and Mrs. James B. Clemons, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Maloney, Mr. and Mrs. L. Carbery Ritchie, Judge and Mrs. Huston Dixon, E. E. Hinkle, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Welsh Rogers, Miss Martin and Mr. and Mrs. Leslie R. Fort.

MASTER BUILDERS TO HOLD BANQUET HERE IN OCTOBER

Howard Woolston attended a meeting of the State Executive Board of Master Builders at Newark last night as a representative of the local organization, at which only routine business was transacted. The next meeting of the board will be held in this city Wednesday, October 18, when the members of the local Master Builders' Association will join with them and have a banquet. Mr. Woolston is in charge of arrangements and will appoint a committee to complete plans for the affair.

PURCHASES BORO RESIDENCE.

Herbert E. Langford, of Compton avenue, this city, has purchased the residence of C. Everett Murray, located on Myrtle avenue, in the borough. Mr. Langford will take possession of the property on October 1.

STRIKERS WILL PARADE TODAY

Upon Showing Depends Call for a General Sympathetic Walkout

MEETING WILL FOLLOW

Gompers and Others to Give Advice—Ten Injured When Five Cars Pile up at Foot of Hill—Say Tracks Were Greased.

New York, Sept. 14.—Ten were painfully injured, five of them women when five cars handled by strike breakers raced down a steep grade on Westchester avenue, the Bronx, this morning, piling up in a heap at the bottom of the hill. The strike breakers say that the tracks were greased and that brakes refused to work. No one was seriously injured.

This afternoon the strikers and their sympathizers will parade New York streets, and how long the strike is to continue depends upon the showing made then. If they present a formidable appearance it is expected that all union workers of all classes in the city will be called out on sympathetic strikes to aid the cause. Not only the strikers but all who are in sympathy with their cause are invited into the parade.

Following the parade a mass meeting will be held in Union Square. It will be addressed by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; James P. Holland, Hugh Frayne, William B. Fitzgerald and others. They have decided to urge a general strike if the parade seems to justify such action.

There was marked improvement in the service on all lines of transportation affected by the strike today. Between 7 o'clock and 9 o'clock the subway lines operated 111 trains as against 116 trains sent out yesterday. Today's express trains were nearly all of the regulation ten-car length and the local trains were also lengthened so that the number of cars operated was the same. The trains on the "L" were also lengthened.

FUNERAL SERVICE OF J. V. BEEKMAN HELD

Rev. Howard E. Clarke Officiates at Late Residence—Burial in Greenwood.

The funeral of John V. Beekman, whose death occurred on Monday, was held at 11:30 o'clock this morning at the late home, West Eighth street and Arlington avenue, and was largely attended by relatives and friends. Rev. Howard E. Clarke, pastor of the Congregational church, of which Mr. Beekman was an attendant, officiated and made an address of eulogy. The burial will take place this afternoon in Greenwood cemetery, Brooklyn.

Mr. Beekman had been a resident of Plainfield for many years. He was the head of the Lidgerwood Manufacturing Company, of Brooklyn, makers of hoisting engines and boilers, which business he founded. He was also the inventor of many useful appliances. Mr. Beekman was a lover of outdoor sports, especially golf which game he played frequently. He leaves a wife, five sons and a sister.

SMALL FIRE.

The fire department was called out shortly after 7 o'clock last night to extinguish a small fire in a rabbit coop on the premises of Arthur McVoy, of 812 West Fourth street. The damage was slight, the blaze being put out with chemicals.

JOSEPH EHRHARDT DIES IN HIS 42D YEAR

Joseph Ehrhardt, aged 42 years, of "Pinebrook," Green Village, near Bernardsville, died at Muhlenberg Hospital last night, where he had been under treatment since August 11. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at 9:45 o'clock at the home of his brotner, Fred Ehrhardt, 65 Manning avenue, North Plainfield, and at 10 o'clock at St. Joseph's church, where a solemn mass of requiem will be said by Father P. J. Hart. The burial will be in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mr. Ehrhardt was engaged in the automobile business at Bernardsville, where he was well-known. Beside his brother living in the borough, there survives two sisters, Mrs. J. F. Donnelly, of Fanwood, and Miss Mamie Brenner, of the borough; also two nieces, the Misses Dorothy and Margaret Donnelly.

"MAYOR BILL" IMPOSES $5 FINE ON AUTO SPEEDER

Amille Carrarra, of Watchung, was arrested by Chief Marshal George Weiss, of North Plainfield, for speeding along Somerset street in his automobile yesterday afternoon. Those who saw Carrarra "glide by" say that he went "like a blue streak." When arraigned before Mayor William I. Smalley in the borough court this morning, Carrarra was fined five dollars, which he paid.

PICTURES OF ELKS PARADE WILL BE SHOWN HERE

Pictures of the Elks' parade in Newark Thursday muesday morning, on the occasion of the third annual State reunion of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, will be shown at Proctor's Theatre tomorrow and Saturday afternoon and night in conjunction with the regular program of feature films. The picture was taken by Henry J. Bryntarski, the Proctor camera man and in a large part shows views of the Plainfield "Bills" as well as the Elizabeth Lodge. The float with which Plainfield Lodge won second prize will also be seen in the picture.

WILL INSPECT SEWER PLANT THIS AFTERNOON

President Francis J. Blatz, Councilman Hylan and other members of the Joint Sewer Commission, accompanied by an engineer, will this afternoon inspect the dispocal plant now being erected near Dunellen. The inspection is for the purpose of making a report on progress of the work at the next meeting of the commission.

WATERMELON FEAST.

The Probasco Bible Class of the First Baptist church will hold a strawride and watermelon feast Saturday. Auto trucks will leave the church at 4:15 p. m. sharp. All members are invited to come and bring a lady friend. The committee in charge of the outing have kept the destination a secret and have prepared an elaborate program of entertainment.

FIRST FALL MEETING.

The Men's Association of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church will hold the first fall meeting tomorrow night at 8:15. All members are requested to be present as several important matters are to be transacted.

VISITING IN THE WEST.

Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Ackerman, of West Eighth street, are visiting various points in Colorado and other Western States. They are expected in Plainfield the latter part of this month.

FLOWER AND FRUIT GUILD TO CELEBRATE

Second Anniversary of Organization Planned for Friday Evening, Sept. 29.

The Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, of this city, will celebrate its second anniversary on Friday evening, September 29, in the First Baptist church. The guild was organized on April 2, 1914, by Joseph M. Harper, and it was his desire to celebrate its birthday on that day this year, but the Biederwolf evangelistic campaign being held at that time, it was decided to postpone the event until after the summer season.

Interesting speakers have been secured for the evening, among whom are Mrs. John Wood Sewart, organizer and president of the National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild and president of the Needlework Guild, and Albert R. Lawton, a worker in the "Help-My-Pal" Society of the Twentieth Street Friends' Meeting, New York city. That they will have some very valuable ideas to present to those who are interested in the splendid work in this city, is assured.

The Guild orchestra, under the efficient direction of Mrs. John C. Evans, and a quartette, will render several selections.

It is requested that those who have the Biederwolf song books bring them to that meeting.

A birthday offering will be taken up, and as the guild is supported almost entirely by donations, it is hoped that the treasury will be placed in such condition that the work of spreading sunshine and good cheer to our "shut-ins" may be attended to greater proportions.

FRANK REPP HAS PARALYSIS, MAKING THE 37TH CASE

Frank Repp, the seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Repp, of 939 Park avenue, was reported today to the Board of Health as having infantile paralysis. The case is taking the ordinary course and is not reported as being serious. The boy is quarantined at his home.

Today's case made the fourth that has appeared in Plainfield so far this week, all in different parts of the city, and the thirty-seventh since the disease first made its appearance. There are now eighteen houses quarantined for paralysis and three cases in the hospital. There have been eight deaths and eight recoveries.

BRANCH OF WOODMEN OF THE WORLD BEING ORGANIZED

James P. Cunningham, of Dunellen, is organizing a local camp of the Woodmen of the World. Mr. Cunningham has already started a flourishing organization in his home town, fifty nine members having been enrolled.

The Woodmen of the World is an organization with home offices in Omaha, Nebraska, and twenty-seven years old. With resources of twenty-nine million, it is considered a very flourishing order and many Plainfielders are interested in Mr. Cunningham's effort to start a branch here. There is also a Women's Circle attached to the lodge, but, as yet, no definite steps to organize a circle in this vicinity have been taken.

MAXWELL E. PERKINS TO BE USHER AT A WEDDING

Maxwell E. Perkins, of this city, will be one of the ushers at the marriage of Miss Emily Saunders, of Philadelphia, and C. C. Perkins, of New York, to be performed tomorrow afternoon in St. Asaph's Episcopal church, Bala, Pa. Miss Saunders is the daughter of Mrs. W. B. Saunders, of Overlook, Pa. A dinner for the bridal party will be given this evening at the Merion Cricket Club, Philadelphia.

BULGARS DRIVE BACK BRITISH

Allied Offensive in Macedonia Receives Severe Setback.

LONDON ADMITS LOSS

Fierce Attacks of Germans Are Repulsed by French—Friend of England to Move Complete New Greek Cabinet.

Berlin, Sept. 14.—The new Allied offensive in Macedonia has been completely halted, according to Sofia dispatches today.

Large British forces that attempted to advance in the region of Seres were repulsed, suffering heavy losses. The British were forced to relinquish ground temporarily occupied and are now in retreat.

Repeated attacks by French and Italian troops have been easily repulsed. The Serbs on the Bulgarian right wing, after a few temporary successes, have been pushed back to their former positions, being unable to withstand Bulgarian counter attacks.

German Defense Collapses.

London, Sept. 14.—Desperate French drives have carried the army of General Foch north of the Somme more than half a mile beyond the Rappaume-Peronne road, which supplies the German front in the Rove sector, according to the latest official war report.

This means that the whole system of German third line defense between Combles and Peronne has collapsed.

Pro-Ally to Be Premier.

London, Sept. 14.—London today was greatly cheered by the announcement from Athens that M. Demitracopulos, minister of justice in the Cabinet of Eleutherios Venizelos, the allies' staunchest supporter, has been asked by King Constantine to form a Cabinet, following acceptance of the resignation of Premier Zaimis.

Demitracopulos, who has tentatively accepted, openly expressed the opinion that when Roumania entered the war, it was time for Greece to abandon her neutrality.

It is said Demitracopulos' final acceptance rests upon the attitude of the allied ministers, to whome he is to explain his policy. It is believed here that should he take the office after this conference it will be because he has told the ministers Greece is ready to fight; otherwise, they might place serious obstacles in his path.

German Attacks Fail.

Paris, Sept. 14.—German troops launched a counter offensive on the Somme front late yesterday but it resulted in failure, the War Office announced today. The Teuton attacks were made on both sides of the Somme River. That to the north being against hill No. 76, while to the South the Germans assailed the positions recently taken by the French. The communique reports the repulse of the attacks, the same fate meeting two German attacks on the Vaux.

MITCHEL IN COUNTY JAIL AWAITING VICTIM'S RECOVERY

Held for a hearing until September 22 to give the authorities a chance to await the outcome of his victim's injuries, Edward Mitchel, colored, was unable to secure a bondsman to go his $500 bail and he was taken to Elizabeth last night to be held until time for the hearing. Mitchel was held under bail by Judge DeMeza yesterday morning on a charge of brutally beating Arthur Thompkins, an aged negro, last Saturday night.

At Muhlenberg Hospital this afternoon it was said that Thompkins' condition is about the same and his recovery is still doubtful. His seventy odd years together with lack of proper nourishment, he being a recluse and living poorly, will count against his recovery, and if he does not his assailant will be held for murder.

ANOTHER BOY MISSING.

Mrs. Fenner, of 415 East Seventh street, reported to the police last night that her son, aged ten, light complexion, checkered coat and low tan shoes, had been missing from home since morning. He had borrowed a wheel from a boy in the neighborhood and disappeared.

HURT AT SPICER'S.

Hugh McCessery, of Lehigh avenue, South Plainfield, was taken to Muhlenberg Hospital this morning, suffering from injuries about the head sustained while working at Spicer's. The complete extent of his injuries is not yet known, but it is said his eyes are affected.

SCOTCH PLAINS AND FANWOOD

CHARLES SHEELEN TO QUIT AS FIRE CHIEF

Other Public Offices and Pressure of Business Given as Reason.

Charles Sheelen is going to resign as chief of the Fanwood Volunteer Fire Company. The burdens of Tax Collector and Borough Recorder are becoming heavier with the growth of Fanwood and together with his personal business he finds it impossible to take care of the duties of fire chief.

Fanwood hasn't had a fire since three years ago next March. January 1 is the date set for his resignation, he says, but taking hope from the fact that he has threatened to resign as recorder for the past decade, members of the fire company have not yet given up hope of retaining him. He has been head of the volunteer organization ever since it was formed back in 1895, when the borough separated from the township.

LITTLE INTEREST IN BOARD OF HEALTH MASS MEETING

But little interest was manifested in the meeting of Fanwood residents called by the Board of Health that was held in the Fanwood firehouse last night, there being only fifteen or twenty men present. Determined to try and stop the local sewer and cesspoll nuisances, the Board had prepared a list of residents that are offenders. They, however, do not know how to remedy the trouble and the meeting was called to discuss the matter.

Wright Babcock, A. D. Beeken and Mayor William H. Hoar spoke at the meeting, presided over by Ronald Riblet, secretary of the Board of Health. It was generally agreed that although the prevent system of cesspools was not feasible nothing else could be done until the installation of the sewer, which will be at no certain time, Mr. Riblet announced that the Board of Health would help all those having trouble with the present system of disposal to install the best kind of cesspoll possible in order to make things more sanitary.

HEARING TONIGHT.

Stephen Ferina, of La Grande avenue, will be given a hearing tonight at 7 o'clock before Recorder Sheelen. A dog belonging to Ferina badly bit Michael Russi, an eight-year-old Italian, of Terrill road, Tuesday, and Ferina will have to answer a complaint of harboring a vicious dog.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

Miss Emily Garda, of North avenue, has accepted a position for the coming year to teach at Hasbrouck Heights. She has received notice from the Board of Education at that place to report for duty on September 19. Miss Viola Garda will report at Plainfield, where she teaches in the Washington School, on September 25.

Work on the eight-room addition to School No. 1 has progressed greatly in the past week.

Elizabeth contractors have nearly completed the erection of the Earl house on Madison avenue and the dwelling will be ready for occupancy in another week or so.

New machinery has been installed in the Seeley paper mill by the new owners and the place is being rapidly rebuilt. When in operation again it will be one of the largest in the county and probably in the State.

Mrs. Emma Kent, of Greenville, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Augustus Sheelen, of North avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey O'dell and son, Harold, have returned from a month's vacation at Lebanon.

The new road connecting Front street and Second street has been named Flanders Park. The sidewalks have been completed and lots staked off.

The Plum Paper Company has a suction pump in operation that is drawing the water from the mill, so that a new concrete foundation may be laid.

BROWN OUT OF RACE, WILL NOT RUN FOR COUNCIL

In failing to file his petition with Borough Clerk McAuneny last week, Offley Brown has practically declined to run for the Council again. There is a possibility that he may circulate stickers to be pasted on the ballot at the polls, but with Luke Pandick in the field for the office it is hardly likely he will do so. Business matters have kept Mr. Brown from taking a very active part in Council affairs, and it may be that he would have been unable to accept the nomination anyway.

QUARTERLY MEETING.

The quarterly meeting of the Ladies' Circle of the Baptist church will be held at the home of the president, Mrs. Laura Bornman, this afternoon. Plans for the fair to be held this winter will be discussed.

TRANSPORTATION FOR LOCAL PUPILS

TEACHERS' CONVENTION

With the tentative date for the opening of the local schools set down for October 2, Supervising Principal of Local Schools S. Dana Townsend is now busy making arrangements for the fall and winter term of the local schools. He is making plans for the transportation of local High School pupils to Plainfield or Westfield; giving a course of instruction to the teachers from now until the opening of school, and filling vacancies in the staff at School No. 1.

Unless infantile paralysis takes a sudden rise in the township and borough the schools will open on October 2, the same as those in neighboring towns will, but if any more cases develop the Board of Education, co-operating with the Board of Health, will postpone the opening til such time as it will be safe.

Starting with the coming term the transportation of local High School pupils going to either Plainfield or Westfield will be paid. In speaking of the matter last night, Mr. Townsend said that between twenty-five and thirty children will be affected, the majority being those attending Westfield. With the new item of expense included in the appropriation voted last March, Mr. Townsend figures it will cost approximately $3,000 to pay the carfare of the children to and from school. Of this amount the State will refund three-quarters, starting with next December.

In arranging the details Mr. Townsend has not followed the methods of other towns. The children living in Scotch Plains will go back and forth on the trolley, while those in Fanwood may go on the train if they wish, it being nearer. Instead of paying the children every week the Board of Education has arranged to refund the money to them twice during the school year, once in December and once in March. Those traveling on the trolley will get school tickets in books, while those riding on the train will get monthly school tickets. These will have to be saved and turned over to Mr. Townsend, who will refund money to the amount represented by them.

Because the original opening of the schools was scheduled for the present week all of the teachers have reported for duty, and from now on Mr. Townsend will be in charge of daily conferences that will occupy the entire morning. Courses for the year will be discussed and plans will be made in the hope of increasing efficiency. Next week the local teachers will attend joint meetings with the Westfield teachers to be held in the Westfield High School, when matters of mutual interest will be discussed, and Dr. Savitz, former county superintendent, and others will speak.

There will be but two changes in the teaching corps over last year, both occurring in School No. 1. Miss Helen Skellinger, of Ledgewood, has been engaged to teach the third grade in place of Miss Mildred Stiles, and Miss Lily Homan, of Brooklyn, will teach English in the sixth, seventh and eighth grades. Although it will mean the adding of at least five or six new teachers to the present staff, Mr. Townsend will make no efforts to engage any more teachers until the eight-room addition now being built on to School No. 1 is finished. With the increased size of the school and enlarged enrollment of pupils it is expected that before long courses in manual training and gymnasium work exercises, etc.) will be added to the present curriculum.

MISS HOUSTON GIVES CORN ROAST AND TOAST

The Misses Elizabeth and Margaret Houston gave a corn roast and marshmallow toast at their summer cottage. The grounds were made very attractive by Japanese lanterns. Among those present were the Misses Clark and Whitehead and Messrs. Douglas Barton, Lee Richardson, Edward Beglin and Philip Kelly, of Elizabeth; Miss Ernestine Wilson and John Detweiler, of Plainfield; the Misses Ethel Strong and Ivy Hargreaves, Messrs. William Beeken, Wright McAneney and Southard Outwater, of Fanwood. Those present from town were the Misses Elizabeth and Margaret Houston, Isabelle Daniels, Lillian Schlief, Esther Meyer, Ruth Dunn, Eleanor Walsh, Mildred Drake, Jessie Weller, Kathleen Saunders, Evelyn Buckley, Madeline Clark and Messrs. George and Thomas Houston, Robert Anson, Horace Daniels, James Walsh, Harry Paff, Robert Geer, Bradley Barrett, Christian Lewis, Edward Hatfield, Fred Saunders, George Dunn and Kenneth Drake.

LOST BOY RETURNED BY LOCAL POLICE AND PRESS REPORTER

Lost from his home in Plainfield since 8:30 in the morning, four-year old Sidney Goldberg was returned to his parents at 111 Washington street, Plainfield, last night through th efforts of Marshal Sullivan, of Scotch Plains, and a reporter for the Daily Press. The boy was found by Sullivan near the Westfield Golf Club shortly after noon. Nothing could bet gotten from him as to who he was and Sullivan took him to his home.

Learning that the marshal had found a youngster a reporter for the Daily Press went to his home and recognized the lad to be the one reported at Plainfield police headquarters in the morning as being missing from home. The boy said that someone had given him a ride on a bicycle but beyond that nothing could be learned from him. Members of the family took him home.

WOOLSTON LEADER IN PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Receiving Much Encouragement in Race for Sheriff.

L. B. Woolston, candidate for the Republican nomination for sheriff of Somerset county, is receiving much encouragement in his race and his friends are freely predicting that he will be the next holder of the office. Mr. Woolston has been a leader in business, political and school affairs in his district for years.

Mr. Woolston was married and located in North Plainfield in 1876. He took an interest right away in public affairs, and has alweays been an active worker for the Republican party. He is the father of a family of seven children, five girls and two boys. He was naturally very much interested in the schools and school work, and has never missed a school meeting, unless in case of sickness.

He took an active part in having the borough incorporated from the township. At that time the old engine company resigned and left the borough with no fire protection. With other citizens Mr. Woolston helped to organize another fire company and served seven years as fireman, and received exemption papers. He organized the Firemen's Relief Association and was president for several years, and served nine years in the Borough Council. He also served time and time again at county and State conventions.

He was president of the Board of Trade of Plainfield and North Plainfield for several years, and was president of the Master Builders' Association for six years and on retiring left them in good condition. He was also president of the Master Painters' Association for ten years.

Mr. Woolston has been one of the managers of the Plainfield Savings Bank since 1892, the last eleven years has been chairman of the investment committe. When first becoming a member there was about three hundred thousand capital; now there is about one and a half million. The bank has never made a foreclosure.

He is a Mason, member of the Chapter and Commandery, and the Shrine. Also a member of Knights of Pythias and was treasurer of same for several years. One of the charter members of the Elks of Plainfield and first treasurer of same. In 1880 he formed a partnership with J. F. Buckle and went in the painting and decorating business at 145 North avenue, and carried on a very successful business for years. At one time this firm carried on quite an extensive building business. He built up one hundred and twenty feet of property on North avenue, and a number of dwelling houses.

The victory of Carl E. Milliken, Republican, who has been elected governor of Maine, defeating the present Democratic incumbent, Governor Curtis, as well as the victory of almost the entire Republican ticket in that state, is giving rise to some interesting speculation among certain politicians as to the outcome of the presidential election in November.

These politicians are pointing out that the results of September balloting in that so called barometer state in presidential years have been a moderately good index to political sentiment in the nation. It is declared that the size of the Republican plurality in the state polling has usually indicated victory or defeat for the presidential ticket in the nation.

In this respect Maine differs somewhat from her sister state, Vermont, where the relative size of the Republican plurality in the September elections in all presidential years from 1876 to 1912, inclusive, was an unerring barometer of the political feeling throughout the country, foretelling without fail Republican or Democratic victory.

In 1876, the year of the Tilden-Hayes struggle, Maine's vote in September gave no clear sign that the national result would be close. The Republican candidate for governor received 75,867 and the Democratic candidate 60,423, a fairly normal outcome.

Democrats Won In 1880.

Four years later Maine was just reaching the end of a strong belief in the Greenback cause, and the Democratic-Greenback candidate for governor defeated the Republican candidate by 160 votes. The result caused a flurry in Republican circles, but Garfield triumphed in November without much difficulty.

Similarly in 1884 the Pine Tree State was little affected by the Mugwump ground swell which cost the Republican ticket so many votes in New York and Massachusetts and enabled the Democrats to elect Cleveland. The Republican candidate for governor that year had a plurality of 19,815.

In 1888, when Harrison defeated Cleveland, the Republican Maine state ticket had 18,056 plurality in September.

In the following presidential year, when Cleveland "came back" and won a remarkable victory, the Republicans of Maine had but 12,482 lead in the state election, a loss which was interpreted as a sign of the defeat that was to come.

In 1896 and 1900, when Bryan was the Democratic nominee for president, Maine recorded in September results which were plain forecasts of the outcome in the national polling.

Republican Vote High In 1904.

In the Roosevelt-Parker contest of 1904 the Republican vote kept high, and the G. O. P. elected its governor by a plurality of 25,800.

In 1908, when Taft contested the presidency with Bryan, the Democratic vote for governor was 66,075. The Republican candidate had 73,728. Two months later Taft swept the country.

When 1912 came, with its split of the Republican party in the nation, Maine leaders of the Progressive and regular factions declared a truce for the state elections, and their joint candidate won by a plurality of 9,393. The Republican total was 70,298 and the Democratic 60,905.

Two years later (1914) the Progressives and the regulars were not able to agree and ran separate state tickets. The result was that Curtis, the Democratic candidate for governor, was elected. The complete vote in that election was as follows: Curtis, Democrat, 62,039; Haines, Republican, 58,862; Gardner, Progressive, 18,225; Morse, Socialist, 1,872; Shepherd, Prohibitionist, 594. The plurality for Curtis, the present incumbent, was therefore 3,177.

The crucial question of the contest just held in Maine, it is declared, was the action of the 18,225 men who voted the Progressive state ticket two years ago and who evidently have returned to the Republican fold.

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

CHARGED WITH ASSAULT AND HIGHWAY ROBBERY

Joseph Hubbard, of Plainfield, Will Be Arraigned at Dunellen Tonight.

Joseph Hubbard, 23 years old, of Plainfield, is confined in the borough lockup on a charge of highway robbery and battery committed Monday night on Walter Lewis, who is a mute. The warrant for his arrest was sworn out by Edgar Shively, brother-in-law of Lewis. Hubbard was arrested by the Plainfield police in his home city. He will be arraigned before Recorder Campbell in the borough court this evening. He will be represented by Lawyer Robert Newton Crane, of Plainfield.

The alleged robbery and assault took place in Lewis' front yard about half-past eleven, when Lewis, it is said, was knocked down by a blow on the face from his assailant's fist. Lewis' vocal cords are not altogether useless and he was able to attract two young men who were on their way home. They chased the assailant, but were not able to capture him. The names of these young men are being withheld for the present by the local police.

Lewis receives his pay every two weeks from the New Jersey Central and Monday was pay-day. On the night of the previous pay-day he was assaulted in the same manner at the local station, but an officer happened to be in the vicinity and the assailant was obliged to take flight before he could relieve Lewis of his money. This experience resulted in the members of his family seeing to it that he had little money in his pocket when he left home Monday night. The amount which was taken from him has not been made public, but it is believed to have been only a few dollars.

Mrs. Abram Nelson, Mrs. J. M. Bodine and Mrs. Z. P. Osmun were entertained by the Rev. Frederick Bloom, of Woodbridge, Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Day, Mrs. Z. P. Osmun and Miss Piddington enjoyed an automobile ride to Little Silver yesterday with former Freeholder George S. Bunting.

Mrs. William H. Clum, of Lincoln avenue, has returned from a visit to Elizabeth.

Mrs. S. R. Strickland, of Second street, is spending the week in Brooklyn and Woodhaven visiting friends.

ENJOYED CANOE TRIP.

A party of six, including the Misses Olive Eckert, Edythe Stricklan and Marguerite Eckert, and the Messrs. Vernon Eckert, Carl Marx and Alton Eckert enjoyed a canoe ride on the Raritan Tuesday evening. The trip to and from the river was made by automobile.

MISS MOYNIHAN ENTERTAINS.

A meeting of the B. G. Club was held Monday evening at the home of Miss Catherine Moynihan. After the meeting the evening was spent in playing 500 and in a general social way. A dainty repast was served before the members departed for their homes.

Mrs. Margaret M. Sutphen is visiting at Far Hills.

BIG GAME TOMORROW.

Maurer Oval is being put in shape for Saturday's big game between the local ball tossers and the Royal Colored Giants. The diamond is being fixed up by Contractor John Hill and the outfield was cut this afternoon by Wesley Blaine.

EARL ISING RETURNS.

Earl Ising, who returned home Tuesday night after receiving his honorable dismissal from duty on the border, reports that all of the local troopers are in fine condition. If they all look as well as Ising, they must be fine indeed, for Ising never looked better.

Gordon Craig, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter S. Craig, celebrated his fourth birthday anniversary today.

Mrs. States R. Titsworth visited her daughter, Mrs. Artie Larmor, of Plainfield, who submitted to an operation for appendicitis in the St. Peter's Hospital at New Brunswick several days ago.

Miss Anna Fritz has taken Miss Luella Stryker's place in the local postoffice.

South Plainfield.

The parish of the Sacred Heart church will conduct its annual bazaar on September 27, 28 and 30. The committee in charge is making preparations for the affair and expect this bazaar to be the best held in former years.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McCaffrey have been entertaining their nephew, Joseph Lynch, of Elizabeth.

Miss Grace Mack, of Elizabeth, has returned to her home after enjoying a two weeks' visit with her cousin, Miss May Duffy.

Mrs. Vincent Santoro, who underwent an operation in Muhlenberg Hospital on Monday, is reported improved.

Oakley Bunn, who underwent an operation in Muhlenberg Hospital some time ago, is reported as doing as well as can be expected.

Mr. and Mrs. John Gordon and family have moved into the home which they recently purchased from the Merchants and Traders' Realty Company. The home was formerly occupied by John Montague.

BELIEVES FARMERS WILL SUPPORT TICKET

Frelinghuysen Confident That Every Republican Will Voice Opinion.

Somerville, Sept. 14 (Special).—"All this talk about the farmers not turning out at the polls on primary day is nonsense," said Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, a candidate for the nomination for United States Senator on the Republican ticket. "I am confident that the farmers throughout the State who are Republicans will turn out to a man, as there is no more patriotic lost of men than the tillers of the soil.

"The farmers of New Jersey are as intelligent and as well read as any class of people. Many of them have taken the short course in agriculture at Rutgers College, while those who have not had this opportunity have read books on agricultural matters.

"In traveling about the State I find the farmers are thoroughly familiar with the big questions of the day. They know all about merchant marine and the need of its development; they are better posted about conditions on the Mexican border than some of the city voters; and they know exactly what the result of protection to American industries will be.

"You may depend upon it the farmers will be found at the primary no matter how busy they may be on that day with their crops because they all want to see the Reepublican ticket made up of strong men, and they intend to turn out on November 7 and support it in such numbers that it will be elected by an overwhelming majority.

"I am also convinced of the patriotism and public spiritedness of the men in the shop, the men who work hard for their wages everywhere; the men who conduct large or small business enterprises; in short, I think the citizens of New Jersey will this year display their interest in the welfare of the State as never before by turning out in large numbers at the primary and later on election day."

POLITICAL NOTES.

September 14.—Meeting of Progressive State Commitee in Newark.

September 26—Primary election and second registry day.

September 30—Annual meeting and reorganization of all county committees.

October 3—State conventions of all parties to name Presidential electors.

October 24—Third and final registry day in municipalities more than 10,000 population.

October 31—Third registry day in municipalities of less than 10,000 population.

November 7—General election.

Speaking before the annual convention of the New Jersey A. O. H. in Atlantic City, United States Senator James E. Martine scored the attitude of this country on the trial of Sir Roger Casement in England, and declared that the Senate resolution, passed after days of fighting by the New Jersey solon, was only a "resolution without backbone or ribs, a mere jelly resolution." He was caustic in his arraignment of the Senate for its delay in passing a resolution and the Administration for its delay in sending the resolution so that when it reached the British authorities it was too late to be effective.

During a Meeting of the German-Irish-American Alliance in Newark Sunday, resolutions were distributed bitterly attacking President Wilson and urging his defeat at the coming election, but at the same time urging the election of Senator Martine. Martine is said to have gained the support of hundreds of Irish-Americans in the State on account of the stand on the Casement trial.

Following the lead of J. A. H. Hopkins, of Morristown, chairman of the Progressive State Committee, George T. Anderson, of Passaic county, has come out for Wilson for President. Mr. Anderson is apparently, from the statement which he has issued, a pacifist and he opposes Hughes as the "war candidate of a war party."

MISSIONARY SOCIETY MEETING.

The first fall meeting of the Missionary and Aid Society of the Watchung Avenue Presbyterian church will be held tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock in the parlors of the church. The executive meeting will be held at 2 o'clock. A full attendance of members is desired. Refreshments will be served at the close of the business meeting.

BEST MAN AT A WEDDING.

Time Was When He Used to Assist In Abducting the Bride.

Do you know why the bridegroom's attendant at the wedding is called "best man" and how he happens to be such an important factor at a society wedding? He is supposed to look after the ushers, the carriage, the wedding ring and a host of other things that the fortunate lover could not be expected to concern himself with at such a time. But there was a period in the history of the human family when the best man had other duties than these to perform. It was when there was no church ceremony and when primitive people had come to the conclusion that marriage within the tribe was not good for the race. Then it became the fashion for the young man of marriageable age to go forth in quest of a bride, the daughter of some neighboring tribe.

Perhaps the girls were not entirely unwilling to be captured, but no girl, either ancient or modern, would admit for a moment that she had wandered away from the protection of her male relatives for the actual purpose of being abducted. Even if there was no brother at hand the girl was likely to put up a game fight, and the prospective bridegroom had need of the assistance of a strong muscled friend to aid him in subduing her. There was very little to the ceremony once the girl had been taken to the home of her future lord, but the "best man" was always a honored guest in her home, especially if the marriage turned out well. In many mountainous parts of the civilized world where old customs obtain the "best man" still pretends to assist in abducting the bride.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

EATING TO LIVE.

Rules by Which Good Health May Be Gained and Retained.

Herewith I give a few general suggestions for those who desire health, writes Edward B. Warman, A. M., in the Nautilus:

No one can have health who eats too much.

No one can have health who eats too often.

No one can have health who eats too many kinds of food at the same meal.

No one can have health who eats when tired, hurried, worried, anxious or excited.

No one can have health who rises late, gulps down a hearty breakfast and then sprints for the car.

When you have eaten do not wonder if it will agree with you. When you begin to wonder trouble begins. Say goodby to it, not expecting to hear from it again. If you fear it do not eat it; if you eat it do not fear it.

Be cheerful at your meals. A sour countenance will give you a sour stomach.

Praise your wife's cooking—if you can conscientiously.

If you go home with a grouch leave it out of doors, where the dog will get it—then shoot the dog.

The majority of people do not know how to live until they are ready to die, and then they are not ready to die because they have not rightly lived.

Thespis in 536 B. C. acted his plays in a wagon. In 499 B. C., during the time of Aeschylus, creator of drama, the performances took place upon temporary wooden scaffolds, one of which, having collapsed during a representation, the Athenians were induced to build the great theater of Dionysius, calling it the Lenalon, which was the first permanent stone structure of its kind. It required 160 years to erect it. There was no scenery, but the scene was decorated so as to represent the locality in which the action was going on. Roofless was his structure, but around the building were porticoes, to which the people retreated during rainstorms. Sometimes awnings were used to ward off the sun's heat.

Card Playing.

Card playing began in India in the ninth century. It was introduced into Europe by orientals some time prior to the thirteenth century. Saracens popularized the amusement in Spain and Italy. The taste for the game afterward spread to Germany, where it commenced to be indulged in about 1275. Its appearance in France was mentioned in the records of that country in 1393. Heraldic cards were first known in England in 1660.

Genuinely Dry.

Antofagasta, a seaport of Chile, on Morena bay, a great shipper of metal ores, borax and nitrate, is obliged to pipe its drinking water several hundred miles from the Andes. The city is one of the driest spots in the world, though a deep water port. Beyond it lies the great Atacamo desert.—Argonaut.

Lucky Youth.

"Young Scadds is an absolute nincompoop. He doesn't know enough to come in when it rains."

"He doesn't need to. With all his money he can afford a new umbrella every day in the week and also a man to carry it for him."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Her Jewels.

Mrs. Subbubs—I wonder where little Willie and Davis are. Did you see anything of my jewels as you came along, Mr. Nexdore? Nexdore—Yes; I did, ma'am. Your jewels are in soak. I saw them swimming in the river.—Boston Transcript.

Those who are readiest to criticise are oftentimes the least able to appreciate.—Joubert.

WORKINGMEN'S HOME BURNS.

Detroit, Sept. 14.—Four men were killed, several seriously injured and over 100 had narrow escapes when the Workingmen's Industrial Home burned.

BEING NEUTRAL IS HARD ON SWISS

Like an Island In a Stormy Ocean Region.

SURROUNDED BY WAR.

Switzerland Depends Upon Germany For Her Coal Supply and Upon Allies For Foodstuffs—Her Manufactures Crippled and Her People Threatened With Food Shortage.

All neutral countries have learned what it is to be neutral, but Switzerland's is a notably hard case. No state has felt the unforeseen difficulties which have confronted every neutral country more than Switzerland.

An island in a stormy sea, entirely ringed around with belligerents and itself divided into German, Italian and French speaking peoples, existing largely upon manufactures for which the raw materials and fuel must come from the allies or from the central empires; dependent even for much of its food upon what it imports; a neutral bulwark covering a frontier of France, Italy, Germany and Austria; a possible way through to an unscrupulous "through breaker," Switzerland has been beset with many anxieties.

A great many of these have now waned. Nor is she likely to be forced to abandon neutrality. Yet many problems of war remain acute to her, and not the least of these is her commercial situation.

Swiss commerce and manufacture depend upon both belligerent parties. Before the war the bulk of her trade was with Germany, but this trade must not be estimated in tonnage alone, for the value of her trade with the allies was about equal to that of her German trade. From Germany she imported metals, chemical manures, seeds, salts of potash, dyes, rennet for cheesemaking, wood, sugar; from or through the allied countries she got cocoa beans, cotton, rubber, silk and raw materials of all sorts. But the essential point is that from Germany came all the coal used in Switzerland, and from the allied countries came the grain and cereals which were required to supply the deficiency of home grown food.

"Black and White Bread."

So important are these two supplies to Switzerland that they have been called the "black bread" and the "white bread" of Switzerland. When war began Switzerland had the strongest interest in keeping on good terms with both sides. Her aim was that things should go on as they had done, and, like all neutral countries, she expected to share in the industrial activity and profits caused by war demands and prices. It soon became clear, however, that things would not go on as they had done.

Germany, being short of supplies of raw material, such as cotton and rubber and of fats, set her agents to work in Swiss territory to buy all they could, whether wholesale or retail. Foodstuffs, too, were bought up greedily, and in a short space Switzerland found its industries and its people threatened with want, the former for lack of raw material, the latter from scarcity of food.

The next step came with the determination of the allies not to let raw materials which they could control go to Germany. Beginning with ordinary contraband, such as munitions and rubber, the list has grown to include cotton, fats, ores, metals, chemicals, foodstuffs, and so on. If these went to Switzerland unchecked Germany would assuredly buy them and so denude Switzerland. Switzerland would want more and Germany strip her again. Thus to check this goods were only allowed to go to Switzerland under pledge of the Societe de Surveillance, made up of manufacturers, that they were for bona fide Swiss consumption and that neither in raw nor manufactured state would they be re-exported to the central empires.

Germany Has System.

Germany, too, had set up a system similar to the S. S. S. before that body came into existence. She, too, had stipulated that her raw material should not be used to help her enemy, and she had gone further and drawn up a list of firms who worked for the allies and refused them coal. But recently she has gone further still and has tried to induce the Swiss to break the agreements of the S. S. S. and to supply her with all the goods, cotton, rubber, oils, raw materials and rare metals of which she is in need.

Such is briefly the position. Germany hopes to enforce her claim by the power of withholding coal. The allies hope to enforce their claims by withholding cereals and other products needed by Switzerland. These are certainly serious threats. Ten thousand tons a day mean 1,000 wagons; coming and going from French collieries would mean 5,000 wagons, and France is short of rolling stock. British coal is out of the question so far as prices are concerned, owing to the shortage of tonnage. German coal at Basle costs 37 francs a ton; British coal at Milan is 225 francs.

World's Largest Mirror.

The reflector, 100 inches in diameter, for the Mount Wilson observatory in California, which will be finished early next year, will be the largest mirror ever cast. It will be thirteen inches thick and will contain in one solid piece four and a half tons of glass.

Wisdom.

Wisdom may be compared to water. As water leaves the heights and gathers in the depths, so is wisdom received from on high and preserved by a lowly soul.—Talmud.

Kindness of Nature.

"Ain't nature wonderful?"

"Why?"

"She gives us all faces, but we can pick our own teeth."—Harvard Lampoon.

FARM BOY CAVALIERS NEW AND GROWING ORGANIZATION

Patriotism, Industry and Good Citizenship Are Its Aims.

The formation of a new organization, the Farm Boy Cavaliers, is being carried out all over the United States. It is for the brightening and betterment of boy life on the farms and was originated by D. D. Mayne, principal of the School of Agriculture of the University of Minnesota. A hundred students from that university are now scattered through the middle west states organizing troops of cavaliers, and it is expected that before winter a number of troops will be organized in various states.

The principles to which each boy subscribes are: Ever on the outlook to do a good turn, prepare self to render good service, to let no mean acts stain the record of his life, to obey all authority everywhere, to be loyal to country, comunity and friends; to be slow to judge and kind to all, to show courtesy to women and the aged everywhere, to protect the weak and innocent, to believe that no service is beneath him, to husband the fruits of industry, to be clean in body and mind, and to recognize God and strive to obey his laws.

Members take this pledge: "I pledge my word of honor to do my best to serve my God, my country and all persons who need my services, that I will keep myself clean in body and mind and that I will observe the principles of the Farm Boy Cavaliers." There are three degrees—the page, which is the lowest rank; the esquire and the knight. Before passing from a page to an esquire the boy must have at least $50 on deposit or in some farm stock in his own name, have earned five achievement badges and complied with other requirements. To pass to the highest degree he must have seven badges and $100 earned himself.

The achievement badges are earned by performing several different assigned tasks in crop growing, in butter-making, beekeeping, bird study, farm carpentry, cement work, in entomology, farm accounting, forestry, harness mending, meat curing, stock raising, painting, farm sanitation, plant diseases, plowing, poultry keeping, rural health matters and in many other ways and kinds of work.

The boy who passes through all those simple courses will be in a position to be an ideal farmer, man and citizen, and it is to make better farmers and citizens, as well as to interest and entertain the youth of the farm, that this order has been established. It is destined to do a great work, many believe, and troops of cavaliers are now being organized all over the country.

One or more troops in a township may be utilized in many ways. They may undertake to keep certain sections of roads clean in winter, plant trees along the roadsides, keep highways free of weeds and cut them before the seeds ripen, assemble and take part in parades and act as escorts when notables visit the place.

The Farm Boy Cavaliers as an organization is to do for the boys of the rural districts what the boy scout organizations do for the boys of the cities and larger villages. Any four farm boys, each of whom has the use of a horse for riding, may form a troop. The members will meet on horseback, elect a leader, an assistant leader, a secretary and a treasurer. They will then take the pledge of the order and sign their names to the roll, giving their postoffice addresses. That roll is to be sent to the secretary of state of the Farm Boy Cavaliers of the College of Agriculture, university farm, St. Paul, from whom blanks and detailed information may be obtained.

The general organization of the cavaliers corresponds to that of the United States government, each state organization to its own state government.

QUEEN IN SUBMARINE DIVE.

Queen Wilhelmina of Holland has enjoyed the experience of a plunge under water in a submarine.

The queen was present at the naval maneuvers at Amsterdam recently, according to the Nieuwe Van Den Dag. She viewed the ships from a submarine, which dived twice while her majesty was a passenger.

RESIGNATIONS BY OFFICERS FOR FAMILY REASONS ACCEPTED NO MORE

Neither Will War Department Permit Them to Leave Service Because of Business Considerations.

Troops Being Shifted Along Border to Camps Vacated by Those Regiments Which Have Gone Home.

HOMESICK officers who have believed that all they had to do to get back to their families was to send in their resignations received a shock when a new ruling from the war department arrived at the national guard border camps.

For officers who suggest business and family reasons for resigning a flat refusal to accept the resignations is ordered. For officers who need discipline, but who are permitted to resign instead, the discipline is suggested as the alternative to resignations. The route out of the army by resignation is expected to be closed under the new ruling.

And with the new ruling came the news that field maneuvers are to occupy the next two weeks or more, which will bring the troops to the end of the month without relief.

The movement of troops to fill up the gaps left by those who went home has already begun. The Fourteenth New York infantry, with its baggage on motor trucks, marched from Sterling ranch to Alton, and it will march from Alton fourteen miles to the abandoned camp of the Seventy-first New York infantry.

The Fourteenth will be followed by the Second, which is to fill the gap left at Pharr by the return home of the Third infantry.

Shower Baths For Troop B.

Troop B of Albany, N. Y., has moved to its new camp site. All hauling was done by motor truck, and the men were allowed to take with them the necessary articles they have accumulated in two months at McAllen.

The new site is about half a mile outside of McAllen and about a mile and a half from the former camp. It is on a side hill, and the ground is sandy. The Twenty-second New York engineers are camped nearby.

Water mains have been laid, and the men will have shower baths, one of the things they have desired most since they left Albany. Watering troughs have been built for the horses, and this will do away with a great deal of labor that was necessary in the other location. Large wooden mess shacks have been erected, and board floors for all tents have been provided. These features give the place a permanent aspect that is looked on by many as indicative of a long stay, but it is pointed out that there has not been time for the orders to be changed since the new camp was started, and the general impression is that the cavalry outfits will start homeward as soon as the infantry is well on the way. There is no official information on this score.

Private John Keough, a member of the Albany Second Field hospital company, who was given a thirty day furlough when his father died suddenly a month ago, has rejoined his command. Private Keough made application for a discharge on the ground that he was the sole support of his mother, but was refused.

Few Indiana Troops Sick.

A traveling man, unnecessarily excited, announced there was a case of yellow fever among the New York troops at Mission, twenty-three miles east of Llano Grande. It soon got about that there were cases in the Indiana soldiers' camp and that yellow fever was about to become epidemic.

There are no cases of paratyphoid among the Indiana troops. There are several cases of malaria and numerous cases of dengue fever, but no typhoid has been reported. Army surgeons say the continued rain is liable to cause much malaria, but they feel they have the troops so well protected that there is no cause for alarm.

The sanitary condition of Llano Grande camp is said by the army officers to be the best in the Rio Grande valley. While there is considerable sickness in the camp it is of a nature that would not require the attendance of a physician back home.

F. M. M. Richardson, in charge of the Y. M. C. A. army work, has been compelled to return to the north to recuperate from malaria fever. Francis B. Sayre, son-in-law of President Woodrow Wilson, who is stationed at Mercedes, is doing the work while Mr. Richardson is away. Mr. Sayre is standing the climate splendidly.

When it was definitely known that Battery B was going home the rest of the Indiana troops bucked up and said they were going home, too, but there is nothing in the orders that indicate when any more Indiana troops will get back.

One who attends all the reviews, inspections and different drills at Llano Grande certainly does not have much time for anything else. All other war features having been reviewed, General Lewis has reviewed the transportation equipment. One hundred and sixty wagons are in the camp.

Handicap Overcome.

Lack of horses and facilities for target practice comprises two detractions from the efficiency of the South Dakota and Louisiana infantry, which, with one Oklahoma regiment, constitute the militia strength of the brigade which Colonel Robert L. Bullard commands at San Benito.

The Fourth South Dakota is commanded by Colonel Boyd Wales. The regiment arrived in San Benito early in August.

After several weeks in which the men have worked almost incessantly on camp housekeeping stunts, such as ditch digging, clearing brush and construction, the regiment is now equipped with flooring for the tents, mosquito netting, transport service and horses for the officers.

Pennsylvania Troops to Stay.

It is generally understood that the Pennsylvania division, under the command of General Charles M. Clement, will be the last of the organizations of the national guard army in the Fort Bliss district to leave the border. Since the New Jersey guardsmen have started for their homes there has been much speculation among the Pennsylvania men as to when they will be recalled.

But any possibility of their immediate return was shattered when word of the new uprising in Mexico was received at the regular army headquarters at El Paso. It was reported that Pancho Villa with 1,500 men was moving in the vicinity of Santa Clara canyon and is expected to strike at some of General Pershing's outposts south of El Valle. Should the famous bandit attack an outpost of the American army there is no possibility of any of the troops stationed in the Fort Bliss district being sent home.

That these reported uprisings in Mexico have delayed an early return of the organizations of the Pennsylvania division there is no doubt. Another month of training will put the Pennsylvania guardsmen in splendid form for active service, and should it be necessary for the government to require the services of any of the organizations of the national guard army there is no doubt that a number of the Pennsylvania organizations will be chosen.

The regular schedule of instruction is being continued at Camp Stewart. A larger number of battalions from the infantry regiments have been sent to the target ranges for practice. The work of the Pennsylvania machine gun companies has been most satisfactory to the regular army officers. These men have mastered the operation of the modern machine gun, and the marksmanship is splendid.

New Jersey Troops Like Veterans.

When the First New Jersey brigade arrived at Douglas, Ariz., over a month ago the men expected to hop over the line at once for the march to Mexico City. Diplomatic negotiations which prevented war were a disappointment, but as a matter of fact the guardsmen since their arrival have been learning many things about the fighting game, ignorance of which would have been a serious handicap in dashing southward.

They are only in camp, it is true, but it is a different proposition from the ordinary state encampment of ten or fifteen days such as that held at Sea Girt. On the Jersey coast everything was cut and dried. The camp was ready for the men before they arrived—a big natural park, with no flies or mosquitoes to bother. At Douglas the men were dumped out on the desert and built a camp where the mesquite grew before. While they have not had a chance to fight a human foe, they have been kept fairly busy combating flies, heat, wind, sandstorms, floods and stomach disorders.

This experience, say army officers who saw what happened in Cuba and the Philippines, is a valuable preliminary to actual warfare—much better than sending armies of untried men to foreign soil to die of dysentery, fever and pneumonia.

The health of the guardsmen has been good, all things considered. At times the thermometer has been up to 100 and 105 in the shade. This is not excessively hot at this altitude, 3,900 feet, in a dry climate (heat prostrations are unknown in Arizona), but a number of men have made the mistake of trying to work in the sun without hats and have been overcome. Use of ice cream and soda water produces chills and stomach trouble. Consequently stringent regulations are being enforced now to prevent indulgence in these things. In some companies watermelons are barred out of camp. In others men cannot go to town without special permission.

The Sixth Ohio infantry, Colonel Lloyd W. Howard of Toledo, commanding, has arrived at El Paso.

The regiment was moved in three sections, with one battalion in each section. Traveling with the first section was the headquarters of the first brigade, with Brigadier General William V. McMaken and his staff.

Troop A and Battery A of Cleveland have also arrived at El Paso and are encamped near the Eighth Ohio infantry.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

Bargaining in Arabia.

"Give me $7 a boatload," said the Arab.

"That is too much," replied the missionary. "You only charge $6 to your fellow Arabs, and they make you wait for your money. I pay spot cash."

"Yes, but you ought to be glad to get it for seven," said the stonecutter. "You do not know how much my fellow Arabs despise me for dealing with you at all, because you are an infidel, you know."

The Arabs are all Mohammedans. The stronger a Christian a man is the more of an infidel they think him to be. Missionaries were unwelcome in that country. Only by their medical work did they get any foothold at all. There have perhaps been fewer converts there than on any other mission field. But missions have been established there less than thirty years. Sometimes several generations of missionaries live and work and die so that their successors may see the fruit of the labors of them all.—World Outlook.

THE GLADNESS OF NATURE.

The clouds are at play in the azure space,
And their shadows at play in the bright green vale;
And there they roll on the easy gale.

There's a twittter of birds in that beechen tree;
There's a smile on the fruit, and a smile on the flower,
And a laugh from the brook that runs to the sea.

On the dewy earth that smiles in his ray;
On the leaping waters and gay young isles

—William Cullen Bryant.

Vitiated Air and Ventilation.

Confined air is quickly vitiated by noxious gases and vapors. In the house there is always more or less carbon dioxide from the combustion of fires and lights, and also given off from the lungs of the inmates. This gas, although heavier than air, expands with the heat, and rises and mixes with the atmosphere. Vapors from the bodies and lungs of the inmates, and vapors from the processes of cooking and cleaning, add moisture and odors to the air.

Oxygen is a necessity of life. Taken into the lungs it comes in contact with the blood and is carried through all the tissues of the body, where it combines with the food, producing bodily warmth, and brain and muscular energy. The fires and lights require a generous supply of oxygen for perfect combustion. Pure air must be taken into the house and the vitiated air let out. Be sure to open the window at the top, to let the bad air escape. If one or two windows in a room are kept open at the top about an inch, or even less, in cold weather the air will keep comparatively pure. The kitchen, pantry, bath room, living room and sleeping rooms should be so ventilated all the time. Every morning the whole house should be thoroughly aired for a short time.—Ladies' Home Journal.

What to Have for Breakfast.

The sustaining power of oatmeal is far greater than that of meat, and this is also true of cornmeal and well cooked wheat.

In arranging a breakfast for a family consisting of adults and children it is well to have fruit, a cereal, milk and coffee. Have the milk with the cereal for the children; then follow with fruit. Have the fruit first perhaps, for the adult; the cereal to follow.

A baked apple, a bit of broiled fish with corn bread and coffee, make an exceedingly good breakfast for those who need something substantial.

Mush bread takes the place of both meat and bread, but then this is also true of cereals served with milk; they have meat value.

In the winter such dried fruits as figs, dates and prunes may be soaked over night and cooked carefully for an hour, and will, when served with a cereal, give one of the most sustaining breakfasts.

Baked bananas, baked apples, in fact any of the sub acid fruits, are best with cereals.

When you take an orange, or grapefruit, follow it with either eggs boiled, shirred, in an omelet or scrambled, and perhaps a piece of broiled bacon; or, at another time, a broiled chop, or a mince of some kind; do not allow these acid fruits with cereals; they are apt to provoke indigestion and keep one uncomfortable during the entire early part of the day, which should be one's best working hours.

How to serve cereals—It may be wise to add a word regarding the serving of cereals. Oatmeal and cornmeal are rich in fat, hence are more wholesome and less palatable when served with milk. Wheat, being deficient in fat, is more nutritious when served with cream.

It must be borne in mind that cream and milk are not identical. While they both come from the mixture, when separated from each other they are widely different. Cream contains very little nitrogen, or sugar, or mineral matter; it is simply rich in fat, while milk contains the muscle and tissue building foods, mineral and sugar.

If one is obliged to prepare a breakfast quickly the cooking of the oatmeal the day before saves a deal of time and trouble. It can be turned out at once, then, with fresh fruits and bread and butter and a cup of coffee, the breakfast is complete. Fifteen minutes will be quite sufficient time for the preparation of the whole meal.

Such a delicate breakfast food as farina is easily cooked in twenty minutes, during which time the table may be set, the coffee made and the breakfast completed. Eeven eggs may be cooked or a chop may be broiled in the same time, providing a little thought is given to the arrangement.

In the summer boiled rice makes an excellent breakfast food. If well washed the night before and allowed to remain in water over night, it will cook in ten minutes. It may be drained, and dried in the oven, while the coffee is being made. Corn breads take the place of cereals. Scald the meal the night before to save time in the morning.—Mrs. S. T. Rorer.

Overcoming Fear.

Never ridicule or laugh at the child while he is suffering frightful illusions, for this is not only cruel, but ineffective. Patience, careful guarding, time, experience, reassurance, the development of courage and self control will, in time, rule out these fears. It is best for a child to be persuaded to be brave and face them alone.

Children should never be allowed to frighten each other. They should be taught not to fear mice, worms, caterpillars, birds, bugs, and other living things. Let them think of them as little nations, tiny families, and other tender classifications. The child will grasp the meaning quicker than if he were told the naked truth about things. The word "bug" even makes an older person shudder; and who likes the name "spider?" Mrs. Ant and the Ant family" is much more appealing.

Thunder storms, lightning, heavy dark clouds, and the like should be pointed out to the child as beauty, for the laws of nature are the thoughts of God. Teach the little ones reasonable caution, and they will not show fear.

Wild, thrilling, exciting moving pictures were never meant for infants. Scenes of burglars, murderers, convicts and horrible accidents are easily focused in the young mind. Who among the readers has the aggressiveness to vote for a moving picture parlor where nothing but children's pictures shall be shown?—Child?-Welfare Magazine.

Mother and Son.

Many elements enter into their relationship. The mother's natural feeling that, as a woman, she understands her daughter better than her son, is likely to bring into the relation to the son an added solicitude. The mother's fear, also, that the temptations of the boy are quite sure to prove greater than those of the girl still further emphasizes her anxious care for the boy. Independently of the question of greater temptation, the mother can hardly help observing also that comparative failure in rearing sons is more frequent than in rearing daughters. Common society conditions make it more difficult rightly to adjust liberty and control in the boy's case; and the mother instinctively feels this difference, though she has not consciously formulated it.

Moreover, it is practically inevitable that the influence of the mother upon the children, especially in their earlier years, should be far stronger and more pervasive than that of the father, just because, in normal conditions, she is so much more constantly with them.

The mother's indignations and scorns, her compassions and sympathies, her enthusiasms and ideals, her convictions and standards, are playing in upon the life of her children with unremitting steadiness.

It is to be added that our most instinctive moral reactions—those that determine the most important and far reaching decisions of our later life, go back to the unconscious training of our earlier years. The Catholic emphasis on the prime significance of the early training is none too strong. Now it is in just these early years that the mother's influence is, or at least may be, so pervasive and all-pervading.

And over against temptation
A mother's prayers were cast
That had come by silent marches
From the lullaby land of the past.

No mother is likely to overestimate her power over the life of her son at this period. To give this up for the sake of social prestige or for anything else whatsoever, is folly unspeakable.—Delineator.

Her Appeal.

"Who is that?" he asked nervously as he heard a footstep in the hall.

"Only papa," she whispered.

He moved about uneasily.

"Don't be afraid," she murmured. "You can surely-trust papa."

"I don't know," he said doubtfully.

"Oh, Arthur," she cried, throwing her arms about his neck appealingly, "you certainly ought to! Nobody else in town will."

EGG SHOW WILL BE DEPARTMENT FEATURE

Keen Competition and Educational Interest Manifested.

This year a special effort has been put forth to make the egg show, held in connection with the exhibit of poultry at the Trenton Fair, from Sept. 25 to 29, the largest ever conducted. An increased amount of premium money has been divided for the various classes.

The classification is such that every commercial poultry raiser in New Jersey is expected to be interested in the contest. The plates of eggs offer opportunities for those who have favorite breeds to send their own particular variety. All eggs in variety classes receive regular premiums in each variety, and the entries will also be judged for sweepstakes on both brown and white eggs.

One of the features of the exhibition will be the case lot display. In this each contestant will enter one full case of eggs, or thirty dozen.

The classes have admitted of entries from all, whether large or small producer.

HURRY TRIPS BY ACTORS.

Envious persons have been known to poohpooh the actor who thinks that his life is not all cakes and ale. Many years ago we thought the limit had been reached when E. L. Davenport acted at a matinee in Philadelphia and duplicated the performance in New York the same night. Later came the sensational jump of Lawrence Barrett by special train from New York to San Francisco in less than four days and the Joseph Brook-Janauschek leap from Milwaukee to Philadelphia between Saturday midnight and Monday in time for a regular performance in the latter city.

Once Richard Mansfield's energies compassed a hurry trip between New Orleans and Chicago. On a Saturday evening he presented "Julius Caesar" in the Crescent City and on the next succeeding Monday evening he repeated the experience in Chicago. Meanwhile he had traveled a thousand miles and transported all the ponderous impediments of his well remembered production of the Shakespeare classic. This is how it was done:

A special train in ten cars was under steam in New Orleans at the close of the engagement. As soon as a scene of the play was worked off it was conveyed on trucks to the waiting special. When the curtain fell on the last act the players who appeared in it, without changing their costumes, were driven to the railway station, and the train was out of sight of New Orleans before midnight. Right of way was given for the entire distance, and relays of fresh engines were provided from division to division. Thus a new record between the gulf and Lake Michigan was made. The running time for the thousand miles was twenty-three hours.—Kansas City Journal.

FIRE PREVENTION.

How Our Enormous Annual Losses Might Be Reduced.

The average annual loss by fire in America is over half as much as the cost of building the Panama canal. This is an actual loss. Insurance, of course, restores nothing destroyed, but merely passes the hat for the benefit of the individual losers. The loss to the community is total.

But little thought has been given to the communal aspects of the economic system of fire insurance, writes Dr. Maynard M. Metcalf in the Scientific Monthly. It has been viewed chiefly from the standpoint of the individual. Insurance companies repay to individuals their actual losses, and it is simpler for the individual to gain security against loss by fire by hiring an insurance company to carry his risks than it is for him to prevent loss from fire by building fireproof buildings.

Suppose we should appropriate a quarter of a billion dollars, the amount of a single year's fire loss, to the organization and support of a bureau of fire prevention, calling to the work of this bureau the three best chemists, the three strongest physicists and the three keenest engineers in the world. How long would it be before they had found very inexpensive methods of protecting all buildings against fire, however inflammable their construction? The problem is childishly simple beside those which [illegible] ience are attacking daily a[illegible] ess.

How ab[illegible] at we have fires today! They [illegible] ong ago have become a thing of the past.

The Plumb Line In Porto Rico.

There are places where the direction of a plumb line is not vertical. Irregularities of density in the crust of the globe may produce this phenomenon. A remarkable instance in point was found in the island of Porto Rico, where the deviation from the vertical is so great that in mapping the island the northern and southern coast lines as shown in the older maps, had each to be moved inward half a mile.—Scientific American.

Raisins as Food.

As a producer of energy the raisin is a marvel. One pound of raisins in this respect, according to a doctor, is more than equal "a pound of beef, five pounds of fish, two pounds of eggs, four pounds of potatoes, two quarts of milk, half a peck of apples or a dozen bananas." And the advantage of the sugar in the raisin is that it is almost immediately digested, assimilated and transformed into energy.

NEWARK, N. J.

The Choice of a Piano Is a Serious Matter to All Earnest Folks

Particularly is this true when no member of a family is a musician; when decision to buy a piano is prompted solely by the love of music.

Love of music alone does not make a person a JUDGE of a PIANO.

That is why it is of extreme importance to buy of a house upon whose word you may rely.

The Bamberger store carries many pianos. All are GOOD pianos, but each has its own individuality. Our salesmen know not only one piano; they know ALL pianos, and will TELL YOU WHAT THEY KNOW, so that you may make your choice from actual, first-hand knowledge.

Remember, a piano is an article that endures. Upon your selection depends years of enjoyment—or their opposite.

Our prices begin at $195 for a remarkably good instrument. We have players from $395 up, and grands from $500 up. Makes are those whose names you know. Come in and hear them. TERMS AS LOW AS $6.00 A MONTH.

GEORGIA NO LONGER DESERVES SYMPATHY.

Since the disgraceful Frank case there have been many in the North who were sorry for a majority of citizens of Georgia, feeling that the fair name of the State had been blackened by the deed of a few thoughtless and brutal citizens who took the law in their own hands, but Georgia herself scorns such sympathy. But the vote for Hugh L. Dorsey for the Democratic nomination for governor the State goes on record as indorsing not only the conviction of Frank but his illegal execution as well, and what is more its voters indorse Watsonism. The election of Dorsey was an expression of the popular approval of the anti-Catholic and anti-Jewish writings of misanthrope Watson. Tom Watson, once a leading Democrat, turned Populist and when his political aspirations and twisted political ideals were shattered he shut himself up to brood o'er his defeats and pour out the bitterness of his small, shriveled soul. It was Watson who through his writings led the clamor for the blood of Frank. It was Watson who led the fight for the nomination of Dorsey. The governor-elect of Georgia, for there a Democratic nomination is equivalent to an election under any but almost impossible circumstances, ran on his record as the prosecutor of Frank and his fight to prevent the commutation of the death sentence. He says he ran on his record as a public official, but that is his record. He had done nothing before he accidentally slipped into the prosecutor's office. Georgia has a governor who stepped into office over the dead body of one of its citizens, and its governor has as his principal asset and adviser a lonely old wretch who preaches nothing but strife and sorrow. And Georgia is proud of her shame.

THE TOLL ROAD NUISANCE.

Motorists all over New Jersey who indulge in trips outside of this State, will breathe a fervent prayer that State Highway Commissioner Black, of Pennsylvania, may succeed in accomplishing the purchase of the Lancaster toll road from Philadelphia to Paoli, and add it to the State's system of free roads.

The tool road is a heritage from a bygone period, a survival that no longer accords with the progress of the twentieth century. Thousands of auto tourists will attest the inconvenience occasioned by this mild form of extortion, for the frequency with which the toll road pirates hold up a car along brief stretches of pike, makes a costly total before the traveler rolls into the freedom of uninterrupted travel.

For a State like Pennsylvania to tolerate such a system on an important part of the national highway detracts from the dignity of the commonwealth. Last year plans were laid to buy out the rights of the holding company, but the owners of the road, dazzled by the prospect of reaping a small fortune from the State, advanced the price to a prohibitive figure.

To temporize with the road owners is folly. Pennsylvania owes it to the hundreds of thousands of motorists from her own and neighboring States to end this annoying situation by paying a fair price or by instituting condemnation proceedings whereby a reasonable value can be fixed by a commission.—Elizabeth Times.

In refusing to arbitrate differences with workmen the New York railways companies have placed Mayor Mitchell and the Public Service Commission much in the same position that President Wilson and Congress faced two weeks ago. They cannot wield the power that the National authorities finally resorted to, but they can force arbitration. However, that raises the question, if force is used is it arbitration? Mayor Mitchell will have to be pretty much of a diplomat to handle the situation without permitting weeks of suffering and hardships for the people of his city.

Someone placed a stick of dynamite in the New York subway. It is not even charged that the striking motormen and conductors were responsible for this act, as they know well enough that their greatest bid for public approval is an orderly strike. If they expect sympathy in demanding a fair deal, they must deal fair with the public. The dynamite was probably placed by a half-witted miscreant who thought it would help. The strikers should ferret out the guilty party and turn him over to the police. It would be a winning stroke.

WARSHIP FIGHTING TOPS.

They Are Now Mainly Used For Sentry and Signaling Work.

Lord Nelson was killed by a musket ball fired from the crosstrees of his French antagonist. Because of this fighting tops came into existence and, being developed to keep pace with other parts of naval construction, continue to be a traditional feature of the world's navies.

A century ago, when fighting men—marines, boarding parties, gun crews—crowded the upper decks of a warship, a sharpshooter posted aloft picked off many a man. But a big battleship in action today shows not a mark to the man in the fighting top.

In the days when it still remained possible for boatloads of armed men to swarm up the sides and board a fighting ship plunging shots were dropped from the fighting top. But with great steel walls overhanging the waves and never an accommodation ladder swung out for their welcome it is impossible for uninvited guests to set foot on the modern deck.

The captain of the fighting top is usually in control of flag, semaphore and heliograph signaling, leaving the wireless to an invisible operator interned somewhere in the ship's vitals. He is the sentry against small inquisitive craft and may enforce his orders by the rattle of a light quick firer.

He has the outlook, reports and questions passing ships and has virtues as a detective against spies. His functions, however, are limited. He is not high enough placed to see the submarine creeping along a score of feet beneath the surface or to note its wake of broken water.

The fighting top is in big cruisers quite a massive affair and no longer the tiny breastwork behind which the picked riflemen of the ancients knelt. A duplicate set of range finders is usually kept there and used to check off the work of the experts in the fire control tower. There are light quick firers and machine guns, possibly also a high angle gun or two for use against air craft.—Pearson's.

Original Home of Welshmen.

Jutland was probably the original home of our Kymric ancestors, as well as (at a later period) of some so called Saxon invaders. It was peopled in classical times by the Cimbri, identified by ethnologists with the Cymry, or modern Welshmen. The Germans magnanimously declined to annex Jutland with Schleswig-Holstein. It was then considered a worthless waste of moors, sand dunes and marshes. But the industrious Danes have transformed what one English traveler styled "a forsaken wilderness" into the most prosperous pastoral countries of western Europe.—Westminster Gazette.

It Pays to Be Polite.

A young man who gave up his sleeping berth on a southern railroad to an old lady received $40,000 under her will when she died a month later, all of which leads me to the complication of the following rules:

When a fleshy old gentleman steps upon your corn while climbing into his seat at the theatre and then stands on it for a minute or two while nodding to an acquaintance in the rear of the house, do not call him an antiquated bonehead or an ivory-headed old galoot, but smile upon him graciously and offer him the other foot to step on. Make a few pleasant remarks about the weather and ask after the state of health of his family. Then go out and buy him a bouquet of violets and present it to him.

If an old lady with square spectacles, who looks as though she might have money, sticks an umbrella point in your eye, lift your hat politely and ask her if she won't have an ice cream soda.

If a gentleman in the train piles his baggage on your seat while you are in the smoker, give him a good cigar and sit on the floor.

If a man runs you down with an automobile and breaks all of your ribs and one of the lamps on his car, send him a new lamp and a bouquet of American Beauties as soon as you are out of the hospital.

There are thousands of occasions of this kind of which you may take advantage and which may pan out well. You never can tell just who is going to die and leave money or just whom they are going to leave it to.

- Proctor's Theatre -

What is announced as one of the most unusual photodramas seen in months is offered at Proctor's today when Thomas H. Ince's production, "Shell 43," will be presented with H. B. Warner and Enid Markey in the leading roles. The story was written by C. Gardner Sullivan and constitutes the initial appearance together of these two stars. "Shell 43" is a unique narrative of cunning in the European war. It concerns the adventures of a young man of mystery who possesses papers which prove him to be the correspondent of a big American newspaper, others establishing him asa German secret service agent, and still others vouching for his commission at a lieutenant in the English army. The secret of his missions is not divulged until the last tragic scene, when the veil of mystery, enshrouding his identity is lifted and he is shown in his true light. Warner, of course, has the role of this human enigma, and he contributes an ingratiating performance. His naturally stalwart physique and graceful cariage helped him materially in rendering a remarkably realistic interpretation of the difficult part. A funny creation from the Keystone studios also appears today as does Anna Little and Frank Borzage, in "The Courtin' of Calliope Clew," a drama laid in the Middle West.

The feaure attraction tomorrow is a William A. Brady production, entitled "The Rail Rider," with House Peters featured as Jim Lewis, an engine driver on the D. & O. system. This is a railroad story with an unusual plot and a good love story well worked into the thread of more thrilling narrative. The scenes are well-staged and the atmosphere is real and convincing. Edward Coxen and Lizette Thorn are also seen tomorrow in "The Key," and the latest Mutual Weekly is on the same program.

On Saturday a double feature bill will be provided, consisting of Pauline Frederick in one of her most brilliant successes, "Lydia Gilmore" and a Metro production, entitled "The Masked Rider," with popular Harold Lockwood and pretty May Allison in the title roles.

GUIDE YOUR BOY NOW.

Keep Him on the Road That Leads to the Highest Citizenship.

This is a good time to think of your boy. If you do not look after him in the right way some one will do it in the wrong way. Begin now.

Teach your boy to follow in the footsteps of his father, to respect the law, to obey his parents, to regard the rights of all men, to honor virtue, to respect womanhood and to depend upon no one but himself for his advancement.

Teach him that the Golden Rule of life will be found in the Ten Commandments. They are short. They have survived the ages. They stand today unchanged and unchallenged.

They comprise the first great written law given by God to man. Before these few commandments all man made laws fade into insignificance. Teach them to your boy. There is danger ahead if you do not.

The universal drift of mankind is toward decadence. Heredity pays its premium and also exacts its discount. The son of a good father and an affectionate mother, brought up in an atmosphere of parental regard, never will disgrace the family.

The boys of today are to be the men of tomorrow. The destinies of the American people are to be in the hands of their sons. If the boys are taught respect for the law (both human and divine), obedience to authority, manly independence and the fear of God this great nation will be a noble monument to man's capacity for self government and self control at a time when all the world is a seething cauldron of unrest, unreason and disbelief.

Teach your boy to rule, but first to rule himself.—John A. Sleicher in Leslie's Weekly.

Spanish Etiquette.

There is a curious story of how the Duke d'Aosta when king of Spain told a muleteer to whom he was talking to cover himself, the sun being hot, forgetting that by so doing he made the muleteer a grandee. AT PROCTOR'S TOMORROW.

Plainfield Theatre.

Abe Reynolds and George F. Hayes With "Merry Rounders, Plainfield Theatre, Matinee and Night, September 18th.

Those who attend the Plainfield Theatre this evening or on Friday or Saturday will enjoy one of the best programs ever arranged by a local theatrical manager. In bringing to this city the "Junior Follies of 1916" Manager Shannon has done something worthy of commendation. This act, which is a lively and interesting forty-five minute piece, played at the local house last year and was pronounced the "best ever." The same Carroll Sisters who, by their beauty and ability, made the act what it is will again be on hand and will offer an entirely new number. Comedy rules supreme in this act.

In addition to the feature number, the Anders Brothers, sensational acrobats, who are setting the pace for a large field of cheap imitators, will appear. This pair offer an act of the best calibre. Ross and White, comedians, contribute a pleasing bit to an unusually stellar program, which will certainly prove popular. "It Happened Last Night" is a sketch worth while and will prove immensely popular with lovers of wholesome comedy.

Vaudeville is not the only treat Manager Shannon has in store for his patrons. The latest Pathe News, comedies and feature plays will be shown. On Friday, pictures of the Elks' convention at Newark will be thrown on the screen. The local "Hello Bills" will undoubtedly turn out in large numbers to see themselves "in the movies."

It ought to be remembered that the Plainfield Theatre has one of the best orchestras in this vicinity. Under the able direction of Professor George Scott, renditions of all the latest musical scores are given daily. A "catchy" overture opens each performance. Good singing and dancing is enjoyed by all; and the Plainfield Theatre is just the place wherein one can seek and find this enjoyment.

"This Is the Life," is the title of the two-act revue written by George Totten Smith, in which Max Spiegel's "Merry Rounders," featuring Abe Reynolds and Geo. F. Hayes, will be seen at the Plainfield Theatre, Monday matinee and night, September 18. The opening scene is set in the millinery shop of Valeska, a milliner, to which place Jacob Rosenbloom, a Hebrew lawyer has called for the purpose of securing important legal papers. The papers are lost and the services of Seth Stubbs, a famous sleuth from up New York state, are secured to trace them. In his quest for the documents, Seth has the assistance of Rosenbloom, his son, Randolph, Augustus Wright, Valeska herself and her two chums, Betty and Lotta.

The search for the papers leads the parties into all sorts of places and at the finale of the first part they are found in mythical Tangoland, a study in black and white. A novel dance suggestion is introduced in Tangoland, showing the evolution of the dance from 1812 to the present day.

In the second act the party carried on board a ship and and open scene shows them in a saloon of the liner. Never before has there been shown to the burlesque patrons a set the like of this. It is futurist in all that the word applies and resembles Bakst in every color. The party finally returns to Valeska's home where everything ends happily.

He Did Not Dare Jump Over It.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

SOON as the children stopped romping daddy told them a bedtime story about a little boy, Heinel, who drew a ring on the ground and, with his father, stepped inside the ring so a little black dwarf could not harm them.

"The dwarf walked around and around the circle," daddy began, "but he could not find any way to get inside it. He did not dare jump over it, because he thought maybe the circle was enchanted, you see.

"At last Heinel said to the dwarf: 'Have you anything to tell us, my friend? What do you want?'

"Now, it happened that Heinel had a good friend, a fairy, who had told him what to do. This fairy could look ahead into the future and knew what good fortune was in store for Heinel.

"'Have you brought me what you promised?' the dwarf asked Heinel's father. Now, this was a very terrible question, for when Heinel was a little bit of a baby his father had promised to give the dwarf the first thing he met going home, and this happened to be the boy.

"So now the father turned pale, but said nothing. 'What do you want here?' asked Heinel again.

"'I came to talk with your father and not with you,' replied the dwarf.

"'You have cheated my father, making him promise to give me up for your gold,' said Heinel, 'and now please give him back his bond at once.'

"'Fair and softly,' said the little black dwarf. 'Right is right. I paid your father money, and he has spent it to make a big fortune. Be so good as to let me have what I paid for.'

"'You must have my consent first,' cried Heinel. 'So please step inside this ring and let us talk it over.'

"The little black man grinned and showed his teeth as if he would have been very glad long ago to get inside the ring if he could. Then at last, after a long talk, they came to terms. Heinel agreed that his father must give him up and that so far the dwarf should have his way. But, you see, the kind fairy had told Heinel what was in store for him if he followed his own way.

"And, of course, he did not choose to be given up to a rough looking little black dwarf, who seemed so very fond of having his company, when he loved his father so much and wanted nothing but to live on in happiness with him.

"So it was agreed that Heinel should be put in an open boat that lay near the enchanted ring on the seashore," daddy finished, with two kisses.

THE FORUM

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:

Dear Sir—Congratulations should be extended by thoughtful and far-seeing voters to the Plainfield Daily Press for the strong editorial of last Thursday evening, entitled "Name Colgate to Win." The statement that Colonel Austen Colgate is the strongest man that the party can put forward" is well supported by facts that cannot be questioned.

Figures show that Colonel Colgate has gained in strength as his public career has progressed. In 1907 Mr. Colgate was elected to the Assembly by a plurality of 2,663, while Edge of 7,798. Colgate was given a plurality of 12,184 in 1910 and the same the same year was given a plurality year Edge received a plurality of only 5,596. When Colonel Colgate became a candidate for the Senate, he was given a plurality of 15,375. Edge's plurality upon his election to the Senate was but 3,990. Thus the Edge vote was constantly decreasing, losing 3,805 in the time mentioned, while Colgate constantly increased in popularity gaining 12,712. These parallel figures show that Colgate is a stronger man for the nomination than his opponent.

But the numerical basis is not the only one upon which Colonel Colgate has superior claims. His wide experience in legislative affairs, his clean life, his stand for the right, his fearlessness of action, his record as a manufacturer—all stand out as arguments for his selection.

Colonel Colgate can cut down the Democratic majority in Hudson county and thus make sure the success of the national ticket in November Hudson county is the largest in the State. Essex comes next. These two with Union county contain nearly half the population of the State of New Jersey. It needs a man strong in Hudson county to deflect from the strength of H. Otto Wittpenn. Even Colonel Edge's most ardent supporters do not claim that he can attract the Democratic voters in this particular stronghold. But it is an absolute certainty that Mr. Colgate, whose great factory is situated there, can do this.

Colonel Colgate has always stood on the side of morality and order. He says: "I believe in safeguarding the lives, health and morals of men women and children in the offices, factories, shops, homes, schoolhouses and places of recreation and amusement."

His legislative record includes many bills for the protection of the young, the care of the defectives, the betterment of the conditions for the insane, the creation of a minimum wage commission, the creation of women police officers, increasing the number of probation officers. In the interests of labor he introduced the Employes' Compensaition Aid Bureau bill, the bill extending the benefits of the Compensation act, increasing the compensation for injured employes and many others.

Among the bills that he introduced and advocated are—

The equal taxation measure of 1906, which brought to the treasury of the State an added income of 3,000,00; the return of the added railroad taxes in large measure to the schools; reform in the jury system; the abolishment of a reformatory for women; the limited franchise act; the creation of the mosquito commission; the creation of the office of State commissioner of charities; the repealer of the maximum tax act; legislation providing for the employers' liability for accidents; the direct primary law; child labor reform; the creation of the department of weights and measures; the creation of civil service commission; the creation of the public utility commission; the creation of the commission on railroad revaluation; the bi-monthly railroad pay bill; the bill making provisions for the comforts of women in the mercantile establishments; the widows' pension act—to aid women in keeping their homes together and in bringing up their children; the creation of the State commission for the blind; legislation for public playgrounds; the joint New York and New Jersey bridge legislation; the prison labor legislation; legislation consolidating State departments in the interest of economy and efficiency. The bill creating the State budget system;; the bill provoding for the State purchasing boards; legislation providing for the creation and upkeep of the great highways.

BE ...DING THE FALL SHOES.

By Mary Glynn.

Paris suggests that there are to be Buttons! Buttons! Buttons! on all sort of things! To fasten things and trim them, it matters little just so long as they are there. They will peek out from between the folds of an inverted pleat on this serge or mohair frock, or arrange themselves in demure but noticeable rows down the centre of the velvet street gown or meet in clusters on the lovely lacey waists. They are everywhere mostly because they are fashionable. Well, then, shoes too, mean much in the ensemble of mademoiselle, and so buttons they must have —and buttons they will have! No garish and conspicuous buttons, but rich conservative ones that will fit exactly with the glazed kid combinations used in the boots. For instance since the tops of Mademoiselle's shoes will match her costume in many instances, there is no doubt but that a bronze boot with a tan or beige top will harmonize and match beautifully with "mademoiselle's" gown of beige-colored gabardine, or that here navy mohair suits and grey chapeau will not be completed by a pair of boots with navy glazed kid vamp and button top of grey. The buttons will be invariably white or dark pearl, either of these fitting in well with any color combination.

AFTERNOON GOWNS OF SOIREE.

Transparent Hems and Cape Bitices Evident—Chiffon Combined With Silk.

By Mary Glynn.

The afternoon frock has greater scope than ever before by way of displaying a variety of styles. The gown of taffeta and soiree that as the winter comes on may be worn under a top or fur coat are particularly interesting. Though simple and straight in line they are very rich and attractive, this no doubt owing to the fact that the detail is so completely and consistently developed. Rich beading and embroidery is featured on great numbers of these garments and especially the serge and mohair frocks. Gowns of satin and soiree are more or less enhanced by lace chiffon and embroidery. An instance of this is shown in the illustration. A navy soiree silk frock is deeply bordered with matching colored chiffon. This is also introduced in the sleeves. The skirt is extremely full, though the fullness falls in straight lines. The cape collar is a particular feature of the bodice. It forms a deep "V" in front and loops in an attractive manner in back, terminating in a silk tossel.

Training a Husband

BY MRS EVA LEONARD

In Which Morris Southy Reveals His Character at Its Worst.

"I'm busy, Marian."

"I came on business, you may be sure." Marian Southy seated herself by the door of the study.

"Well!" Morris looked up with a black frown between his brows.

"Florence does not seem well this afternoon. I am worried about her." Marian's face was anxious.

"You are always worried about some one of the children when there is nothing the matter," testily replied the husband. "What seems to be the matter now?"

"She has been unable to keep anything on her stomach today and she has some fever."

"Anybody would have fever a day like this. It must be a hundred in the shade, and as you let her eat anything she wants whenever she wants it, I can't see anything strange if her stomach is disordered." Morris mopped his brow.

"You have no right to say any such thing, and I will not permit it." Marian rose with some excitement.

"I found her eating at three o'clock yesterday afternoon and——"

"She had not been able to eat any dinner and I made her a little toast in the afternoon," interrupted Marian. "You have a way of making statements about things of which you know nothing and I wish you would get over it. I have borne about all I care to of such speeches."

"I used to think you had a good disposition, but lately you have been very irritable," complained Morris.

"Have I? Perhaps like the Irish woman's skin trouble, 'I inherited it from my husband.'" There was a wry smile on Marian's face. Morris' sense of humor did not come to his rescue.

"I should think two people with irritated nerves would but double the difficulty." His face was very serious.

"Very well; it is my turn to be irritated. You have had a monopoly for about twelve years. I have developed nerves since coming to Kansas." Morris gave a contemptuous little snort.

"Will you come and look at the child?" she continued, for silence had fallen between them.

"What good will that do? I am no doctor." Morris was in one of his worst moods.

"Very well; I will call a doctor then," said Marian, her color rising.

"Better not do that till you are sure there is something the matter with her."

"I do not propose to take any risks myself, and I cannot interest you in the matter it seems." Marian turned to leave the room.

"Interest me," repeated Morris. "You talk as if I was not interested in my children."

"Morris, I am worried about the child. I am simply astonished at your attitude. Why will you not come and see what you think about her fever. I am over here so much I may not be able to tell, but——" Marian wiped the tears from her eyes.

Morris was not used to tears and the sight of them made him feel that something out of the ordinary was upon him. He rose with haste, saying:

"Certainly, I will go and see her. I did not think there was much the matter."

The little girl was lying in her crib and that she had fever there could not be doubt. Morris felt her pulse and little hot brow.

"I will go over to Dr. Ellson's and ask him to come over here. I want to know his opinion about her." Morris' ill-temper was all gone. He was all concern about the child. Marian sat down to sponge the little face with soda water to reduce the temperature.

SEPTEMBER 14 IN HISTORY.

1772—A bow and quiver were found in New Forest, England, supposed to have lain there since the time of William Rufus, who was shot by an arrow in this forest in 1100.

1812—Mexican independance from Spain proclaimed in the State of Guerrere, and a Mexican Congress formed headed by the priest patriot Morelos, leader of the insurgents.

1814—Fire set to Moscow by the Russians after the triumphal entry of Napoleon into the city, compelling him to a disastrous retreat which was the beginning of his downfall.

1913—Professor Malladrà descended to a depth of 1,200 feet in the crater of Mt. Vesuvius, and succeeded in registering a temperature of 626 F.

THE WAR—

1914—Germans driven back as far as Amiens and the Argonne. Russians reach Konigsberg in their advance into East Prussia, and defeat the Austrians at Krasnik and Tomaszow in Galicia.

1915—Pinsk, Russian Poland, occupied by the Germans. Russians checked Hindenberg's drive toward Riga and drive the Austrians further back in Galicia.

Superstitions of Royalty.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

NEXT YEAR THEY MAY DO IT.

"Fielder Jones will win no pennant this year; neither will John J. McGraw," says the Newark News. "But, coming down to rock bottom facts, there you have the pilots of the two strongest clubs in the big leagues today. And what a pity they failed to find their bearings sooner! What a wonderful world series that would be! The Giants vs. the Browns—the premier baseball towns of the country represented.

"Fresh from their four straight victories over the Phillies, the Giants command the respect of the entire circuit. The clean sweep was not the result of a reversal in form. It was the vicious initial onslaught for prestige by a reorganized team—an aggregation of individual stars, a collection possibly unprecedented in baseball history. Zimmerman, Herzog, Robertson, Burns, Kauff, Fletcher—they are all of the first water. With Zimmerman and Herzog in his battle array three months ago, McGraw would have probably made a runaway of the race.

"In all probability, both the Giants and Browns will finish in the first division. Their late 1916 performances ought to give them a lot of prestige in the 1917 race and confidence in the early days of the fights. The best of figures sometimes go wrong, but we know of no more justly entitled favorites for the 1917 money than the Browns and the Giants."

"ON THE BANKS OF OLD RARITAN."

Without Bob Elliott, last season's halfback, and Hinch, the Penn Charter dreadnought, there were just thirty-eight candidates on hand at the resumption of Rutgers' football practice the other day. Hinch has been troubled with an ingrown toe nail, and has been given a few days off. The squad is the largest that ever reported at Rutgers several weeks before the opening of the college, and it is a formidable bunch of young men, who compare favorably with those of the large institutions.

The practice was on a field near the Landing Bridge, situated between the Raritan River and the river road. This field has been put into good shape, with goal posts and tackling dummy erected. It is likely that all practice sessions from now on will be conducted on this field. The Neilson Field gridiron is not to be used for practice any more, at least not until well into the season. One side of the improvised gridiron was lined with autoists who watched the practice. The work was elementary, considerable time being spent in teaching the new men how to properly fall on the ball.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL.

At the present time, it appears that there will be a short football season at Plainfield High School. At least no early start in the line of practice will be had and one is safe in predicting that at least two of the games will be called off. The contest carded for September 30 will not be played. The battle scheduled for the sixth of October may not be staged. In fact, it is highly probable that the season will be opened with a morning game at Westfield. Captain Dick Pennock says he hopes to have a good eleven and believes that the candidates should practice at home. Might be a good idea, boys, to toss the pianos around a little. Or, perhaps, a little carpet beating—all of which is an indoor sport—might suffice. Get busy, ye candidates, and surprise Coach Ralph Patch.

OFF TO COLLEGE.

Many of Plainfield's younger citizens are departing for their respective colleges. Most of these lads are going off for the first time and need advice. As advice is the easiest thing to get, we do not feel as if we ought to start "in preaching." But the boys should remember that what they do, good or bad, will be made known to their friends at home and will reflect on them. Therefore, it is only right and just that Plainfield's boys should be upright in every undertaking, so that the Queen City and her citizens will enjoy the privileges of the good name to which she is entitled. And, we believe, Plainfield boys will make good. So long, fellows.

HAS CHASE AWOKE?

"Hal Chase, once the bad boy of the American League and more recently a Federal Leaguer, is leading the National League in batting, although a member of the tail-end Cincinnati aggregation. What does this mean? Has Hal decided to play up to his ability? Are the hurlers in the National easier than those in the American? These and other similar questions are being asked by the fans. Whatever the reason, Hal is now showing the way with a mark of .324, with Jake Daubert tied for second place with "young" Hans Wagner, eleven points behind."—Newark News.

CLIFF RANDOLPH MAY—

"Cliff Randolph May Hurl," is a favorite phrase of ours and of the fans. We, like the fans, have been led to hope that Cliff will pitch on Sunday. But, unfortunately, we do not know exactly whether or not Clifford can be induced to tackle the proposition. There is every advantage in hiring him. Manager Scott, of the Tabs, would then have a local pitcher, whose ability is well known. Yes, sir, we want Cliff on the mound. And the fans want him. Now, Mr. Scott, what are you going to do about it?

"TUNE" KLINE MAY PITCH FOR ROYALS

Report Has it That Plainfielder Will Hurl at Dunellen.

There is a report in circulation about town to the effect that "Tune" Kline will do the pitching for the Royal Giants when they take on the Dunellen outfit on Maurer Oval Saturday.

This game will be the third of a three-game series and will, undoubtedly, attract a large crowd of fans. Whether or not "Tune" is going to do the hurling, we do not know, but it is said taht he "is feeling right" just at the present and is anxious to assume the pitching burden. But from other sources we learn that Pete Simmons is going to have "a boy that is some pitcher" on the mound. From the looks of things, this game is going to be one stellar match.

NOTE—Short, snappy articles relative to the personality, popularity and prowess of each of the many baseball players in this city will appear in the "Sport Topics" daily. This department is conducted by the sporting editor, who welcomes suggestions.

EDDIE BERGEN.

Not so long ago the Yankees signed a catcher named Eddie Bergen. The newcomer could handle all the pitchers and could throw with accuracy. They say his weakness was his hitting. At any rate, he failed to "stick." He is now in the City League and there is no danger of his failing to keep up with the calibre of laying unearthed on that circuit.

Eddie's friends are permitted to call him "Gabby," a name applied to the illustrious "Gabby" Street. We, personally, do not know whether or not the sandy haired backstop would allow us to make use of the "non-de-plume." But let us get down to business. Bergen is a first-class catcher and has an accurate aim. His wing has meant certain defeat for many a would-be "Ty Cobb." Taken all in all, the former Saurer and present Dunellen catcher, knows no peer. He is as good as the best in this vicinity and is extremely popular. Always clean in his playing, Bergen has earned the admiration of all the fans. Never stooping to "mean" tricks—characteristic of a few backstops—Eddie is bound to retain his host of friends and is sure to rise to the loftiest heights. Meanwhile the "league limelight" goes on and for tomorrow we have Eddie Coughlan.

PHIL VAN DEVENTER IN COLLEGIATE MATCH

Representing Princeton Local Lad and Leonard Beekman Lose.

Harvard's prospects of retaining both the singles and doubles championships of the Intercollegiate Lawn Tennis Association grew brighter as the result of yesterday's matches in the annual tournament on the courts of the Merion Cricket Club.

G. Colket Caner, of Harvard, defeated Leonard Beekman, the Princeton star, in the third round of the singles, and will meet Jerry Weber, the Yale captain, in one of the semi-final matches today. Caner's teammate, Joseph Pfaffman, won from Arthur Coffey, Princeton, and meets Eugene Warren, of the University of California, in the other semi-final.

Caner and Richard H. Harte, Jr., defeated Beekman and Philip Van Deventer, of this city, but representing Princeton in the opening round of the doubles, while the other Crimson pair, Whitehouse and Pfaffman, eliminated Weber and Stoddard, of Yale.

The Caner-Beekman match was the feature of the day, and was watched by a large gallery. Beekman outguessed Caner in the first set and won by the score of 6 to 4. In the second and third sets, however, Caner got his long, back court drive workink with accuracy and precision and proceeded to play Beekman off his feet.

VARIETY CLASS WILL ATTRACT ATTENTION

This Will Be Important One at Coming Kennel Show.

At the coming show of the Plainfield Kennel Club, the "Variety Class" will, undoubtedly, attract considerable attention. At least, up to the present time, a large entry list has been received and valuable prizes have been awarded. All of which indicates that much interest will be taken in the variety event.

The entry fee is fifty per cent. for first; thirty per cent. for second, and twenty per cent. for third. Sporting, non-sporting, toy, terrier, brace and members' class are included in the list of varieties. All dogs entered in the "Variety" Classes must also have been entered in their regular breed or classes.

The Trap Rock Produce Plate, presented by Mrs. Daniel W. Evans, for the best brood bitch and two puppies under twelve months of age must be won three times before it becomes the property of any entrant.

Available "Places to "Live" Have An Unfailing Interest for Most "People!"

The great majority of families are not "tied down," nor "tied up" to one particular place to live. "To move," now and then, is the privilege of renters—and their OPPORTUNITY! The classified ads are of the most direct and practical USEFULNESS to all renters.

MOHAWK ELEVEN ORGANIZED HERE

Charley Lundstorm Signs to Manage East End Football Team.

Football is quickly taking the place of baseball in the hearts of the sport loving public at the present time. In the East End of the city the Mohawks have been organized by Charley Lundstorm, known, according to his press agent, "Kid" Brennan as "Charley." Charley Lundstorm is a gridiron star of recognized ability, anr under his leadership the new elevn should amount to something.

The team has grounds on Central street, and averages 130 pounds in weight. Among those trying out for places on the squad are Carl Guilberg, Monroe Gullberg, Newt Mowen, Bob Cartwright, George King, Eddie Dugan, Jack O'Lyons, Charley Lundstorm, Mickey McCarty, Frank Brennan, Ernie Blair and a host of others.

The manager of the team resides at 626 East Seventh street, this city, and is anxious to receive communications from rival organizers. The Mohawks are out for a "rep" and know how to obtain it.

ANOTHER ALL STAR CITY LEAGUE TEAM

This One Looks Pretty Formidable at the Present Time.

Those City League all-star lineups keep coming in, and we expect to publish most of these we receive. Unfortunately, initials and not names have been attached to the last two lists we received. Hereafter we would like to have the full name of each person who submits a list.

The latest choice of an "all-star" combination finds Russ Stewart in the box with Eddie Bergen, of Dunellen, behind the bat. Stewart's long string of victories is assigned as the reason for the choice of him as pitcher. Eddie Hannon is placed on first base, while Harriman is chosen for the second station. Lou Brown is picked for shortfield, with Eddie Coughlan on third. The outer works consist of Trust, Wahl and Gunzeiman.

SEASON'S LAST TOURNEY ON WESTFIELD COURT

The last tournament of the season on the courts of the Westfield Tennis Club will be played next Saturday when a men's handicap tournament for club members only will be run off. This will undoubtedly draw a large list as it gives the poorer players an equal chance with the good ones and some dark horse has an opportunity to carry off first honors. The tournament will be continued on Saturday, September 23. Winner and runner-up prizes will be given.

ATHENIAN FIVE TO PRACTICE AT ONCE

Jack Hedgemen Believes in "Preparedness" and Will Start Now.

The Athenian basketball five will resume operations in a short time, according to the manager. Practice will be started in a few days at the High School gymnasium and a large band of candidates is expected out.

Jack Hedgeman will probably lead the team again this year and will have as his players Jack Lloyd, Nate Clay, Sid Butler and Bill Daniels. Freddie Vaughan and others are also mentioned as players. It is possible that the local team may enter the Northern New Jersey Colored Basketball League, which is now being formed.

MIDDLESEX HIGH PREPARES FOR START

Sis men were added to the list of candidates at the High School camp. Ffeedman, last year's husky end, practiced with the squad for over an hour and added some pep to the recruits. Smith, an understudy to the center position last year, will fill the gap left open by Captain Dunham, who graduated. Boice will reenter High School to finish his course, and will take up football as a side issue. Schuler, of last year's scrub team, commutes from Sayreville to practice with the squad.. He is a stronger contender for a line position. Wolfe and Schenk are the other men that reported.

The work yesterday consisted of a light scrimmage, ends running under forward passes and falling on the ball. More time was given to falling on the ball, as this seefs to be the best conditioning process. Heavier work will be on tap for today, and when Coach Campbell returns this week he will find a working equad.

TROOPERS HOMESICK

outstanding characteristics of the people are the characteristics of the country—neglected and practically worthless. Only since the Jerseymen arrived here has the city of Douglas been transformed into a somewhat respectable appearing municipality, but that it will remain this way only a short time after the militiamen depart is a foregone conclusion. Since the Jersey units pitched their tents here Douglas has built new streets, improved others; awarded a contrac for a $100,000 postoffice, erected two new bank buildings, tripled its trolley service, opened dozens of stores of various kinds as well as four motion picture houses, and has enjoyed a remarkable real estate building boom. Knowing not how long they will be compelled to stay here many of the regular army soldiers have located their families in Douglas. Two churches are now in the progress of construction, the Knights of Columbus are planning a building, the Elks have just dedicated an elegant home and the Y. M. C. A. will award plans this week for a $50,000 improvement. These are just a few of the myriad of indications that Douglas is enjoying soldier prosperity. The government is paying salaries to the border guard aggregating hundreds of thousands of dollars each month, and the biggest part of this is being spent right here in Duoglas.

The Mexican railroad runs a train into Mexico once a week and out once a week and on each arrival here it brings scores of half breed refugees seeking United States gold. One family never occupies more than two rooms and oftentimes several families live in a two-room apartment. During the past month hundreds of these two-room houses have been built from adobe and as fast as they go up they are taken possession of by refugees who use one room for cooking and eating and the other for sleeping and living in. Strange as it may seem, the greater part of their lives are spent indoors, for they go out rarely in the day time and not very frequntly at night. Dogs are their most cherished belongings and every family has one, two or three of these animals. The postoffice finds it necessary to employ Mexican clerks, and even the banks are compelled to do this because of their patronage.

Most of the "spics" of the border territory are enthusiastic champions of Pancho Villa, and this in a degree explains their hatred toward the American soldier. Villa is the god and if they were given a right to vote for a Mexican leader today it is likely that he would draw one hundred ballots for every one given to Carranza.

These are but a few reasons why the Jerseymen are anxious to get back to the home State. They have answered the call to colors and in view of the fact that there seems to be "nothing doing" as far as a Villa hunt is concerned, they want their release and want it right away. Every unit in camp here has profited wonderfully from the two months' training, and Jersey will in the future rival any State in the Union for well trained militia men. Recent inspections have found the New Jersey outfits in excellent shape and the commanding personnel has been highly complimented by regular army officers on numerous occasions.

Fordham.

The second signal practice of the season was held by the Fordham football squad yesterday. Starting off with a few simple evolutions the Maroon coachers soon had the new backfield working in a smooth, snappy way that relieves the anxiety felt over the loss of Dunn and Yule, the two stars of a year ago. Each of the backfield quartet was a newcomer and a scrub from a year ago. The fullback position was occupied by Fitzpatrick, Fordham's new kicking hope. If his other work compares in any way with the force of his punts and drop kicks yesterday, he is expected to prove the logical success of Al Yule. The coaches also received a welcome addition to the squad when another trio of last year's regulars appeared. They were Mulcahy and Bill May, tackles, and Morcaldi, scrub quarter.

Yale.

Because of their failure to enroll enough rushline material to make two satisfactory 'varsity elevens, the Yale football coaches last night decided to abandon their plans for ordering the first scrimmage practice of the season today. It was impossible to form two elevens of strong calibre at yesterday afternoon's signal drill, but Head Coach Tad Jones began the practice, using the lineup essayed last week, and ran through practically the entire squad of players, including four quarterbacks and three sets of halfbacks.

Pennsylvania.

The missing members of the University of Pennsylvania football squad are rapidly returning to the fold, and Coach Folwell will have at least twenty-four players from whom to choose his lineup for the first game of the season. Folwell spent much of his time yesterday in developing his famous snap forward pass, which has wrung victory from the very greatest in the world of football, when the present Penn tutor was laboring at Washington and Jefferson. The pass traveled no more than ten yards, and at each snap of the ball from the centre two men were ordered to speed down the green. Folwell counted the number of passes, which were perfectly executed, and his pupils surprised him by running up a string of 82 without a slip. Then Coach Folwell made a short address to the players. "We are going to have two weeks of mule work; then I am going to let up on you fellows," he said. "I am going to tell you something you may not know; I did not come back to old Penn for any other purpose than to put her back in her place on the football map. I am going to give one year to the job. There will be no friction among the coaches. I will promise you this."

Princeton.

Aided by cool weather, the Tiger football candidates were able to get in another good day of strenuous practice yesterday. Coach Rush had the players out in togs both in the morning and afternoon. There were several new arrivals at the Princeton camp yesterday, including Eddie Driggs, fullback on last year's team, who will probably do all the kicking for the Tigers this year. Other arrivals were Latrobe, Mathiasen and Warden. Both Nourse, a guard on last year's team, and Gennert, a veteran centre, are expected to put in an appearance this evening. Several simple formations and a few signals were given to the players yesterday afternoon.

William Murdock, the inventor of the gas jet, first burned the gas simply as a flame from the end of a pipe. One day in an emergency he wished to stop the illumination. Hurriedly looking around for something, Murdock seized his wife's thimble and thrust it over the light, which was immediately extinguished.

There was a strong odor of gas, however, says the Popular Science Monthly, and the experimenter applied a light to the thimble, discovering that it was full of holes, through which tiny jets of flame appeared. The importance of the result was that the illumination from those two or three tiny jets was much brighter than had been given by the great flare from the end of the pipe. Acting on the principle which this chance discovery revealed, he constructed what was known as the Cockspur burner.

Eyes of a Giraffe.

No matter from what direction you may approach the giraffe, the top heavy looking animal is sure to discover you. It has been called the original "rubber-neck." It is not generally known that nature, because of the height of its eyes from the ground, has supplied it with a talent peculiarly its own for making observations. As a matter of fact, a giraffe can see in all directions at the same time without moving its head. The eyes are large and prominent and so placed at the side of the head that, bulging out as they do, they are capable of seeing backward as well as forward.

The origin of the word "farm" is as follows: In the Saxons' time the estates which the lords of manors granted to the freemen were at first but for a term of years, with a render of a rent, which in those days was of corn and other products. The leases so made were called fermes or farmes, but times ensuing turned the produce into money and terms of years to terms of life and inheritance.—Westminster Gazette.

as directed and required by the ordinance of the City of Plainfield, entitled "An Ordinance Concerning the Construction and Repair of Sidewalks and Curbs," approved July 15, 1910, as amended, not having been completed, the Common Council of said City has directed such improvement to be made under the direction and supervision of the Street Commissioner, and further directed notice of such contemplated improvement to be given to the owner or owners of any lands thereby affected and further directed that if such improvement shall not be completed within the time and in the manner directed in this notice, the Street Commissioner shall thereupon forthwith proceed to cause such improvement to be made by the city under his direction, as authorized by said Ordinance and the Act of the Legislature hereinafter referred to. The foregoing is a description of your property affected, sufficiently definite in terms to identify the same and the following is a description of the required improvement, viz., on North Avenue, Berkeley Avenue, Leland Avenue and Woodland Avenue, the construction, adjoining said property, of the sidewalk, and on West Fourth Street, the construction adjoining said property, of the curb, all to be laid as directed in said ordinance (to which ordinance and the record thereof in the City Clerk's office reference is hereby made for greater certainty), at the expense of the abutting land owners, composed of concrete to be laid in conformity with the specifications for cement sidewalks and curbs as set forth in "Standard Specifications for Portland Cement Sidewalks and Curbs," filed in the office of the City Clerk, April 11, 1910.

Notice is further given that unless said improvement shall be completed within 30 days after the publication of this notice, it is the intention of said City to make said improvement or cause the same to be made, pursuant to the authority of the Act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey, entitled "An Act to authorize cities to construct and repair sidewalks and curbs and to provide for the payment of the cost thereof," approved April 13, 1908, and acts amendatory thereof and supplemental thereto.

Proof under oath of the publication or service of this notice will be filed within two days thereafter in the office of the City Collector, being the officer charged with the duty of making official searches for liens.

Said Act of the Legislature provides that in case of non-payment of the charges authorized thereby, the land and real estate subject to the liens of such charges may be sold in the manner provided for the sale of lands for the non-payment of assessments.

PLAN RECREATION WORK FOR SEASON

LAWS ARE FAVORABLE

Roland Haynes, of New York, in Address, Tells Local Bodies of the Value of the Community Center and Discusses Problems.

The public meeting arranged under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee in the High School Auditorium last night was of much interest locally, members of the Recreation Board, the Board of Education, West End Community Center and people of the city interested in the social service work in Plainfield being in attendance. At the opening of the meeting Champlain L. Riley, chairman of the Public Recreation Committee of this city, outlined the work of the committee during the past year and suggested certain improvements to the members for the coming season. After speaking of the advantage of having experts in the line of recreation work addressing groups interested in that particular endeavor, he introduced Roland Haynes, Secretary of the Commission on Recreation under the Board of Estimate and Apportionment of New York City, as the speaker for the evening.

Briefly taking up the problems of playground and recreation work in Plainfield, Mr. Haynes went into detail and addressed the gathering on "The Social Value of the Community Center." He called the attention of the committee to the fact that the laws of the State of New Jersey give the recreation committees and playgrounds cerain large powers whereby they may increase the scope of their work. On March 20, of this year, the Senate and Assembly of the State enacted a law whereby "the board of education of any school district may use, or, subject to reasonable regulations to be adopted by said board, permit the use of any schoolhouse and rooms therein, and the grounds or other property of the district, when not in use for ordinary school purposes, and with the consent of the local authorities in control, thereof, may improve, equip and use any park, playground, or other public place or property, for the purpose of holding athletic, social, civic and recreational meetings and entertainments and such other purposes as may be approved by the Board of Education." On March 15, of this year the Senate and Assembly also enacted a law whereby the authorities of parks or playgrounds in the various cities of the State may permit the use of same for public recreational purposes, subject, of course, to certain regulations prescribed by the boards of each.

Mr. Haynes intimated that the problem of the Recreation Committee was confined mostly to making better use of the leisure time of the people of a city. Although there have been many changes in the methods of educators in the past few years the after school hours as well as the after work hours of individuals should be utilized in character development, and are as important as the hours spent in school and in study. Mr. Haynes pointed out that with proper recreation the character of the child is moulded to a large extent and he is encouraged to go ahead. That recreation work is not a new venture was briefly pointed out, the speaker mentioning the fact that the work has passed from its pioneer stage into a second stage of enlarged usefulness. According to Mr. Haynes the persons benefited by the social recreation work can be divided into five groups: First, the children between the ages of 9 and those entered in the primary grades; second, the High School pupils; third, working young men from 20 to 25 years of age; fourth, working young women of the same ages; and fifthly, adults.

"Recreation work is just as important as the educator system in the public school and works hand in hand with it," said Mr. Haynes. The work does not cost half as much as the former, because the former is a direct asset to the latter. Mr. Haynes brought is address to a close by emphasizing the need of close cooperation of all those interested in the recreation movement. He was particularly in favor of the self supporting plan of the various individual clubs carried on under the Public Recreation Committee's supervision in Plainfield.

Before the meeting adjourned short discussions on recreation subjects were made by Henry C. White, vice chairman of the Recreation Committee; George W. Wriston, supervisor of the Public Playground at Parker Field, and T. C. Vail, president of the West End Community Center.

The next meeting of the Public Recreation Committee will be held in the Public Library rooms on Thursday, September 21, when a definite program for the winter season will be arranged.

GRADED UNION HAS A BIRTHDAY PARTY

Pleasing All-Day Affair Held at Home of Mrs. C. Frank French.

The twenty-first birthday party of the Plainfield Graded Union of Sunday School Teachers was held on the lawn at the home of Mrs. C. Frank French on Washington avenue yesterday, there being about forty members and friends of the union present to enjoy a delightful informal program of entertainment. At noon a bounteous lunch was served by the committee in charge of the affair.

The women busied themselves with all kinds of fancy work, and a feature was the singing of Miss Lu ella Harris, who was for many years soprano solist of the First Baptist church. Victrola music was also enjoyed during the afternoon.

Sunday school teachers were present from nearly every school in the city, South Plainfield and also Westfield. Among the guests were Mrs F. W. Miller, of Jamaica, L. I., formerly superintendent of temperance work in the State Sunday school york; Mrs Robert Barnes, who has been visiting in California the past year; Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, who has always been interested in the union and Mrs. Cornelius Schenck.

TROOPER DAWSON KICKED BY HORSE

Popular Member of D Troop Sustains Fractured Skull.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 10.—A shadow of gloom was cast over Troop D here today when Private Roland Dawson, one of the most popular members of the outfit, was painfully injured by being kicked in the face by a horse. Dawson, in company with the other members of the troop, had answered stable call and was tying his steed up to the picket line when it suddenly reared and stood up on its hind legs. As the horse brought his feet back to the ground one struck Dawson squarely between the eyes with its full force.

The unconscious youth was carried to the First Field Hospital, where Major Harold D. Corbusier and his assistants brought him back to his senses after two hours' work. Owing to the limited facilities offered for the treatment of an injury of this character it was deemed best to send the trooper to the Base Hospital and he was carried there in an ambulance.

Thorough examination brought out the fact that the nose was only slightly fractured but it was feared that he might have suffered some internal injury to his head. After the examination he was informed that the hospital was filled and that there was no room for him. He accordingly had to return to camp.

Today he is slightly better but his features have been battered almost beyond recognition. Both eyes are partially closed, his cheeks are puffed and raw and his nose is scraped and crushed. While no serious results are anticipated it will be two weeks at least before he is well enough to assume his duties with the troop.

Dawson was transferred to Troop D from the Essex Troop shortly after arrival here. He is a native of Baltimore, but for the past year he has been singing in the record studio of the Edison photograph plant at East Orange. He has a rich clear voice and was a favorite among the soldiers as an entertainer.

EMERGENCY!

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally, are hereby requested to report daily to the Board of Health, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 3 p. m., the arrival of all persons from out of town, INCLUDING PLAINFIELD PEOPLE WHO HAVE BEEN ABSENT FROM THE CITY (DAILY COMMUTERS EXCEPTED). Such report should state the name and residence of the person making the report; and also the names and ages of the parties from out of town and the locality from which they came. The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

REV. JOHN Y. BROEK TO WED OCTOBER 17

Will Take Miss Florence B. Tubbs For His Bride in New York Church.

Rev. John Y. Broek, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, this city, and Miss Florence B. Tubbs, daughter of Mrs. William Tubbs, of New York city, will be married on Tuesday afternoon, October 17, the first announcement of which was made by Mr. Broek last night, when he informed the consistory of his church that the date had been set for the nuptials.

Rev. John Y. Broek.

The ceremony will take place at the West End Collegiate Reformed church, New York city, and will be performed by the Rev. Dr. Henry Everston Cobb, minister of the church, assisted by Rev. Albertus T. Broek, brother of the bridegroom-elect, who is the minister of the Clinton Avenue Reformed church, Newark. The couple will reside at 519 Central avenue.

Miss Tubbs is greatly interested in Christian work, being in charge of the young people's branch of the Woman's Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed Church in America. She has many friends here where she has visited frequently.

Mr. Broek is a graduate of Rutgers College and the Seminary, his first charge being at the Grand Avenue Reformed church, Asbury Park, from which place he came to Plainfield seven years ago. He has been aggressive both as pastor and preacher.

MR. AND MRS. A. F. LAROCK CELEBRATE ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. LaRock, of West Sixth street, quietly celebrated the fifth anniversary of their wedding yesterday. The couple was married on September 14, 1911, in St Mary's church, this city, at a nuptial mass officiated at by the Rev. Bernard M. Bogan, pastor of the church. Mrs. LaRock was formerly Miss Helen E. Hanrahan, daughter of Mrs. Lucy Hanrahan, of this city. Mr. and Mrs. LaRock were attended at their wedding by Miss Sadie E. Hanrahan as maid of honor and Joseph James Cullen as best man.

CASE IS DISMISSED.

The case of James Bohling against John H. Dickerson, both colored, charging the latter with the theft of the regalia of a colored organization, was dismissed by Judge De Meza in city court this morning. Dickerson was said to have taken property of the lodge to the value of $38, but it was shown that he was the custodian of the articles and there was not sufficient evidence to show he had stolen them.

NEW MEN'S STORE TO OPEN.

Morris Rosenbaum, who has conducted a tailor shop at 14 Somerset street for some years, has taken a lease of the store at 19 Somerset street, and will open it tomorrow with a full line of ready made men's and boys' clothing, furnishings and hats. Mr. Rosenbaum has had a wide experience in this line, and he looks for a largely increased trade. His advertisement announcing the opening will be found in another column.

THREATEN TIE UP OF ALL NEW YORK

Gigantic Battle With Capital May Grow Out of Strike.

VIOLENCE CONTINUES

Revolvers, Bricks, Bottles and Stones Used in Attack on Cars—Monday Will Decide Fate of the Strike—Traction Companies Are Firm.

New York, Sept. 15.—The announcement of Interborough officials that the strike on subway and elevated was broken was followed today by renewed threats from labor leaders of a city-wide sympathetic strike.

One union official declared a decision had been reached secretly to "tie up every industry in which Morgan capital is in any way concerned." Throughout union ranks there were rumors of a coming "gigantic battle with capitalism."

How far the union leaders will be able to make good their threats is a problem. Last night, as expected, the Brooklyn Central Labor Union, delegates from ninety-five local bodies attending, voted indorsement of the sympathetic strike recommendation of the Hotel Continental conference. The New York Central Federated Union meets tonight, and is expected to take similar action.

It will still be necessary for the unions to vote individually on striking. There is known to be opposition in some of the local organizations to a walkout, but just how strong this is may not be known until after the vote. By Sunday or Monday it will be possible to tell whether the general strike will be serious.

Attacks on "L" trains, both on the East and West sides, with revolvers, bricks, bottles and stones again kept the police on the jump early today.

Many persons had narrow escapes from serious injury; windows were shattered, passengers were thrown into panics, but in every instance the attackers succeeded in making their escapes.

The most serious attack was made on a Sixth avenue train at One Hundred and Forty-first street and Eighth avenue. Some person, or persons, on the roof of a house fired shots at the train. One of the bullets shattered a car window and imbedded itself in the upper portion of the car, just missing the head of a passenger.

BUCKLE TO LEAD FREEHOLDER PROBE

Local Man Selected—Investigation Will Begin Monday, It is Said

Freeholder James F. Buckle has been named by Director John N. Cady, of the Board of Freeholders, to head the probe committee from which Freeholder Elias F. Applegate, of Elizabeth, has resigned.

Mr. Buckle, in point of service, is the youngest member of the Board. He was appointed by the Plainfield City Council a few months ago to serve as the ad interim successor to the late J. Hervey Doane. He is a candidate for election to the office for the unexpired term of Mr. Doane, and is without opposition on the Republican ticket. The Democrats of Plainfield have no candidate for the freeholder vacancy.

While a candidate for appointment as Freeholder Doane's successor last spring, Mr. Buckle was foreman of the May term Grand Jury. This inquest was charged by Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen with an investigation into alleged laxity of the Board of Freeholders in supervising and holding to strict accountability the various county officials handling public moneys.

County Engineer Jacob L. Bauer, who probably will be a central figure in any inquiry which may be made into the execution and carrying out of road contracts, as petitioned for by Freeholder Applegate and forty-one taxpayers, declined today to discuss the situation that exists.

"It has always been my rule to give to the public all information in my possession concerning the county roads," Mr. Bauer said, "but in the present instance I feel that I should not make any statement. I will say, however, that the whole matter will be thoroughly ventilated for the benefit of the public as soon as the freeholder committee is organized.

"I have no definite information," he added, "as to when the committee will begin its investigation, but I think it will not be delayed long."

It was unofficially reported around the court house yesterday that the investigation will get under way next Monday afternoon, it being understood that a call has been issued to the members of the committee to meet at that time.

JUDGE WESCOTT WILL SPEAK HERE MONDAY

Local Democrats have completed arrangements for a meeting to be held in ColumbusAuditorium Monday night, at which time Attorney-General Wescott, who is opposing James E. Martine for the United States Senatorial nomination, will be the principal speaker. Definite announcement as to who will be chairman of the meeting has not been made as yet, but it will be either William L. Saunders, Archibald Cox or David T. Kenney.

The following Democrats have consented to serve as vice presidents at the meeting: J. O. Stevens, H. W. Marshall, Leroy J. Ellis, Peter Flynn, Jeremiah Callahan, J. V. D. Filths, Henry Roach, John Connolly, John McIntyre, James Scott, James E. Prindle, Daniel J. Courain, David T. Kenney, John J. Kenney, Judge Walter L. Hetfield, William L. Saunders, Fred Stover, Frank Cullen, P. J. Reville and John P. Casey.

The fact that Judge Wescott intends to invade the home territory of Senator Martine has aroused considerable interest. The friends of both candidates here are claiming the nomination for their favorite son, and just to what extent Judge Wescott will be able to win support here is an interesting question among the members of the party.

Judge Wescott has been well received throughout the district, it is said, and feels quite optimistic as the result of the primary. Senator Martine is equally confident that he will not only be renominated, but elected in November.

SPEAKERS FOR NO LICENSE MEETING SUNDAY AFTERNOON

The speakers for the no-license meeting to be held in the Plainfield Theatre Sunday afternoon will be: A. M. Harris, of Harris, Forbes & Co., New York, one of the largest banking houses in the country; Rev. Dr. B. S. Hudson, who recently conducted a large temperance movement in Atlantic City; and Rev. W. S. Imes, who has just graduated from the Union Theological Seminary.

This is to be a meeting where facts showing the great success of no-license government in other cities will be brought out.

COLUMBIAN DRAMATIC CLUB PLAN RECEPTION

The Columbian Dramatic Club held its first fall meeting in the Knights of Columbus clubhouse last night. A large number of the members were present and joined in the discussions for the social plans of the club for the winter. During the meeting it was decided to hold a reception in the auditorium on October 11, Columbus Day Eve. Committees were appointed and the respective chairmen will proceed in making the arrangements at once.

The club has three plays under consideration and sections of each were read at the session last night. The play committee will definitely decide on the one to be produced this coming winter and present copies at the next regular meeting in October. Grand Knight J. J. Varley was present at the meeting and addressed the members. The clubhouse will be open and the social activites will be in full swing by October 1.

BUSINESS WOMEN MEET.

COUNCIL MEETING POSTPONED.

The special meeting of the Plainfield Common Council called for last night was postponed. It will be held Tuesday evening of next week.

Auto Top and Body Factory for Plainfield.

Mr. J. H. DeLey, who was formerly connected with The Packard Motor Car Co. in New York and in Detroit, has opened an up-to-date factory for auto tops (including Victoria and one-man styles), curtains and topcovers, seat covers for open and closed cars, limousine and touring car upholstering, at 34 Somerset street (formerly L. M. French's carriage factory). The most up-to-date methods of manufacturing together with the high standard of workmanship which he has adopted enable him to do the same grade of work as the best known New York body builders at prices worth while considering. A modern paint shop with woodwork and blacksmith departments conducted in connection makes it possible to have one's car completely renovated under the same roof.—Adv. ***

AMERMAN PROMISED SUPPORT OF LEAGUE

Home Rule Organization Holds Enthusiastic Meeting at Somerville.

The Home Rule League of Somerset County held its weekly meeting at Somerville last evening, in the hall of the Y. M. C. A. C. C. Wheeler, of Watchung, who was elected president of the league recently, presided. Almost every borough and township in the county was represented by one or more delegates. Reports were made by these delegates, all of whom favored the election of John S. Amerman at the Republican primaries as a candidate for the Assembly, concerning the progress of the Home Rule propaganda in their sections of the county.

The president was authorized to increase the finance committee from three to seven. The North Plainfield members of this committee are Mayor W. L. Smalley and D. N. Van Vliet. Mr. Amerman was present and made a brief speech, which dealt chiefly with the importance of home rule, good roads and economy in paying out the money of the people.

Mr. Amerman seems to have made a favorable impression with the farmers, who are giving him a hearty welcome all over the county. He is a pleasing and earnest talker, and a vigorous defender of home rule. The next meeting of the league will be held in Somerville on Friday evening of next week.

QUEEN CITY MARKET CLOSED BY CREDITORS

John Bauers, Proprietor, Disappears Leaving Note Behind Explaining Action.

After two attachments had been filed in the District Court, John Bauers, of 141 West Front street, and proprietor of the Queen City Market, located at 131 West Front street, has disappeared from the city and his whereabouts are unknown. Business reverses are said to be the cause of Mr. Bauers' leaving, and today the store was closed.

Business was conducted as usual Tuesday, but when employes opened the store Wednesday morning a note was found on the counter signed by Bauers saying that business reverses and the likelihood of failure had caused him to clear out. Alongside the letter were found several envelopes addressed to the two clerks containing their salary for the week.

Several months ago Bauers took over the Queen City Market from Samuel Shipkins and it said to have lost several thousand dollars in stocks. A short time ago his partner left him and being unaccustomed to the business himself he was unable to make it a financial success. He has no family.

The two attachments filed were by the Swift and Armour Beef Companies for $316.20 and $236.52, and it is probable that the stock will be sold to satisfy the creditors. Mr. Shipkins, it is said, will open the store and run the business again himself.

BOROUGH MEN DRAWN FOR GRAND AND PETIT JURIES

The following borough men were drawn for the grand and petit juries for the September term of the Somerset county court: Grand jurors, Charles H. Lyman, Andrew Wilson, Frank W. Jones, Charles E. COMBLES FIGHT GROWS IN FURY

ALLIES MAKING GAINS

Net Grows Tighter With Each Assault—Counter Attacks Repeated With Regard for the Loss of Life.

Paris, Sept. 15.—Realizing the tightening of the Franco-British net about Combles and Peronne, the capture of which might compel a general retirement of the Teutonic forces from the strongly entrenched Picardy sector to positions not so well prepared for defense, the German army under Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria is making desperate assaults upon the new French and British positions.

Wave after wave of infantry troops press forward with a courage that has elicited admiration and respect from the allies, only to be shattered by rifle and machine gun fire and blown to bits as they dash forward through the curtain of fire laid by the French field pieces.

Thousands of German soldiers are dying in these fruitless charges, but their valor has not abated and they seem ready to continue as long as their commanders send them.

The French net is tighter around Combles as a result of yesterday's attacks by the French. Directly east of this strongly fortified town they extended their positions and to the southeast they stormed the Farm of Le Priez, which the Germans had organized into an almost impregnable stronghold guarding Combles on the flank.

Serbs Drive Back Bulgars.

Paris, Sept. 15.—The Serbians took the offensive and launched an assault upon Bulgar trenches on a front of nearly a mile. They met with desperate resistance, but after a bitter battle, succeeded in wresting the entire line 1,500 yards long from the Bulgars. The Serbs captured Gountchevo at the point of the bayonet. They next assailed and took a position known as the Malkan-ridge Crater, shortly afterward driving the Bulgars out of the village of Eksieu, due west of the southern point of Lake Ostrovo.

Drop Bombs On Sofia.

Bucharest, Sept. 15 (via London).—Allied aviators flying from Saloniki dropped bombs on Sofia, the Bulgarian capital, today, and then flew on to Bucharest, where they descended this afternoon. They covered a distance of 330 miles in five hours, averaging 66 miles an hour.

Washington, Sept. 15.—Some reports received here say that the steamer Counsellor foundered. Secretary of State Lansing has received no information regarding the loss of the vessel.

British Wounded Tie Up Traffic.

Berlin, Sept. 15.—Copenhagen despatches to the Overseas News Agency state that business has been completely suspended at a number of British ports owing to the large number of transports carrying home wounded and dead from the French front.

Siege Belgium R. R. Stock.

Amsterdam, Sept. 15.—Owing to the heavy destruction by French and British aviators of railroad property used by the Germans for military purposes, the Teuton officials in Belgium have seized 200 locomotives and 2,500 freight and passenger cars, together with a large quantity of rails from the Belgium Light Railways. The confiscated property will be used to replace the losses the Germans have recently suffered.

American Steamer Sunk.

London, Sept. 15.—The Harrison liner Counsellor, sunk by a German submarne on Wednesday, had on board an American passenger, according to information reaching the American Embassy today. United States attaches are conducting an investigation of the destruction of the vessel, which displaced 4,958 tons.

NEWARK AMUSEMENTS

"Potash and Perlmutter in Society" with Barney Bernard in his original role, will be presented at the Broad Street Theatre, Newark, on Monday night, September 18, for an engagement of one week direct from its engagement of seven months at the Lyric Theatre, New York, where it was generally proclaimed the comedy hit of the season. Theatregoers of Newark will have an opportunity to witness the original Lyric Theatre production when the play comes to the Broad Street Theatre. Few theatregoers need an introduction to "Abe" Potash and "Mawruss" Perlmutter, Montague Glass' lovable and amusing Jewish types, who both in fiction and on the stage have won a place as the two most human and interesting character creations of the generation. In "Potash and Perlmutter" they created a sensation, which they duplicated in their second version, "Potash and Perlmutter in Society." The latter play is the joint work of Montague Glass and Rol Cooper Megrue. It is in three acts and an epilogue, and takes the two funny partners into a modern business environment, without sacrificing any of the quaint traits and laughable idiosyncrasies that have endeared them to the hearts of theatregoers.

"Potash and Perlmutter in Society" promises to be the laughing hit of the year.

PLEASING PROGRAM UNDER AUSPICES OF HOME DEPT.

The Home Department of the Netherwood Reformed church Bible school entertained its friends with a pleasant program and social last evening in the church. Mrs. S. O. Rush opened the program with a piano solo. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Martin rendered a piano duet. Mrs. Ralph Martin gave a soprano solo, and Horace J. Martin a tenor solo.

Claude Gonor, superintendent of the Bible school, welcomed the Home Department and friends, and introduced the speaker of the evening, the Rev. Dr. Theodore Bayles, secretary of religion education for the Reformed Church in America. Dr. Bayles spoke of the Home Department, and the importance of its work for the individual, home and church. It was an inspiring and helpful address.

After the program a pleasant social hour was spent with games and refreshments in the dining room of the church.

New Autumn Apparel

That is ultra smart. The finest of the new Fashions are here for your selection.

Many New Changes in These

Fall Suits

Probably the most notable feature is the length of the jacket. They range from 36 to 40 inches in length. Many are rippled below the waist line, at the sides, though some that will be liked are in straight line effects. Collars are in most cases trimmed with rich furs, and cuffs are trimmed with material to match. Skirts are a trifle longer, but of the same fullness as in the past. Broadcloths, gabardines, poplins, serges and velours are the favorite materials, in the fashionable shades of navy, black, green, plum Burgundy and brown.

OLD STYLES, CHARMINGLY MODERNIZED, CHARACTERIZE THE

New Autumn Dresses

Designers have drawn upon French historial periods for this Fall's Fashions. Serge and Satin Dresses are the main issue, in straight line, pleated and fitted styles without end. Skirts flare widely. Braids, wool or tinsel embroidery, and furs are trimmings most favored. The season's most popular shades are navy, black, brown, taupe and green.

WOMEN OF DISCRIMINATION WILL APPRECIATE THESE PRETTY

SWEATERS

Lovely Sweaters that add charm and distinction to the wearer, are featured for tomorrow in an interesting variety. Silk and Silk Fibre Sweaters, Shetland Wool Sweaters, Angora Coat Sweaters, all in the most desirable shades of the season. Either plain, or charming combinations of colors. Prices from .....$2.50 to $14.98

Fall Millinery

A Most Notable Collection of Embodying the Very Newest and Latest Fashions.

New Hats of quality that set off a woman's individuality with a piquant dash of becomingness are ready to convey high satisfaction to the wearers. Charming new modes and adaptations of foreign models, all appealingly smart, and yet humbly priced as befits our reputation for value giving. Come and see them tomorrow, you will delight in their splendor.

Figures Like Faces Are Different

No Two Alike—

Yet how often do you hear some well meaning woman advise her friend to buy such and such "make" Corset—the kind that she wears. The lady forgets that there are no two figures alike.

Our Corset Service extends to you the service of a competent person. Come and let her suggest and fit you with a corset your figure requires.

Prices from 50c to $3.00, and $3.00 to $10.00.

TROOP D ENGAGES IN A SHAM BATTLE

Plainfielders Cover Themselves With Glory on Two-Day Hike.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 11.—Flooving a two day outing and workout, the stiffest they have been subjected to since arrival here early in July, Troop A, of the Essex outfit, headed by Captain Russell P. Freeman, and Troop D, of Plainfield, commanded by Captain Albert G. Borden, returned to camp late yesterday afternoon enthusiastic over their first real taste of field tactics. The two units left early Saturday morning and Troop A pitched camp about two miles east of College Point, Troop D coming in later and assuming a position on the point.

Previous to leaving here the Plainfield outfit, was ordered to assume the defensive of a proposed sham battle, and the Newarkers were to take the offensive. In accordance with the plans the Essex boys launched their attack in early afternoon and the four-hour battle which ensued furnished many thrills. Upon their return to camp each claimed a victory, but the commanding officers of both sides admitted that D Troop had slightly the better of the argument.

Both units covered themselves with glory and the two-day hike proved even more interesting that the soudiers had anticipated. All are now eagerly looking forward to the fifteen-day outing which will probably begin the latter part of this week.

Troop D accomplished a notable feat Saturday afternoon by establishing a picket line and sitting down to mess seven minutes after the arrived at the point. Troop A was only a few minutes behind this record. Both commanders complimented their troops upon return here. Prior to the beginning of the home trip yesterday a four-hour field drill was indulged in.

REV. DR. I. J. STODDARD IS NINETY-SIX TODAY

Retired Baptist Missionary Quietly Observes Event at His Home.

Rev. Dr. Ira Joy Stoddard, a retired Baptist missionary, is today observing the ninty-sixth anniversary of his natal day, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Arthur S. Whitney, of 825 West Fourth street, with whom he lives. Although nearing the century mark, Dr. Stoddard still enjoys fairly good health and his friends look forward to celebrating his one hundred years anniversary with him. Mrs. Stoddard died three years ago at the advanced age of 91 years. Beside the daughter with whom he lives, Mr. Stoddard has a daughter living in California and a son in Iowa.

Mr. Stoddard is a native of Eden, N. Y., being born there September 15, 1820. After his graduation from Colgate University he entered the missionary field, being one of the pioneer workers of that denomination in the development of Christianity in India. He remained in India on his first visit until 1856, when he returned to this country. He later returned to India in 1866, when time remaining until 1879, when he returned to remain. Afterward Mr. Stoddard remained active in Christian work for a number of years.

CONSIDER RE-OPENING OF THE DAY NURSERY

The City Union of King's Daughters held a meeting yesterday in the day nursery to arrange for the fall opening of the house. By order of the Board of health the nursery has been closed since July 14, as a precaution against infantile paralysis. Just as soon as it is possible the home will again be opened for the care of children. The matron of the nuresry is at the house each day, however, and it willing at all times to escort visitors through the building.

HUGHES TO SPEAK IN THIS STATE SEPTEMBER 28

Charles E. Hughes, Republican candidate for President, will invade New Jersey on his second campaign tour of the country, which will begin next Monday. He plans to reach here on September 28, after the primaries, on which day he will speak at the State Fair in Trenton. He is also scheduled to speak in Weehawken and Jersey City, and possibly may stop off at Newark long enough to make one speech.

The Presidential candidate will come to New Jedsey from Pittsburgh, where he speaks on September 27. Illinois, Wisconsin, Ohio and Indiana will receive special attention from Hughes on his second trip through the western part of the country.

BASE HOSPITAL IS NOT BIG ENOUGH

Many Patients Needing Treatment Must Be Turned Away There.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 11.—That the facilities for the treatment of illness and injuries at the military base hospital here are not adequate at the present time to meet the demands of the big force of guardsmen doing border duty in this vicinity, was admitted today by officers connected with the management of the institution. The present buildings are not large enough to accommodate all of the patients who have been sent there for treatment, and within the past twenty-four hours it has been necessary to reject a number of these —one of whom was Private Roland Dawson, of Troop D, First Squadron of Cavalry, who was seriously injured when kicked in the face by a horse. Every effort is being made to rush the work on the erection of new wards, but should an epidemic of a serious nature break out in the immediate future the base hospital would not be able to cope with it.

The institution is now carrying a capacity roster, and until new wards are ready it will be necessary to assign patients to the field hospitals for treatment. These, too, are without proper facilities to carry on their work but are prepared to give temporary relief.

Since it was opened the base hospital has proven itself of marked value both to the regular army and the militia, both classes of soldiers being sent there for treatment. The medical and surgical staff is one of the most efficient to be had in this vicinity, and it has been said that the treatment at the base hospital is far superior to that given at Calumet Hospital, the public institution of Douglas, where many soldiers were sent prior to the opening of the base hospital. Women nurses have recently been introduced and the quarters are constantly being enlarged. Among the various cases being treated there now are para-typhoid, malaria, varicose veins, appendicitis, rheumatism, dysentery and various other ailments and different kinds of fever.

The present quarters will accommodate in the neighborhood of one hundred persons, but recently it has been necessary to place beds on the porches of the wards, and patients are being taken care of temporarily in this way.

Private Walter E. Brown, of Newark who is connected with the First Field Hospital corps, has been a patient in the base hospital for several weeks, suffering from heart trouble, but has nearly regained his normal health. When volunteers were asked for yesterday to fill the position of assistant wardmaster he offered his services and is now acting in this capacity.

Colonel Albert A. Van Walraven, of Paterson, commander of the Fifth Regiment, and at present acting head of the portion of the brigade now stationed here, will probably not accompany the regiment on the three-day hike which will begin today. The regiment is temporarily under the command of Captain Frederick H. Rohrback, of Company A, owing to the fact that Colonel Van Walraven is kept busy with his other duties, and the former will be in charge of the hike plans. The outfit will leave here today, hiking about twenty miles into the country. The second day will be spent in recreational fashion, field games and other interesting events being a portion of the program. The return hike will be made on the third day. The entire regiment, with the exception of Company A, the outfit which is isolated because of the para-typhoid epidemic, will participate in the outing, and all are in fine physical condition for the long march.

Dr. William V. Gale, of Newark, commander of the sanitary corps of the field artillery, returned to camp last night following a fifteen-day furlough. He received a royal welcome, his coming back being somewhat of a surprise, every one believing that the artillery would have its orders to return before the furlough expired. Major Harold D. Corbusier, commanding the field hospital corps, took his men on a nine-mile junket yesterday. Various drills were indulged in during the march and in an hour's layover at the end of the hike.

COMPLAIN THERE'S LACK OF SEATS IN CITY PARK

People who like to visit the city park complain of the lack of seats there. They claim that there are only four or five seats in the park, and that at least twenty-five should be provided to accommodate those who would like to frequent the place during the pleasant weather. It is said that a number of people have walked some distance to the park intending to remain awhile, but have found the few seats occupied and have been obliged to return home or go elsewhere.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy, when we arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink, before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile, and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make any one who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—Adv.

JOS HUBBARD HELD FOR HIGHWAY ROBBERY

Accused of Forcing Walter Lewis, a Mute, to Give Him Money.

Charged with highway robbery by forcing Walter Lewis, a deaf mute to give him money last Monday night, Joseph Hubbard, of New street, this city, was today held without bail by Justice Von Minden after he had heard concluding testimony in the case which had been postponed from last night at Dunellen. Hubbard was taken to New Brunswick today to await the action of the Grand Jury. After the court had adjourned last night it appeared that the lawyers for Hubbard might successfully prove an alibi by having various pople testify that at the time he was said to have held up Lewis he was in Plainfield, but this morning a preponderance of evidence resulted in his being held for the Grand Jury.

In an effort to show that he was not in Dunellen at 11:30 Monday night, when the robbery was supposed to have occurred, Hubbard's attorney put several men on the stand that testified they were in a local saloon with him at 11:00. Mrs. Sarah Hubbard, the boy's mother, and a sister swore that they had left Hubbard in the house shortly after 11:00 and that he went directly to bed.

A number of Dunellen men were put on the stand in behalf of Lewis to show that Hubbard was in a saloon at that place a short time before the holdup occurred. It was shown by witnesses that Hubbard left the saloon in company with Lewis, and two were put on the stand that chased the man who held up Lewis and they identified Hubbard as the man they chased.

Lewis is employed by the New Jersey Central and receives his pay every two weeks. The time before when he had gotten his pay some one had tried to hold him up but failed, and as a consequence he was not allowed to carry much about him and on Monday night he had only a few dollars.

SOCIAL ACTIVITIES WILL BE RESUMED AT TAB HALL

The social season will be opened with a whirl at the Tab Hall on West Fourth street this evening, when the first dance of the year is held. Invitations have been extended to five hundred people and it is expected that an unusually large crowd will attend the event.

Music for the occasion will be provided by A' Squires' orchestra and dancing will be allowed until 2 p. m. The committee in charge of the affair has taken every means at its disposal to make this affair a most successful one.

ALL CHARGES DISMISSED IN WIRE TAPPING CASE

New York, Sept. 15. Supreme Court Justice Greenbaum, who sat as a committing magistrate this summer in John Doe proceedings growing out of the police wire tapping, today filed his decision with the clerk of the criminal branch of Supreme Court. He dismissed the charges of Mayor Mitchell against Father William B. Farrell, the late Daniel C. Potter, Monsignor John J. Dunn and counter charges made by them against Police Commissioner Arthur Woods.

CENTRAL LODGE HOLDS AN ENTHUSIASTIC MEETING

Central Lodge, No. 48, A. O. U. W., had one of the most enthusiastic and enjoyable meetings in its history last evening. A large representation of membership was present to greet the Grand Master Workman, Charles Leigh, of East Orange, who made an official visitation to the lodge. He was accompanied by Special Deputy W. H. Hill, of Newark. In an address to the members Mr. Leigh stated that the outlook for the future of the order was particularly encouraging and that new members were being added in all parts of the State.

Central Lodge started the ball rolling in this section by receiving four applications and electing three to membership in the lodge last evening. It is expected that more applications will be received at the next meeting.

At the conclusion of the business portion of the session the entertainment committee provided a liberal supply of refreshments and cigars.

INJUNCTION SUIT IS RETURNABLE SEPT. 19

The injunction granted by the Vice Chancellor on September 11 to Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Senger against Harry and Garret Drier, trustees of the Samuel Dreier estate, and John Cunniff, a contractor, will be returnable in Chancery Court at Newark on Tuesday, September 19. The injunction was granted to stop work on the Dreier building on West Front street, Mr. and Mrs. Senger claiming they could have the work done for $2,000 that is costing $4,043.

A Convenience That Is An Economy !

That's what our "Household Club" Plan system is. Anyone who offers us satisfactory evidence of responsibility and of a proper regard for their obligations may join the "Household Club." In opening these accounts we pay more attention to the applicant's reputation for paying his debts than to the size of his bank account or to the extent of his real estate holdings. As a result we have on our books today a very large number of absolutely reliable, prompt paying customers. The convenience costs us practically nothing, while it contributes materially to our purchasing and selling power, at the same time it enables you to buy what you want, Furniture, Carpets, Rugs, Lace Curtains, Sewing Machines, and General Household Goods. Pay a small amount down and the balance is arranged in weekly or monthly payments to suit your convenience.

By doing business with us on the "Household Club Plan" you do not have to pay the exorbitant prices usually charged by installment houses. "Our Prices" are the same to everybody. Come in and let us explain the Plan in detail.

HIS TWO TENSE MOMENTS.

One a Ninth Inning Crisis, the Other a Dinner Table Climax.

I heard a prominent Cambridge man tell of the two most tense moments of his life. But the tension in each case was different.

"I doubt if I ever shall forget either occasion," he said reflectively. "They were big moments.

"The first was when I was in college. I was captain of the baseball team that year. We came to the end of the ninth. We needed one run to tie the score and another to win the game. Two men were down and two on the sacks when I came to bat. And for once in my career I did it. I lined out a three bagger right over the railroad track. When I felt it go—well, that was one occasion.

"And the other." He chuckled, but a slow flush crept over his cheeks. "It was thirty years ago, soon after I left college. I went over to see a girl I thought was pretty nice and to meet her folks for the first time. I went on a Sunday. All the men were away. And they had duck for dinner." He stopped. "Ever carve a duck?" he asked meaningly. "No, neither had I before. Nor have I since." His flush deepened. "I never even went to see that girl again," he added plaintively. —Boston Journal.

BONEHEAD BASEBALL.

One Curious Break That Even the Umpires Did Not Notice.

Baseball's champion foolish play was made in a game between Washington and the White Sox in 1907. In that battle Larry Schlafly was captain of the Washingtons and also played second base.

At the end of an early inning Schlafly went out to telephone or buy a goat or something and was delayed so long that the Senators had three men put out before his return.

The Sox came trotting in for their turn at bat. Washington took the field with only eight men and nobody on second, and the game went on that way till Fielder Jones hit one straight across second. Then, and not till then, was it discovered that there was nobody on second base.

Incredible as it may seem, nineteen men—seventeen players and two umpires—had started the half inning in this fashion and not one of them got wise till Jones' hit shot over the empty station.

Schlafly reappeared at this juncture, and the umpires decided that the hit was illegal when made with only eight men in the field. Jones had to go back and bat over.—New York Sun.

Calamities of Authors.

Homer was a beggar; Plautus turned a mill; Terence was a slave; Cervantes, the author of "Don Quixote," died of hunger; Bacon lived a life of meanness and distress; Raleigh died on the scaffold; Spenser, the charming, died in want; the death of Collins was through neglect, first causing mental derangement; Milton sold his copyright of "Paradise Lost" for £15; Dryden died in poverty and distress; Otway died prematurely and through hunger; Lee died in the gutter; Steele lived a life of perfect warfare with bailiffs; Goldsmith's "Vicar of Wakefield" was sold for a trifle to save him from the grip of law; Savage died in prison at Bristol, where he was confined for a debt of £8; Butler lived a life of penury and died poor; Chatterton, the child of genius and misfortune, destroyed himself.

Naming the Gerrymander.

The gerrymander was christened in 1813, although it must have been in operation long before that. A stanch old Federalist, Governor Elbridge Gerry, controlled through his legislature the redistricting of Massachusetts under the census of 1810. In the office of Benjamin Russell, an ardent Republican editor, hung a map of the state as newly subdivided by Gerry and his men. Gilbert Stuart's ready pencil whimsically added to the outlines of a grotesque district the wings and tail of a dragon.

"Ha!" he said when he had finished. "How's that for a salamander?"

The Republican Russell growled. "Better call it a gerrymander." And American politicians have taken his advice.

Barley Water.

Sometimes the doctor orders barley or oatmeal water for baby. When such is the case prepare as follows:

Add two tablespoonfuls of washed pearl barley or of oatmeal, as the case may be, to a quart of cold water. Boil this down to a pint, cooking slowly for about two hours. Then strain while hot and add a sufficient quantity of cold boiled water to make a quart of the fluid. Keep cool in a covered jar.

Jellyfish.

The bay of Naples abounds in medusae, or jellyfish, often growing as large as two feet in diameter and weighing fifty and sixty pounds. Some of them shine at night with a greenish light and are known as "noctiluca" (night lanterns) by the natives.

The Limit.

"They say old Closefist has still got the first dollar he ever made."

"Yes, and I'll bet he has still got the first umbrella he ever borrowed."—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

About.

"What did your baby cry about last night?" asked the man next door.

"About five hours," replied Mr. Youngpop.—Exchange.

COLGATE'S ATTITUDE ON LABOR QUESTION

Candidate Declares He Has Always Been in Sympathy With Workingmen.

Trenton, Sept. 15.—In the heat of the campaign for the primary nomination of the Republican candidate for Governor, efforts have been made to misrepresent the attitude of Senator Austen Colgate, who seeks the nomination, toward organized labor. These misrepresentotion have resulted in the receipt of a lot of inquiries by the Senator, asking for direct information as to his views toward labor and vital matters in which the workingemen of the State are interested.

"My position toward organized labor is and always has been one of sympathy toward the laboring men," said Senator Colgate today. "In my own business and as a member of the New Jersey Senate I have consistently upheld workingmen. My record as a legislator and as an employer of labor is open for the most exhaustive examination. Those who have the slightest misgiving as to my attitude toward labor as a member of the New Jersey Senate are respectfully referred to my legislative record."

As a matter of fact, Senator Colgate in the Senate has always given his most active support to all great labor reforms, especially those measures having to do with the conservation of child life in the factories by limiting and safeguarding the employment of young people.

Senatof Colgate introduced and fought to passage the Employes' Compensation Bureau law, by which operations of the compensation act are being carefully studied, and injured employes are being aided in obtaining compensation without undue delay or expense.

Senator Colgate also introduced the bill by which under the employers' liability law was increased too 66 2-3 per cent. He was also responsible for the amendment extending the benefits of the law to public employes receiving more than $1,200 a year, and the extension of the act so as to embrace diseases that can be reasonably traced as arising from occupational causes. He was also resonsible for the law requiring liability insurance to be carried by employers operating under the liability section of the act. Senator Colgate says he is perfectly willing to stand before labor on his legislative record.

R. F. P. VON MINDEN IS NAMED JUDGE-ADVOCATE

Judge R. F. P. von Minden, of this city, was honored by the State Military Board of the Jr. O. U. A. M., at its meeting in Elizabeth last night, by electing him judge-advocate-general of the military order. Judge von Minden has for several years been active in the work of the Jr. O. U. A. M., having held the office of State councilor.

The reports presented at the State board meeting last night indicates that the order is growing rapidly, and that the uniform rank is attaining a high degree of efficiency.

BOROUGH TAX RATE FOR COMING YEAR WILL BE $2.68

As a result of the increase of $38,000 in the county budget, which was announced recently by the Board of Freeholders. The Somerset Board of Taxation yesterday fixed the tax rate at .682, which is an increase of .087 over the rate last year. The increase of county ratables amounted to $1,180,623, but it would have taken an increase of over $6,000,000 in ratables to keep the rate below .60 on $100. the Freeholders having jumped their budget from $215,000 to $253,550.

Tax rate for the borough of North Plainfield has been fixed at $2.69, which is an advance of fourteen points over the tax rate of last year. The borough fun tax has also jumped up ten points from last year.

NEWARK AMUSEMENTS.

In the fourth act of Harry Clay Blaney's new comedy drama, "In Walked Jimmy," which will be seen at the Park Place Theatre, Newark, next week with matinees Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, a detective's distograph is used in an important scene. In order that he should get the perfectly correct effect, Mr. Blaney conferred with K. M. Turner, the inventor of the dictograph, who is the president of the General Acoustic Company, manufacturing these curious little machines. Mr. Turner became interested and personally rehearsed the actors in the scene in which the dictograph is used, and has loaned to Mr. Blaney the original instrument used in the celebrated McNamara case. "I do not believe in unreal or fake things when the real thing can be had, even for the stage, and I further believe the actor 'acts' better when he has the real 'props' to act with," says Mr. Blaney, and he should know.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, SEPTEMBER 15, 1916.

BRING THE BOYS HOME.

Members of Troop D, of Plainfield, and of every other organization from New Jersey now on the border are heartily sick of the job. There is no disputing the statement. It is a shame that a lot of useful young men from the North should have to remain in that torrid climate to go through drills which could just as well be performed on the camp ground at Sea Girt.

The citizen soldiers are not a lot of quitters. They merely feel that they are being imposed upon. Not one of those who went to the border, including all who have come back, would hesitate to go again if they saw actual service ahead of them. What they hate is the long period away from home amid many unpleasant surroundings, and only the monotony of routine work to occupy their minds and time. If there was a chance to try their skill with rifles on a lot of greasy Mexicans, the subject of returning home would never be discussed. But the boys enlisted in the hope that they would get some action, and up to date the only thing that has come their way has been the work of building a camp, swatting flys, fighting balky horses, and dodging rain drops in leaky tents, coupled with the unpleasant task of guard duty every few days.

The experience which the men have had at Douglas will not increase the interest in the National Guard. It is not going to stimulate enlistment for the new reserve army provided for in the Chamberlain bill, which we believe calls for 7,000 more men than there are at the present time enlisted in the Guard in New Jersey. It is sincerely to be hoped that our all-wise government will soon see its way clear to bring the boys back to New Jersey. They have done police duty long enough.

BUILD THE CITY HALL.

Plainfield people do not believe in doing things half way. That has been proven time and time again. The Council have before them the question of the erection of a city hall, and the bids submitted, coupled with the cost of the lot and the necessary furnishings if it is to be occupied as soon as completed, amount to approximately $150,000, the maximum which can be spent under the law.

There is no disputing the fact that the vast majority of the people of the city realize that a city hall is needed. A lot has been purchased which is as good a location as can be found unless a prohibitive sum be spent. The City Council will probably vote on the final awarding of the bids at the meeting next Monday night. A few dissatisfied persons, perhaps some of them local contractors who have seen what the bids are and want the job, are claiming that the cost is too high. They are suggesting that the requirements be cut down so that a cheaper building can be had.

Certainly a few thousand dollars should not stand in the way of a splendid municipal building. The city hall is not being erected because it is to be used for five years, or for ten years. It is being erected with the idea of caring for the growth of the city's business for the next fifty years, and possibly longer. No successful business house, in putting in improvements, does so for the immediate needs. They look about and see what will in all probability be needed five or ten or fifteen or more years in the future. It is sincerely to be hoped that Council will award the contract to the lowest bidder and get the work under way at once.

More than 80,000 union workers in New York city threaten to strike in defense of the demands of the street car motormen and conductors who are out. Such a walk-out would not be a death blow to New York commerce but it would cause untold suffering in certain classes and there is always the possibility that it would go for naught. Either the striking street car men are right or they are wrong, and Mayor Mitchell and his Public Service Commission have the authority to investigate and determine the truth. If such a strike is permitted it will be the fault of the officials.

Poor little Greece! After fighting valiantly for more than two years to keep out of the war the plucky nation finds itself beaten and bullied until further pretense at neutrality is impossible. This time England cannot proclaim to the world that she is the protector of the small nations. If Greece were to display the courage of Belgium her armies would turn on the Allied forces at Saloniki. True her fate would be that of King Albert's nation in such a case, and no one would advise such a blood sacrifice, but Belgium had no more cause for resisting the German horde.

A vote for Colgate at the Republican primaries means a vote for the domination of a man who can win at the November election. And there are hundreds and thousands of independent Republicans who realize that the fact that Edge has the support of the Republican organization means that he will represent the same old crowd that has been running the party for years, and who by their management gave the State a Democratic Governor when Mr. Wilson was first elected. Edge has the support of practically all of the "old guard."

Neutrals.

We're rubbing arnicky on Paw,
Some Frenchman poked him on the jaw.
This French-American he met
Upon the street car; vain regret.
Paw said he didn't see that France
Could hope to have an earthly chance.

Paw met a Belgian on the pier,
Who busted Paw right on the ear,
I don't know what it was Paw said
About the Belgians that led
Up to that most ferocious swat
Upon the ear that father got.

Paw bumped agin a Turk one day
While going into some buffet.
The Turk rug-seller took offense
O'er Paw's remarks at his expense.
The Turk-American with grace

Paw said that Russia'd been druv back.
A Russian-Yankee heard the crack,
And rushed at Paw. When torn apart
The two got in the station cart.
Policemen seemed to have a grudge.
Paw paid a fine before the judge.
You see, Paw is the sort of man
Who's proud he's an American.
He's very apt to loudly brag
About his land and wave the flag.
The nerve of him! It is absurd.
A real Yank dassent say a word.

Calf Objected to Being Turned Into Veal.

Some of our people on Main street are asserting since the first of the week that we have a regular Charlie Chaplin right in Sunfield. They state, at least, that our butcher, Frank Lemmon, went into the country Monday after a veal calf and the said veal calf, not seeming to relish the idea of being brought to town to be slaughtered, deserted the wagon by one mighty leap about two miles from town. Mr. Lemmon, busy studying on the high cost of living, drove on to town and was more or less abashed when the clerk at the market informed him that the calf was not in the wagon. Now Frank is explaining just how the calf got out. Funny he knows, isn't it?—Sunfield Sentinel.

From the Hoppertown Gazette.

The managers of our county fair are advertising a green hoss race, but, to be perfectly truthful, the editor of this paper ain't never seen a green horse yet, nor a pink one, nor a blue one.

Grandma Stubbs says she reads in the paper that they have some great spectacles in New York Hippodrome and she is figgerin' on goin' down there and buyin' a pair, as her sight ain't what it used to be.

Uncle Renfrew Stebbins has got a new set of false teeth. Let the improvements go on and we will soon have a very beautiful village.

A young lady has written to the editor to find out a cure for falling hair. The only way we know to prevent her hair from falling is to tie it firmly to a hook on the side of the wall when she goes to bed.

Lafe Tumms is such a strong union man that he won't patronize a railroad that doesn't run into a union depot.

- Proctor's Theatre -

In "The Rail Rider," the feature attraction at Proctor's today, the spectator follows the events which mark the turning point in the life of a railroad engineer on whom fortune smiled, and smiled broadly. According to the words from sage lips opportunity waits for no man, but for all of that it is no uncommon thing to hear recited a case from which the conclusion is drawn that Dame Fortune plays favorites occasionally. A case in point is that of Jim Lewis, driver of number seven, whose dismissal by the manager of the road is the beginning of a series of circumstances which make the climb to wealth and a happy marriage a none too arduous trip. "The Rail Rider" is interesting, with some melodrama mixed in and the mixture is pleasant ant, as visualized by Mr. Tourneur and enacted by House Peters and a splendid supporting cast. In addition today Edward Coxen and Lizette Thorne are featured in a thrilling mystery story, entitled "The Key," and the latest Mutual Weekly and travelogue pictures complete the program.

Tomorrow a double feature program is exhibited, consisting of a Paramount production, "Lydia Gilmore," the leading role of which is portrayed by Pauline Frederick, and Harold Lockwood and May Allison are co-starred in "The Masked Rider." "Lydia Gilmore" is presented to patrons of Proctor's tomorrow at the urgent request of many of the film fans of this city. Pauline Frederick scores an emotional triumph in the role of Lydia Gilmore, the young woman in Sir Henry Arthur Jones' play, compelled by circumstances to marry a man whom she at first considers in an indifferent light and later comes to hate for his infidelity. Miss Frederick receives excellent support in Vincent Serrano, as the erring husband. In addition tomorrow Harold Lockwood and May Allison are seen in a gripping story of the West, entitled "The Masked Rider."

On Wednesday and Thursday of next week Thomas Nixon's gigantic war spectacle, "The Fall of a Nation," will come to Proctor's.

- Plainfield Theatre -

Forty-five minutes of wholesome enjoyment was given the capacity audiences that crowded the Plainfield Theatre yesterday afternoon and evening, the return engagement of "The Junior Follies of 1916" being pronounced by all as the best ever. Sixteen people make up the cast, the greater part of these being feminine Pawlovas and Sembrichs. Elaborate scenery and beautiful costumes coupled with the splendid repertoire of songs and dances offered makes it an act long to be remembered. A significant feature of the production is the fact that all the participants are still in their teens. The act will be the headliner of the bill this evening and tomorrow afternoon and night. Those who have not witnessed it as yet will be given another chance tomorrow.

The well balanced program is rounded out by the following other numbers: The Three Bill Brothers, sensational acrobats, who treat with spectacular muscular feats seldom seen in this city; Ross and White, comedians, who offer a line of new jokes that are sure blue chasers; and the comedy sketch, "It Happened Last Night," composed of two men and women, who present twenty minutes of surprises.

Today sections of the Elks' parade held in Newark on Tuesday, in connection with the third annual reunion of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, will be shown in pictures. "Bills" from various parts of the State will be shown in line, as well as the prize winning floats. The Plainfield members of "885" occupy a portion of the film, and no doubt will be on hand with their friends to see themselves in the movies.

Feature Pathe releases are shown at every performance, including the famous Pathe Weekly, depicting all the latest news items at home and abroad, as well as the latest fashions direct from Paris.

What is said to be the biggest and best production in burlesque is due at the Plainfield Theatre Monday, September 18, matinee and night, when Spiegel's monster production, "The Merry Rounders," with Abe Reynolds, Geo. F. Hayes and an all-star cast are due for a week's engagement. Spiegel's productions in the past have always been known for their lavishness of equipment and costumes, and "The Merry Rounders," if anything, goes a step further than any show that has been sent out in past seasons by that master showman.

Abe Reynolds needs no introduction to local theatre goers. For the past three seasons he starred in the "College Girls," and made the character of "Jacob Rosenbloom" known in every city where high class burlesque is presented. Last season in "The Merry Rounders" Reynolds achieved the hit of his career. As a Hebrew comedian he stands alone in the burlesque field, and his work has been likened to that of David Warfield in the character that made him famous in "The Auctioneer."

THE FORUM

80 Park Place, Newark, N. J.
August 31, 1916.

My dear Mr. McLeod:

I was gratified a few weeks ago to learn that you are a candidate for county clerk. I sincerely hope that you will get the nomination, which undoubtedly would be followed by success on election day.

Your experience in the office will be a distinct advantage to the public, and your courteous treatment of all who have had business in the office while you have been there will, I am sure, be appreciated by the people.

With kind regards and best wishes for your success, I am,

Very truly yours,
FRANK BERGENS

TROOP D PLANNING FOR GREAT REUNION

Bugler Warren Ackerman is strengthening his bid for the title of chief noise maker in Troop D. To aid him in his campaign he has added an organ to the list of noise producing implements. Warren isn't exactly a wizard in the harmony line, but he can turn out a terrible lot of noise with his baby organ.

Top Sergeant Roy Cox happens to be in charge of the tent in which Ackerman is allowed to exist, and the sergeant has been caught giving the instrument the "once-over" on several occasions recently. 'Tis rumored that the Plainfield Councilman is contemplating a series of organ lessons to help while away the time down here.

Troopers James and Cady played the role of "wig-waggers" for Troop D in the sham battle yesterday. According to their fellow soldiers they don't know a whole lot about signalling but both claimed they could read each other's signs. That's the way this climate is affecting some of the men.

With the trench digging over, horses all shod, tents put in good shape for the winter, incinerators built and a myriad of other tasks that supply real opportunities for hard labor, the soldiers are beginning to wonder what Captain Borden will find for them to do down this way around Christmas time. There won't be any Christmas trees to cut down, but some of the cactus plants around here would serve as excellent substitutes.

Trooper Jim Conway denies that he is taking the rest cure in the Base Hospital. According to Jim when they get you half cured in this institution they make you serve out an apprenticeship peeling potatoes or washing dishes.

"We don't make much money, but we have a whole lot of fun," declares Joe Gallagher. "But just think what we could do with a lot of money and just as much fun," adds Roger Mellick.

From personal appearances we take it that some of the troopers are waiting for pay day to arrive before they treat themselves to a hair cut and shave. Or is this just another way of getting even with the government for not paying off on time?

Already the men are telling about the great reunions they are going to have upon their return in Plainfield. One scheme is to hold a mess kit dinner at the Queen City. The idea is to visit that hostelry one hundred strong with mess pans and tin cups and compel Bill Florescn to serve out the best he has on the menu in those receptacles.

Trooper Leslie Kinslow had his mind set on purchasing a little Mexican pony that has been offered for sale around here, but when Captain Borden gave his consent and told the trooper the only way he could get it home was to ride it, Kinslow changed his mind and decided to use his money for horse hide souvenirs.

Roger Mellick was the first D Troop man to be shot by the Essex boys in the sham battle yesteday, but "Rog" didn't particularly like the honor, so just when he was supposed to be dying the life of a hero, he got up and sprinted back to his own line. Of course, "Rog" was only half shot, but all is fair in warfare.

Trooper Brown went over to inspect the C and A smelter in Copper City yesterday afternoon and brought back half of the mountains as a souvenir, just because one of the officials told him there was half an ounce of copper ore in it.

Trooper Kirby declares that if we don't give him a boost or make a hero of him in the paper pretty scon he is going to stop reading the Daily Press. But inasmuch as we haven't the necessary imagination to do anything along this line for him, we're just going to keep him curious.

"Perc" Ransome wants the public to know that in his judgment Troop D walloped the stuffins out of Troop A in that sham engagement yesterday. If "Perc" is as good a judge of things in which he is an interested party as he is a leader, we'll take his word for it.

VALUE OF BORIC ACID.

Its Use as a Disinfectant and as a Healing Remedy.

A physician writes to Farm and Fireside saying "that the very best disinfectant known to science does not seem to be known to some people at all.

"I allude to boric acid or, as some people call it, boracic acid. It is exceedingly efficient, safe and economical. It is a white powder and makes the best dressing for wounds that modern doctors have ever discovered.

"In using peroxide or hydrogen it is always necessary to remember that while it is a disinfectant it is not a healing remedy at all, as it is acid in reaction and stimulating rather than healing to wounds.

"Boric acid is mild and safe in its action, promotes rapid healing of wounds, can be used as a dressing powder or dissolved in water as a cleansing solution. Boric acid in solution makes an excellent gargle for sore mouths or a lotion for sore eyes, and as it is not at all expensive a pound box of it should form part of the domestic supplies of every family.

"Always remember that boric acid is nonpoisonous in any ordinary quantity usually used, while bichloride of mercury and carbolic acid are exceedingly poisonous."

Over the Telephone Lines of Europe.

FRENCH SOLDIERS TELEPHONING RESULTS OF BATTLE.

Here and there through the news of the day and week come snatches of stories which indicate a rich store of telephone interest never fully revealed in the brief dispatches, says The Telephone Review, N. Y., introducing a sketch of some telephone exploits of the war.

They show a dozen different phases of the life or death meaning of the telephone, variations on the one big theme that telephone service in war-wracked Europe is playing the same indispensable part as in the commercial and private affairs of Americans.

From London we hear the nonchalant remark of an officer, who had evidently been a prisoner. His grim message is shot with a quiet irony rather intensifying than relieving the shadow of the words:

I narrowly escaped being shot just after dawn that morning because the Germans fixed the wire of a field telephone across the window out of which I was looking. The men told us that if the wire was touched the street would be shot to pieces.

So much for the importance of one telephone wire!

Rarely has there appeared a more vivid picture of the humanitarian as well as the military value of the telephone in the trenches than is depicted in a conversation related by "The Junior Sub." During the rest period, from two to five in the afternoon, when the soldiers and officers were snatching "forty winks," "Bobby" was awakened in disgust by shrapnel bursting near him.

Things are growing serious. Five minutes later Bobby, having dispatched his wounded to the dressing-station, proceeds with all haste to Captain Blaikie's dugout.

"How many, Bobby?"

"Six wounded. Two of them won't last as far as the rear, I'm afraid, sir."

Captain Blaikie looks grave.

"Better ring up the gunners, I think."

A figure appears in the doorway.

"Yes, sir."

"Ring up Major Cavanagh, and say that H21 is being shelled from P27. Retaliate."

"Verra good, sirr."

The telephone orderly disappears, to return in five minutes.

"Major Cavanagh's compliments, sirr, and he is coming up himself for the observe from the firing-trench."

Presently the gunner-major arrives, accompanied by an orderly who pays out wire as he goes. The major adjusts his periscope, while the orderly thrusts a metal peg into the ground and fits a telephone-receiver to his head.

"Number one gun!" chants the major, peering into his periscope; "three-five-one-nothing-lyddite—fourth charge!"

"Report when ready!" continues the major. "Report when ready!" echoes the orderly. Then—"Number one gun ready, sir."

"Fire!"

"Fire!" Then, politely—"Number one has fired, sir."

The major stiffens to his periscope, and Bobby Little, deeply interested, wonders what has become of the report of the gun. He forgets that sound does not travel much faster than a thousand feet a second, and that the guns are a mile and a half back. Presently, however, there is a distant boom. Almost simultaneously the lyddite shell passes overhead with a scream. Bobby, having no periscope, cannot see the actual result of the shot, though he tempts Providence by peering over the top of the parapet.

"The avenging shells go shrieking on their way, at intervals of twenty seconds. There are four muffled thuds, and four great columns of earth and debris spring up before the wood. Answer comes there none. The offending battery has prudently effaced itself."

At the front, as well as in the hectic offices of city editors on this side of the water, the telephone is the ready implement of the newspaper reporter. One up and coming correspondent recently obtained an interview with the Crown Prince of Germany over the telephone. In his hotel in Berlin the newspaper man was summoned to the telephone one morning, shortly after he had telegraphed a question on the duration of the war to the Crown Prince. He was informed that His Imperial Highness the Crown Prince was calling from German general headquarters in France. (Under the marvelous system of military telephones, by which the Kaiser keeps in touch with every section of the frontiers, it was undoubtedly possible to put the call through without making an appointment for it the day before, as mere citizens had to do before the war.)

An aid asked the newspaper man if he preferred to speak in English and answering in the affirmative the reporter was at once connected with the Crown Prince himself, who had telephoned to answer the question put to him as to whether or not the war would be ended in 1916. "It is difficult to say whether our victory will be proclaimed in 1916, but of the ultimate outcome I have no doubt," said the Crown Prince. He continued his conversation with a brief discussion of the American policy of war supply exports.

Good "copy" by telephone the American newspaper men are accustomed to, and if it has been a rarer thing in Europe until recently, this incident of the "Royal Democrat's" readiness to be interviewed by telephone is a brilliant augury for the future.

TELEPHONE FIRST AID TRAINING SAVES LIFE.

First Aid and Safety First Training, systematically pursued and wholeheartedly adopted by employees of the telephone company, is continually proving its value to the public as well as to the employees who have the full benefit of the course of training in these subjects given by the telephone company. The Telephone Review, N. Y., gives an instance of the splendid results of this policy on the part of one of the most enlightened corporations, in its direct bearing upon the public.

A boy twelve years old was found unconscious and bleeding in the road by two telephone employees, who immediately administered first aid treatment with the facilities afforded by the first aid kit always carried on motor trucks of the telephone company, and thus saved the boy's life. They found the boy lying in the road in a heap with his bicycle. He was not breathing, but the men applied their knowledge of resuscitation as they had learned it from the instructors of the telephone company. From the first aid kit they produced ammonia capsules which they made the boy swallow, and in a few moments he was breathing.

THE COUNTRY FIRE ALARM.

A brief account found in The Telephone Review, N. Y., of how a woman on a lonely farm, finding at midnight that her barn was in flames, saved her house and other buildings by prompt utilization of the means of protection afforded by the telephone, emphasizes again the importance of the telephone in its role of country fire alarm. In the old days, says The Telephone Review, a fire in the country might possibly be prevented from spreading to the other buildings of the farm, if there were enough men on the place to form any kind of a bucket brigade, or if the neighbors happened to see the smoke and flames in time to reach the scene of action before it was too late. Otherwise it was a case of "let it burn" because there was no possible way of stopping it. Not so to-day, with the rural telephone at work.

The case in question is one of any number which might be instanced: it is noticeable simply as a reminder that no one needs to be out of touch with help at such a time. The heroine of the story is the telephone operator whose quick mind and nimble fingers handled the situation with incredible speed. She summoned the neighbors to the scene of the fire and thus by her promptness and understanding saved all the buildings except the barn, which had gone too far before the discovery was made.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus [illegible] applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign [illegible] merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

The housewife is the "official buyer" for the home—in almost all families. She is, consequently, the official "ad reader" for the home.

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

DAY BEFORE THE BATTLE.

This is the day before the battle and the Royal artillery is getting ready for the fray. General Peter Simmons is recruiting his forces up to war strength and rush orders to attack at once have been issued. Pete is anxious to register a sweeping victory and will tolerate no more retreats. Outside talent, that is worthy of the name of talent, has been secured and it is said that a victory at all costs must be provided for the Royal manager. Money is money with Pete Simmons—just as it is with the rest of us. Men like Bradford, of the Philadelphia Colored Giants, do not come to this city for nothing, and when they do come they are out to win. No one can deny that "Brad" has the goods. He is a capable hurler, but says that he wants a good team behind him. He believes that he can round up a clever combination and, we understand, that he is going to do so.

ONCE CABARET KING.

Charlie Weinert—the prizefighter not the race horse—is in training "somewhere in New Jersey." Charley believes that his experiences on the Great White Way have done him more harm than good and is determined to live the simple life from now on. Certainly, Charley is to be commended for his decision. But it took him a long time to realize that "hitting the high spots" was no pastime for a successful ring master. Charley is but one of many pugilists who are beginning to realize what condition and training means. It is no longer a case of the hardest man winning. It is a case of the man in the best condition taking the honors. Congratulations, Charley. You sure are no Rip Van Winkle.

ANOTHER LEAGUE SEASON.

That the City League is going to re-organize for the year 1917 we do know. Just how successful the circuit will be, we do not know, but we venture the opinion that the coming season will be the best yet. It cannot be said that the circuit season just past was not both a social and financial success. Friendships were cultivated and baseball players were made and encouraged in their art. The winning combination was one worthy of the honors secured. The second team could not have been a better outfit and the third place clan deserves plenty of commendation.

HIGH HOPES HAD WE.

We were living in hopes that Hope Chapel ballists would take on the Baptists last Saturday. Unfortunately the action was not taken and the game had to be thrown out of the league records. Despite the fact that a Hope victory meant a tie for third place, Manager Britt Martin did not permit his boys to stage the conflict. It was a matter of principle and not ill feeling that prompted Martin's action. At least we hope so. All reference to the one "fight" of the season should be downed at once. There was no "fight" and we hope there will never be one. If that City League squabble be a "fight," then we will never care to see Jess Willard in action. Nothing to it.

WHAT TEMPERANCE DOES.

Temperance is a virtue. We read that somewhere. But, temperance is also a gift that is as priceless as anything of which we can think. To allow a man to exercise his free will in regards to the "drink" question is the motive of the Tab organization. Nothing is forced upon the young man. All is left to his own free will. That benefits, of the highest class, are to be found in the folds of temperance cannot be denied. Athletes who are drinkers are athletes for a day; athletes who do not drink are athletes until they grow too old for further service. There is no profit in drinking, inasmuch as there is no profit in patronizing a vice; there is profit in abstaining, inasmuch as we have facts to prove the contention. Witness the splendid showing of the Tabs in all branches of athletic sports.

THAT PENNANT RACE.

"Just now the Phillies and Tigers are favored in the pennant fights. Up Boston way the fans still think the Red Sox and Braves will meet in the classic. It is all Brooklyn in Brooklyn. Out in Chicago the White Sox are considered unbeatable. To get down to business, it is a case of pay your money and take your choice. An upset is likely to occur at any time in either or both races. Meanwhile, the Superbas, Phillies and Braves are happy because they don't have to go up against the Giants just now. McGraw's men took turns wrecking the hopes of the Superbas, Phillies and Braves and the advantage gained by these three teams was practically wiped out by McGraw's admitted 1917 champions. Arguments and figures will not win the title in either league. Games must be won on the baseball field and the teams with the best percentage at the close of the sason will carry off the respective pennants. Just at present the fans are entitled to three guesses in each league and any one of the guesses may prove correct, and then again—but what's the use?

"The world's series games will be played in ——— and ———. The fan is permitted to fill in the blank spaces to suit himself and then go out and produce facts, figures, and, if necessary, fight to prove that his choice is a sure winner."—Newark News.

TOKEN FOR MATTY.

The token of esteem from New York fans to Christy Mathewson, bought with a fund raised through the columns of The Evening World, will be presented to the Old Master at the Polo Grounds today. It will be an order entitling Matty to his selection of one from three or four paintings, valued at $1,000. Both he and Mrs. Mathewson preferred a good oil painting to any other present. It is something they can keep for life and leave to the younger Mathewson as a token of what New Yorkers thought of the father.

As some time will be required in the selection of this painting, and as it would be impracticable to present a picture to Matty on the ball field, the committee has decided to present him with a written order that will entitle him to the present. He can then take his time about the selection.

The amount of money raised is somewhat less than $1,000, but arrangements have been made by which a reduction in price will be granted in view of the sentiment of the purchase. As soon as the picture has been chosen, photographic copies of it will be made by Matty and sent to the New York papers.

ROLAY GIANTS INTEND TO "PAD UP" FOR DUNELLEN AND TAB CONTESTS

Pete Simmons to Present Almost Entirely Rejuvenated Team—Stewart, a Newark Star, to Play—Payne and Murphy May Be Pitchers—Culver Signs to Play Short.

When Pete Simmons leads his Royal Giants against Dunellen tomorrow afternoon, the fans will be given an opportunity to see several new faces. At least the Royal manager says that his boys will be considerably assisted by several new players. Inasmuch as the Royals are out for victory at all costs, some interesting battle is looked forward to.

On the mound tomorrow Simmons will use Payne, a pitcher who hails from Jersey City and who is supposed to be clever. Behind the bat Waldorf will be seen, although Stewart, a Philadelphia Colored Giant catcher, is scheduled to perform in the right garden. Cooper will do the first station duty, while Hatchett will be retained at the second station. Culver, a shortstop who has been doing considerable playing in the South, has been secured to do shortfield duty for the Royals. At the third station Griffen will handle everything that comes his way. In the outer works Simmons will use Hall, Borden and Stewart.

When the Royals face the Tabs on Sunday practically the same lineup as presented tomorrow will be ushered on the field. According to Pete Simmons either Bradford or Murphy, of the Philadelphia Colored Giants, will do the pitching. Both Bradford and Murphy perform with the Philly team and Murphy is rated as the best pitcher in the Houston stable of Hurlers.

The team that Tommy Apgar will present tomorrow will include Willerington, who is said to be a Souther League star. Johnny Dixon and Eddie Bergen will be in the points for the Apgarites. The Scottmen will, in all probability, use Cliff Randolph and Mickey McFadden on the mound, with either Teeling or Mullin behind the bat.

INNER TRIANGLES TO HAVE FAST ELEVEN

Scotch Plains Hustlers Already Signed up for September 30.

The Inner Triangles have started their football schedule and are looking for games with teams averaging 120 pounds in weight. John Cartwright, of 209 Jackson avenue, is the manager of the team and is anxious to confer with the managers of rival elevens.

The Inner Triagles would like to hear from teams in Garwood, Westfield, Elizabeth and Bound Brook, and are particularly anxious to talk business with the fellows with whom they played basketball last year. Up to the present time but one game has been arranged. That attraction has been scheduled with the Scotch Plains Hustlers and will be played on the Central Street field September 30. Any one desiring further particulars regarding any phase of the subject, should see Manager John Cartwright.

League Limelight

NOTE—Short, snappy articles relative to the personality, popularity and prowess of each of the many baseball players in this city will appear in the "Sport Topics" daily. This department is conducted by the sporting editor, who welcomes suggestions.

EDDIE COUGHLAN.

Eddie Coughlan the hard hitting Netherwood and Tab third baseman, is in the league limelight just now. And, who has a better right to be among the stellar talent than Eddie?

We do not know just when Eddie began paying baseball, but we do know that he has been a star for some time and that many fans believe that he, of all the local players, is entitled to a chance in the big show. Coughlan has no peers in this vicinity and knows but few equals anywhere. His slugging ability earned him an enviable reputation as a baseball player. Having played on the champion Netherwood team for two seasons, Eddie is quite an experienced player. There is no getting away from the fact that Edward is one of the most dangerous men in a pinch. Many a pitcher would just as soon have Ty Cobb face him in a tight situation. We understand that Eddie's ambition is to clout the cover off the baseball on Sunday. Sporting goods men better lay in an extra supply of "cork-centres."

We will have Frank Mullin in the "Limelight" tomorrow. Place your orders now, gentlemen.

Justifiable Deception.

The talk had gone back and fro, and the youthful Socialist had been announcing that no man ought to get his living by cheating, and we all listened to him and agreed that it was dreadful when men and women did not tell the truth, but tried to make their living by deceiving people. Millionaires, landowners, financiers, we scarified all of them who cheat the public.

"No one should make a living by deception," said the young man impressively:

Then a quiet voice from a woman came from the corner of the sofa, "What about the conjurer?"—Exchange.

PHYSICAL CULTURE CLASS ORGANIZED

George A. Keane Will Be Physical Instructor of Local Organization.

At the regular meeting of the local chapter 122, I. C. S. Fraternity, last night, about twenty members formed an Anti-Sour Face League. Upon the formation of this league, the president of the fraternity, Harry W. Swivel, made appropriate remarks. There followed a brief, but interesting address by George A. Keane, the physical instructor of the local chapter.

In his address Mr. Keane pointed out the dangers of shallow breathing and of overloading the stomach. He emphasized the need of daily exercise and of the uniform development of the body, nerve tissue and muscle. Mr. Keane assisted in the fromation of a physical culture class and will act as instructor for this class. Much is expected of the movement and it is hoped that the institution of this class will be but the beginning of a chain of physical culture societies.

STEVENSON MAY GO TO PINGRY SCHOOL

At Least, Newspaper Reports to That Effect Circulate in Elizabeth.

It is reported in an Elizabeth newspaper that Allan Stevenson, of West Seventh street, this city, will enter Pingry and, according to the news report much is expected of the local lad. He is referred to as a "giant," being, as he is, over six feet tall.

The Betsytown paper says that Allan has been hardened by a month's stay at Fort Terry; that he is a halfback and that he can play basketball. All of which is pretty nearly correct. One writer, in an admittedly original style, says: "He ought to be a great help to his parents when he grows up."

RAHWAY HIGH TO RESUME FOOTBALL

Plainfield High School came near having no "big" Rahway football game. At least there was some talk of having no football team at Rahway this year. But all such rumors have now vanished as the Rahway lads set up a "howl" and their cries were heeded.

Practice will begin next Wednesday at Riverside Park under the direction of Coach Ellison, of Montclair. The seasoned timeber available for the first string this year includes Walter Milnes, Russell Ludlow, John Reitemeyer, David Jacobowitz, Jack Nessman, Carlton Jones and George Mantle.

TRAP and FIELD

By Peter P. Carney.

The Interstate Association—the National Commission of trapshooting—accomplishes many things each year for the promotion and encouragement of trapshooting along the proper lines, and the idea of giving yardage trophies in the Grand American Handicap is right in line with its other good thoughts.

The handicaps in the Grand American range from 16 to 23 yards—and the Interstate Association gave a trophy to the trapshot who made the best score from each one of the yardage marks, provided, of course, that the shooter was not in the first three high scores, for these three received other trophies.

This scheme gave the inferior trapshots, who wouldn't have a chance against the cracks, an opportunity to win a trophy from 16 yards, and it gave the cracks beyond 20 yards a chance for a trophy, even if they were handicapped too hard. It gives more trophies out, to be sure, but every shooter likes to get something for his efforts. The trapshooters liked the idea and it would not be surprising if the yardage trophy system was operated in all of the subsidiary handicaps in 1917.

The Grand American Handicap yardage trophies went to Middle West, West and South. Martin Smith, of Oklahoma City, won the 16 yards prize with 96; Ernest Caldwell, of Troy, Tenn., took the 17 yards trophy with 95; Charles Erwin, of Greensboro, Ala., 18 yards, with 96; Al. Koyen, of Freemont, Neb., the 19 yards with 96; Ira Gailbraith, of West Frankfort, Ill., 20 yards with 96; J. A. Frink, of Worthington, Kansas, 21 yards with 96; Max Kneusel, Ottowa, Ill., 22 yards, with 96, and Mark Arie, Thomasboro, Ill., 23 yards with 91.

"GAUGE" MAY REPEAT.

Fans, remember that "great game" George Miller hurled for the Elizabeth division of the Public Service not so long ago? Well, there has been a protest filed, regarding the eligibility of two of the Betsytowners, Ray Berdnaier and Binger. It might be that Miller will have to pitch that game all over agin.

FIELD IN CONDITION.

The Dunellen baseball field has been put in fine shape. John Hill and Wesley Paine have attended to that matter. Now, the Royals cannot complain. Nor can Dunellen make excuses.

—If you have something to rent, you have something to advertise—and something that it will pay you to advertise adequately and persistently.

BUY IT IN PLAINFIELD

If YOU spend your money AT HOME with HOME MERCHANTS you get a second chance at that same old dollar; when that dollar goes out of town, it's—"Good-bye Mary."

A dollar is no "carrier pigeon." Send it away and it will never come back. Keep Plainfield made money in Plainfield.

Consider the power of a dollar when it is spent at home. It is like magic. It circulates—it pays off a hundred obligations—it creates business and puts people to work in this community. But the dollar sent away to an out-of-town house does nothing for Plainfield—it is dead to us—out of commission forever as far as we are concerned.

There are only two kinds of dollars—the "Dollar With Wings" and the "Development Dollar."

The "Dollar with Wings" flies away with a value that rightfully belongs to the home community. If spent with a Plainfield Merchant its value would stay with you and help to build up your interests.

The "Development Dollar" goes to build up Plainfield. It stays right here in our own community—it puts people to work here—builds roads and schools and churches and homes.

No matter what your position in life may be, some of its benefits "filter" down to you. "Letting George do it" is poor logic. We want YOU to cultivate the "Try Plainfield First" habit.

MEN'S ASSOCIATION OF PLAINFIELD — RELIABILITY, QUALITY, SERVICE, VALUE — BUSINESS MEMBER

The power of the press can be applied to any business by using good Printing.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

Press' printing is the result of ceaseless efforts to render the best service.

The store's advertisement is the store's daily message to —and there is not often a day in which there is not some-g new and interesting in that message.
The shopper may often reduce the VALUE-GETTING WER of her dollar to fifty cents—simply through neglect-to read the ads, or to know values—and by buying at "the rest place."

PLAINFIELD HORSES TO RACE AT WEEQUAHIC

"Baron" and "Owyhamac" Will Be Entered in Newark Matinee.

It is highly probable that the "Baron" and "Owyhamac," owned by Dr. H. E. Winter, of this city, will compete in the Weequahic race on September 23. "Reuben Hal," owned by A. C. Hensler, will no doubt be driven by Adam C. Blair.

The Road Horse Association of New Jersey has decided to postpone the matinee scheduled for tomorrow afternoon, owing to the fact that the races would interfere with the running off of the all-around national track and field championship. A program of six classes will be run on September 23. The classes follow; 2:35 trot for suit of clothes; 2:28 trot and pace, three in five, for silver cup donated by Dr. W. D. Mitchell; 2:23 trot and pace. A silver cup has been donated by the East Orange Elks as award in th 2:18.

WESTFIELD FANS CAN LAUGH AT DUNELLEN

At Least They Believe That Dunellen Defeat Gives Them Right.

The fans of Westfield are still laughing ove rthat victory registered by the High School boys at the expense of the Dunellen team. It is reported that George Ortleib was the only experienced basebadd player on the team. Both Marenghi and Gilmartin were stars of last year's High School squad.

It is most likely that when Tommy Apgar reads this announcement he will offer the Westfield leader another chance to prove the ability of his team. And besides it would not surprise us if a regular battle was staged. A little of the old rivalry that used to exist between the baseball contingents of Westfield and this city might be resurrected. At the present time, according to the Westfield line of reasoning, the Dunellen team is disgraced. There is only one way to redeem the defeat. And that way is one that lies open to Manager Thomas Apgar, of Clinton avenue, Plainfield.

ST. JOSEPH MANAGER LOOKS FOR GAMES

Would Like to Hear From the City League Leaders.

The Dunellen A. C., so the report runs, is to adorn Hyde Field tomorrow afternoon. This team is considered the second best aggregation in Dunellen and comes to North Plainfield with a "rep," against which the St. Joseph's will have to battle.

Eddie Conshay will be on the mound for the Saints, while Andy McDonough will do the catching. Andy is rapidly rounding into once of the best catchers in this vicinity. Clean playing features his efforts at all times. The visitors will probably have Waldron or Schneiderwind on the hillock. The rest of the lineups will be the same as used ón less auspicious occasions.

The St. Joseph manager is anxious to hear from the managers of City League teams. The Tabs' leader is being sought by Manager McDonough, who wants to talk business.

Osman Pasha's Daring.

One of the most gallant generals that ever surrendered to the enemy was Osman Pasha, the immortal defender of Plevna. Surrounded by an immeasurably superior army of Russia, Osman kept his flag flying for 142 days, inflicting a loss of 40,000 men on the enemy and losing 30,000 of his own garrison. It was only when both provisions and ammunition failed that he decided on that desperate attempt to cut his way through the investing army. The attempt, one of the most daring and resolute in history, failed, and Osman was at last compelled to admit defeat. So impressed, however, were the enemy with his valor that as he was carried wounded through their tanks they greeted him as a conqueror with cheers and presented arms.

Two Days In One.

Chatham island, lying off the coast of New Zealand, in the south Pacific ocean, is peculiarly situated, as it is one of the few habitable points of the globe where the day of the week changes. It is just on the line of the demarcation between dates. There at 12 noon on Sunday Sunday ceases and instantly Monday meridian begins. Sunday comes into a man's house on the east side and becomes Monday by the time it passes out of the western door. A man sits down to his noonday dinner on Sunday, and it is Monday noon before he finishes it.—London Globe.

Painting Overhead.

When it is necessary to paint a window or any object overhead the paint or liquid usually runs off the handle of the brush and then over the worker's hands. If you will take two pieces of tin soldered at the ends, says C. H. Thomas in the Popular Science Monthly and tack them on either side of the brush below the bristles, you will have a little cup which catches this overflow paint. Each time the brush is dipped into the paint can the shield is automatically emptied.

Sure.

Mrs. Smiley—Here we've been married ten years, and my husband still says I'm an angel. Her Friend—But does he really mean it, my dear? Mrs. S.—Perhaps not. But don't you think I'm lucky to have a husband who pretends to mean it?—Pittsburgh Chronicle-Telegraph.

Architecture.

A distinguished philosopher spoke of architecture as frozen music, and his assertion caused many to shake their heads. We believe this really beautiful idea could not be better reintroduced than by calling architecture silent music.—Goethe.

His Choice.

"A bad beginning means a good ending."

"That may be, but if I can have my choice I'll take the fine start every time."—Detroit Free Press.

The John Wanamaker Store

Is Easily Get-at-able

The Subway is running and leads directly into the Store.

Railroads into Grand Central Station, and Staten Island ferries, reach the Store via Subway.

Hudson tubes from Jersey; elevated roads, Third and Ninth; busses on Fifth Avenue; all pass in a few blocks of the Store.

The Store's service is maintained at its usual efficiency.

'Phone orders (4700 Stuyvesant) and letter orders will be filled promptly.

The Store is unusually filled with customers these days.

China Sale

That one can choose a complete 100-piece set at $8.50 or $10 is one of the surprises of September China Sale. These inexpensive sets were made especially for us by an American factory to which we gave an order for a thousand dinner sets. In shape and decoration equal to our year-long $14 and $15 grades. They are perfectly good dishes to live with happily.

America garden terra cottas are now being disposed of at a third less.

Second Gallery, New Building.

Housefurnishing Sale

There are certain large groups of white and gray enamelware of family electric table articles, such as coffee percolators, chafing dishes and grills, of rustless bathroom furnishings, of woodenware without knots, all offered at once-in-six months' low prices.

Besides, at considerable half-yearly savings are the celebrated White Mountain refrigerators, a large collection of stout, durable trunks and standard sewing machines.

This Sale specializes in the lifetime Kreamer tinware and japanned ware at 25 per cent. less than regular prices.

Seventh Gallery, New Building.

Chinese Furniture One-third Less

Chairs, rockers, settees, tables; of grass; cleverly designed, well made. Should have been here last March. Just arrived, and must go out quickly. So—

One-third less.

Fifth Gallery, New Building.

Used Pianos and Player-Pianos—Sale

Instruments taken in exchange and put in good order in our own factory. Player-pianos slightly used—virtually new—marked for $55 to $155 below regular standard prices.

Linen Sale

Just out of customs, some fine Belfast towels of soft laundered huck with damask borders, hemstitched ends. They are extra large as well as of extra quality at $7.50 dozen.

This annual Autumn Linen Sale offers remarkable values in table linens and towels—qualities impossible to duplicate today in the open market.

Foresheltered buying has many advantages, has it not?

Third Gallery, New Building.

Silk Petticoats $1.50 to $3.85

Discontinuing certain styles and hurrying out the small quantities we have on hand, bring down prices like this: $1.50 for former $2 petticoats of messaline; $2 for former $3 messaline petticoats; $3 for former $3.85 petticoats of taffeta or messaline; $3.85 for former $5 and $5.75 petticoats of taffeta. Various colors at each price.

At the Start of the Season— Women's and Men's

From an American maker who competes with the French—one of the few—in fancy, embroidered, lace and clocked stockings. A large purchase for our two stores just after his stock-taking.

$2.15 for Our $3 to $5 Grades—Women's

(All in Perfect Condition)

There can be no doubt about the grades because we found in our own regular stocks of $3 and $5 stockings the exact quality and pattern from the same mill. Of course, we rdeuce their price and add them to the sale at $2.15.

Sport stockings; ribbed boots and plain top.
Drop-stitch striped boots, with plain top.
Black and colored grounds, all-over stripes.

$1.75 for Our $3 to $6 Grades—Women's

("Mill-runs"—Imperfections in Weaving)

"Mill-runs" from this mill are often sold in stores (not here) as perfect. The imperfections are only in the weaving and scarcely noticeable. There are no holes. The writer looked through many before finding the imperfection, but they are "mill-runs" and sold as such here.

Of these stockings we also found in our stocks the exact grade and pattern at $3 to $6, but we do not reduce them because they are perfect.

Plain black or white, gauze weight.
Plain all-over shot effects; various colors.
Sports stockings—plain black top with black and white checked boot; plain or ribbed, white or colored grounds, vertical striped.
Ribbed black and white; or all white. Also numerous fancy styles; plain or ribbed, clocked or striped.

$1.25 for Extra-Size Stockings—Women's

"Mill-runs" of Our $1.50 to $2 Grades

Mostly plain black; a few in white and assorted colors; staple, and rarely found in a sale, especially in extra sizes.

Two months later these stockings would go "like hot cakes" for Christmas gifts. Is it too early to buy them now and lay them aside? Buy double the quantity; half for yourself; half for gifts.

OUR VARIED MONEY

No Two Classes Have Exactly the Same Quality or Value.

A GOLD AND SILVER COMEDY

Tribulations of a More or Less Honest Citizen Who Was Stuck With Silver Trade Dollars and Who Wanted to Exchange Them For a Gold Coin.

When a new treasurer of the United States takes office his predecessor hands over to him assets to the value of billions. But it is a varied lot of securities that come into his possession—bonds, securities of all kinds, gold bars and silver coin, base metals, gold notes, silver notes, gold in the reserve fund, governmental legal tender notes national bank notes, fractional currency and subsidiary coin.

No two classes have the same qualities, no two exactly the same value, intrinsic or otherwise. Yet people are so eager to get anything with the stamp of Uncle Sam that they accept it anywhere at its face value unless it is required for some purpose which calls for the peculiar quality of a certain kind of money.

It is a mark of confidence in Uncle Sam that his beautiful silver certificates are taken at their face value when in reality they bear about the same relation to gold dollars as adulterated food does to pure food—only like the adulterated foods, a certain artificial value must be given to them.

When the food adulterater turns out his product, the government, in just horror, says it is wrong to tamper with food, and the person who does it must go to jail. When Uncle Sam sends out a silver disk stamped with his mark he has made a very good business stroke, for he has placed in circulation as a dollar 50 cents' worth of silver and put 44 cents' worth of bullion into his treasurer's charge and, like the adulterated food dealer, has made a good transaction.

A poor wreck of humanity with a grateful streak in his heart not long since found himself in possession of six trade dollars. His first inclination after the shock was to buy a whole lot of bait and go away off on a fishing trip, but remembrance of his mother came over him, and, like a good fellow, he resolved to send her a five dollar gold piece.

His first surprise came when he found that his trade dollars, which contained more silver than do the silver dollars, were valued only as bullion and his whole $6 was worth only $3.36. He had overlooked the fact that when those dollars were issued, back in 1873, Uncle Sam had omitted to indorse them or to give them any monetary value other than their silver content.

So he did with his $6 what his Uncle Samuel had done—he went through a little transaction in high finance which makes one blush for him. He mixed his dollars up with some "standard" silver dollars and persuaded a small storekeeper to give him bills for them. It happened that these bills were silver certificates.

He tried to induce the treasury department to take them in exchange for the gold piece intended for his mother, but the treasury department politely told him that, while the law provided that the secretary of the treasury should maintain gold and silver on a parity, the section had been construed to mean that silver certificates could not produce gold coin.

Thereupon wild thoughts of the bait and the fishing trip rushed upon him again, but his blood was now up, and he determined somehow to secure that gold piece for the mother, who was becoming momentarily dearer. He succeeded after a time in exchanging his silver certificates for a legal tender note for $5, and, although such notes are protected by a gold reserve equal to only about a third of the issue, the department without hesitation gave him the gold coin.

The narrator of the tale could not remember whether the gold piece ever reached the mother or was spent to celebrate the modern method of the transmutation of metals.—Washington Post.

Testing Ideas.

I say wisdom is gathered on foot, along country roads. Collect your ideas where you can, alley, boulevard, office, lecture hall, theater, dinner table, library, wharf, picture gallery, street car, opera house, curbstone or courtroom, but test them on the road. Confronted with the realities of soil and salt water and the character shaped by these they will look vastly less momentous or vastly more so.—Atlantic Monthly.

A Good Excuse.

"Well, what made you late tonight?" demanded his life partner, glancing at the clock.

"Er—er—why, I took Sloakhurst home from the club, and his wife made me take him back again!" replied he of the ingenious mind.—St. Louis Post Dispatch.

Revenge.

"I've been calling this number for nearly five minutes," said the irate subscriber.

"What number?"

"I'm so irritated I'm almost tempted not to satisfy your feminine curiosity."—Washington Star.

The next best thing to getting rid of our burdens is to make light of them.—Philadelphia Record.

WHEN A WHALE BLOWS.

It Is Steam, Not Water, the Cetacean Spouts Into the Air.

Since a whale breathes air when it is below the surface the breath must be held, for if water should be taken into the lungs the animal would drown. Thus as soon as a cetacean comes to the surface its breath is expelled and a fresh supply inhaled before it again goes down.

The breath which has been held in the lungs for a considerable time under pressure is highly heated, and as it is forcibly expelled into the colder outer air it condenses, forming a column of steam. A similar effect may be produced by any person on a frosty morning the breath is suddenly blown from the mouth.

That whales spout out of the blowholes water which has been taken in through the mouth is probably more widely believed than any other popular misconception. As a matter of fact, such a performance would be impossible, because a whale's nostrils do not open into the back of the mouth, as do those of a man, and the animal is not able to "breathe through its mouth," as can ordinary land mammals.—Roy Chapman Andrews in New York Independent.

Annual September Sale of Pianos and Player Pianos

Besides being the great annual Piano Clearance event, the 1916 September Piano Sale is a most important merchandising announcement from the Chickering Warerooms under the direction of the makers of the Chickering Piano. Space must be made for a great display of forthcoming Chickering styles, and not only used pianos and player pianos, but also many practically new pianos and player pianos of famous makes have been marked at

Unprecedented Price Reductions

and will be sold on payment terms of utmost convenience.

Now is the right time for parents to create a new interest in the home, and this sale provides incentive irresistible to make yours a home of full musical enjoyment.

The sale is comprised of 127 fine pianos and players, some of which have been taken in exchange for new instruments and are marked at minimum prices. All of these have been thoroughly overhauled and are in splendid condition.

Other pianos are in discontinued styles or are pianos which have been slightly used in demonstrating, etc. These are, of course, practically new and therefore the very height of fine value.

HE LOST HIS FRECKLES.

James Whitcomb Riley's Tale of How the Trick Was Turned.

As a youth James Whitcomb Riley was burdened with freckles. Always sensitive regarding anything reflecting upon him personally, he grieved over what he considered an insurmountable misfortune. He told of his effort at emancipation:

"One day I saw in a drug store window what was said to be a sure cure for moth, tan, freckles, etc. I pondered possession of a bottle, but—50 cents! Of course I could never buy it. Why, I didn't get 50 pennies in a whole year."

But he managed to finance himself by manipulation of the market money when doing errands for his parents and he bought a bottle of the magic stuff. He ran with it to the haymow and rubbed it all over his face, then raced off to school to make up the time he had lost.

"When I stepped inside the door all the school started to laugh at me," he says. "The teacher asked me what I meant by coming to school in such a condition. Bewildered and ignorant of what it all meant, I followed her out the door. She showed me my face in a mirror, and it was like a yellow Easter egg. The directions had said to rub it off immediately with salt water and white of an egg, all of which I had missed. To get the stain off, my face had to be rubbed until the skin left it. But when it was all over the freckles were actually gone and never came back."

MILITARY MARCHING.

The Pace Varies With the Quality and Size of the Command.

The "Army Drill Book" tells that trained and hardened infantry can cover from twenty to twenty-five miles a day when in small bodies. As the size of the command increases the distance covered becomes less, as the rate is lowered and time is needed to get all the units into and out of camp.

With a regiment or less of average troops—regulars—marching over average roads the rate should be from two and three-quarters to three miles an hour. Large bodies will travel from two to two and a half miles an hour, while a division cannot be expected to accomplish more than twelve and one-half miles a day.

Of course all these figures will vary with different conditions of roads and weather. Untrained troops could not approach them until hardened. Though they might do better for a day or two, they could not keep up the steady pace of the seasoned regulars for a long distance.

Marching with full equipment is hard physical work and, like every other form of labor, requires a proper period of training. The seasoned force will keep up a steady pace with ten minute halts every hour, a fifteen minute stop being made at the end of the first half or three-quarters of an hour. Green troops are apt to straggle badly.—Outing.

An Anecdote of Handel.

On one occasion Handel was caught in a shower of rain and was obliged to seek shelter in a blacksmith's forge. Either Handel was in a silent mood or else the blacksmith showed no conversational symptoms, for in a little while the latter began hammering away at his anvil, accompanying his work with a song. Handel was listening all the time to the strokes of the hammering on the anvil, which, by producing two harmonic sounds, according in time and tune with the tune the man sang, formed a bass accompaniment. Handel, on reaching home, remembered the air and the hammer accompaniment. He wrote down both, and so we owe to a shower of rain the composition known as "The Harmonious Blacksmith."

Withering.

Enoch Eastman, an old time Iowa lawyer, on one occasion appeared before a young judge and to enforce a point he desired to make brought with him and attempted to read Blackstone to the court, whereupon the young judge, after moving uneasily about in his seat for awhile, said, "Mr. Eastman, I've read Blackstone."

"Oh, hev ye!" responded Enoch, looking at the judge over the top of his spectacles with an air of surprise.—Case and Comment.

Consoling.

"What did you say your age was?" he remarked, between dances.

"Well, I didn't say," smartly returned the girl, "but I've just reached twenty-one."

"Is that so?" he returned consolingly. "What detained you?"—Exchange.

Black Opals.

The gem most sought after is the Australian black opal, which is found nowhere else in the world. It appears in limited quantities in the matrix of ironstone and sandstone in the Lightning Ridge district of New South Wales.

Dainty.

Blobbs—What a dainty little handkerchief she carries. It looks like a cobweb. Slobs—Yes, a thing like that isn't to be sneezed at.—Philadelphia Record.

Facial Adornment.

First Maid—Does your mistress wear much jewelry? Second Maid—No; she has only rings under her eyes.—Boston Transcript.

Lame, but Good.

Cumso—Why didn't you come last week as you promised? Fangle—I sprained my ankle. Cumso—A lame excuse.

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

TROPHIES OF WAR

Captured Flags Carefully Preserved by Uncle Sam.

ON VIEW IN NAVAL ACADEMY

Restored by Special Process After Having Been In Tatters For Years, They Are a Living Proof of the Heroism of Our Soldiers and Sailors.

In the auditorium of the academic building at the United States Naval academy at Annapolis are 15,000 square yards of flags, most of them trophy flags.

The capture of these tattered banners helped to make the stars and stripes respected by the nations of the earth and reflect undying glory on the men of the United States navy. They are living proofs of the heroism and courage of the soldiers and sailors who fought to maintain the flag when the nation was struggling for independence and later when it was fighting to establish firmly the foundations of the greatest republic of the world.

From 1847 to 1901 this collection of flags, which should be one of America's most highly prized treasures, was kept at the Naval academy and exhibited in the old naval institute hall.

In 1901, when it was decided to tear down this building, the flags were packed in iron boxes and stored away. Being in a dilapidated condition when they were taken down to be packed, grave fears were entertained that they would be further damaged by moths.

During the ten years they remained in storage repeated efforts were made to have the government take some steps to put them in a permanent state of preservation, but without success. In 1912 congress appropriated $30,000 for the work of preservation.

About three months later Mrs. Amelia Fowler, an expert on flag preservation, obtained the services of forty needlewomen, who began the arduous task of sewing over by hand every inch of the 15,000 square yards in the flags, as the natural decay of age as well as the almost hopeless ravages of moths made any ordinary method of preservation seem impossible.

A special process was originated by Mrs. Fowler, which is described as "spreading the tattered remnants of each flag upon a backing of heavy Irish linen of neutral color."

The delicate work was guided by the original measurement of the flag, by a knowledge of its design and by placing in vertical and horizontal line the warp and woof threads in the fragments of bunting.

What remained of the original flag was then sewed firmly to the linen backing by needlewomen under Mrs. Fowler's instruction and guidance.

Less than a year after the labor of repairing was begun, on May 16, 1913, the flags were completed and put on exhibition at the Naval academy.

In the ceiling of the academic building is one of the most interesting of the trophy flags. It is a British royal standard taken from the parliament house at York, now Toronto, then the capital of upper Canada, when the place was taken by the squadron under Commodore Isaac Chauncey and a land force under General Zebulon Montgomery Pike, April 27, 1813.

The squadron, with about 1,700 soldiers aboard, effected a landing at York under cover of a fire of grape from the ships, cleared a way through the Indians and sharpshooters that the English had formed to oppose them and stormed the batteries. The capture of York resulted in the acquisition of the royal standard, the only British royal standard captured and held by any nation.

The flags captured by Admiral Dewey at Manila bay are in this auditorium, and some of them are exquisite. The one flown at the main of the Spanish cruiser Don Antonio de Ulloa is a reminder of the plucky captain of that cruiser, Enrique Robion, who refused to surrender at the battle of Manila bay on May 1, 1898, so the Ulloa sank with its guns blazing defiance and all flags flying.—Boston Globe.

Imitation Damask.

Imitation damask is made today by means of printing upon the surface, with a sort of transparent mucilage, the designs. These designs appear to be woven into the cloth. By immersing a sample in boiling hot water and allowing it to boil for several minutes the design will disappear.—Washington Post.

Lost and Found.

"Why are ye lukin' sae pleased wi' yersel'?" asked McQuinton.

"Weel, mon," replied Farquharson, "I dropped a saxpence i' the market place, an' I couldna find it."

"That's naught to be lukin' sae gay aboot," said McQuinton.

"Aye, but ye dinna ken," explained Farquharson. "I found a shilling!"

Calling the Bluff.

"I can stay minutes under water."

"I knew a fellow who stayed ten minutes."

"You're joking with me. How could he keep his breath?"

"He didn't. That's why he stayed so long."—Baltimore American.

We fight to great disadvantage when we fight with those who have nothing to lose.—Guicciardini.

GATHERED INDIAN RELICS.

Dr. J. H. Buchanan, of the borough and Wilbur Randolph, of this city, have returned from a two weeks' sojourn in New York. While away they visited the Thousand Islands and other resorts, the trip affording Mr. Buchanan an opportunity to gather many interesting relics of Indian lore, of which he is a collector.

Daddy's Bedtime Story — How Heinel Took a Ride In a Boat.

She Was Very Glad to See Heinel.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

JACK and Evelyn ran to meet daddy, who told them the story of a boy, Heinel, who tried to break a little black dwarf's power that took him away from his father. "The dwarf wanted his own way because the father did not want to give his son up. So Heinel stepped into a boat on the shore, and his father pushed him off with his own hand. The dwarf wanted the boy to be set adrift and left to the bad or good luck of wind and weather.

"So Heinel said goodby to his father and let the boat drift off. But before he got very far a big wave struck it, and it dipped low in the water on one side, so that Heinel's father thought the poor boy was surely lost.

"The father went home very sorrowful, and the little black dwarf went on his way, thinking that he had had his revenge on the father for breaking his word.

"But the kind fairy took care of her friend. The boat did not sink. Soon the wind changed, righted it again, and on over the blue waves it safely glided.

"Heinel sat safely in one end till the boat ran ashore on an unknown land. As Heinel jumped ashore he saw before him a beautiful castle. But it was all empty and dreary within because it was enchanted.

"'Here I must find the prize the kind fairy told me about!' cried Heinel.

"So he set about searching the whole castle through till he at last found a white snake lying coiled up on a silk cushion in one of the chambers."

"Was he afraid?" asked Evelyn.

"Now, it happened that the white snake was an enchanted princess who had stayed in the musty old castle for years waiting for some nice young man to come and set her free."

"Goody!" Jack clapped.

"Of course she was very glad to see Heinel, for rarely did any one ever come to the old castle. 'Have you at last come to set me free?' she cried. 'Twelve long years have I waited here for the fairy to bring you to me. Nobody but you can save me. This night twelve men will come. Their faces will be black, and they will be dressed in chain armor. Let them beat and torment you without saying a word, for at midnight they will have to go. The next night twelve more will come and the third night twenty-four. But if you do not speak to them at midnight their power will be gone and I shall be free.'" Then daddy looked at the clock, and the children hopskipped upstairs.

Training a Husband

Morris Wants His Wife to Keep Well, Not for Her Own Sake, but for Her Child's.

"It is the heat," said Dr. Ellison. "I suppose she has been running around without her bonnet on and not being used to our fervid temperature, it has affected her head." Morris looked reproachfully at the mother. Little Florence was the apple of his eye and to have anything happen to her through neglect was casus belli. Marian dropped on her knees by the side of the bed and was wringing out cloths from cold water to ease the hot little head.

"As soon as that water is warm, change it for freshly drawn water. Your well water is so cold you will not need ice." The doctor was snapping his medicine case shut. "I think she will get along all right, but call me up this evening and let me know how she is. You have no phone? Oh, well, you can stop over and tell me. We are so near." The doctor strode down the walk and they heard the gate click behind him.

"So you have been letting her run around bareheaded," said Morris, turning to Marian.

"It is hard to make her keep her hat on; she dislikes to wear one." Marian was looking anxiously at the child.

"I wonder that her likes are considered when she is in danger," was the tart answer.

"I should think you would know that I did not realize that there was any danger. Will you please get a fresh pail of water? That pump is very hard on my back." Marian looked worn and troubled. Morris took the pail from the sink and she heard the squeaking of the pump in response to his exertion.

"Now you go and lie down a little while." Morris entered the room with the fresh water. "I will sit with the little thing." Marian looked up with a grateful smile.

"But you have so much to do. You have no time to spare."

"Go on." He made a preemptory gesture. "You may be kept awake tonight. You must have rest to stand it." Marian left the room and sank down on the couch in the living room. She was just dropping off to sleep when she heard a knock at the back door. It was the delivery boy with groceries. Once on her feet and in front of the table full of dirty dishes, she decided not to go back to rest. Instead she began to straighten the disorderly kitchen. The dishes were nearly washed when she looked up and saw Morris standing in the door.

"How is she?" she whispered, for he held up his hand for silence.

"She is sleeping quietly. Why did you not lie down as I told you to?" he asked.

"I did try to sleep a little, but the grocer's boy waked me and the kitchen was in such shape that——"

"Marian, you must take care of yourself. What would become of the child if you got sick?"

"Always the child," thought Marian bitterly. "If I could drop over without incommoding anybody it would be a different thing." She was too tired to be reasonable.

"You go now while the child sleeps and take a little nap. I must be in school in the morning and so I must sleep tonight, but I will take care of her till you wake up." He led her in to the couch and arranged her pillow, drew the shades and softly closed the door in the dining room. He had scarcely reached the bedroom when the baby, who had been put upstairs because of Florence's illness, began to cry and Marian flew to quiet him before he waked the sleeping girl.

"It helps that he took that much interest in my comfort," she thought gratefully as she prepared the baby's bottle. "He is worried and rushed with work or he would do little things for me oftener, I suppose."

SMART SEPARATE SKIRTS.

Fur Trimmed Skirts a Distinctly New Departure—Gay Plaid Taffetas Shown.

By Mary Glynn.

Time was when the separate skirt was considered a humbug and never considered in the light of being anything but "second best." At present, however, this is not so, for the separate skirt has raised itself to the dignity of being among her "best." It is developed on the smartest and newest fabrics. A distinctively new feature is introduction of furs on these garments, this being arranged on the hem and the waistline, in many novel ways. These separate skirts are shown in cloth, gabardine, serge, mohair or soiree silk. Taffeta, too, is extensively used, and its smartness may be judged from the lines of the skirt illustrated. It was developed in green and navy plaid taffeta. The fullness was closely shirred at the waistline and flared decidedly toward the hem. The crushed girdle is offset by a narrow band of fur. Belgian hare, it is called, and it is set on in a six-inch band around the bottom of the skirt.

Among the exclusive blouse models is a tub waist of white linene, piped daintily with pale green linen and one of the delightful things about this tub blouse, in addition to its cool color scheme and its smart cut, is the comfortable elbow sleeve. Just below the elbow the rather loose sleeve is joined to a straight cuff, piped all around with green, the tabbed ends of the cuff being fastened with link buttons on an inch long cord loop. The fulness of the outer side of the sleeve is not gathered into the cuff in the ordinary way, but projects beyond the cuff in belled effect, green piping following the edge of this bell. The new sleeve is extremely pretty and graceful, and is well worthy of imitating.

Blue Velvet With Braid Pockets Controlling the Fullness. Broad Bands of Beaver Trimming

Dark Green Velour Coat With Trimmings of Raccoon Fur, from Cheruit

A Redingote Front with Straight, Flare Back - The New Coat Line from Paris

A New Distribution of Fullness, a New Cuff, and a Particularly Smart Hood Collar

Velour Coats Trimmed With Fur Mark the High Note of Style - Weather Coats of Mixed Worsted for Rough and Ready Wear - Novel Cut Gives the Fall Coat Unusual Individuality.

THE separate coat, growing more and more popular as seasons have passed, seems to have reached its epitome of elegance this autumn. No wardrobe may call itself complete without several topcoats of various types; one for motoring, another for knockabout town and country wear, and certainly one for afternoon wear with formal frocks. The walking coat is an item of the fashionable wardrobe now and is a very elegant affair indeed, cut on lines authorized by Paris, built of the richest material and usually trimmed with fur. So fashionable is the separate coat these days, that it is almost ousting the tailored suit from favor, and never have coat models been so individual and interesting; never have the couturiers expended so much thought on them as they do now.

Interesting Collars And Cuffs.

One thing strikes you about all the new coats; the dashing cut of collar and cuff—quite different from anything ever seen before, though many of the models have been adapted from coats of ancient times. Everything that was picturesque seems to have been borrowed and jumbled together with a fine disregard for accuracy in dates and periods; but for all that, the fall coats are most fetching affairs indeed.

A green velour coat from Cheruit is pictured, the trimming being raccoon fur; and the smart little hat is of green velvet with split ostrich trimming in shaded grays. Full as it is—almost baggy in cut—this coat has the inimitable grace that Cheruit gives to all her creations. The front breadths and the back breadth fall straight from shoulder to hem, a break coming at the sides where the full skirt is shirred to an upper portion cut in one with the sleeves. This green velour coat is lined with pale buff satin; for be it noted, plain, rich coat linings are more distinguished now than gay linings of flowered or figured silk. Satin, soft taffeta, satin-striped taffeta, soiree silk, satin brocade and faille matinee are some of the handsome materials used to line coats of high degree. The Cheruit coat is in the favored length—just long enough to reveal an inch or two of skirt between the flaring edge of the coat and the dainty foot, made to look as small and slim as possible in an exquisitely fitted boot of glazed kid.

Of velours also, is the redingote coat in a trifle shorter length. This coat is in the new dark red, garnet or dahlia shade which is just now the favorite coat color in Paris. A very effective and beautiful color it is—provided too many women do not take to wearing it—red coats should be few and far between. The coat pictured is a redingote in front only; at the back the material is gathered from a shallow yoke across the shoulders and lines of buttons down the under-arm seams emphasize the form-fitted effect at the front. The total absence of a belt is another smart feature, for it is evident that the best makers are trying now to get away from the belted idea in coats—difficult as that seems to be when belts have so firmly rooted themselves in favor. The garnet velour coat has a particularly smart collar with the new line—sloping outward from top to bottom so that the collar seems to support the head like a cup. A most difficult collar to cut this, truly, but the one in the picture has been fashioned with consummate skill; it fits as smoothly as a straight, stock collar, yet it is a turnover affair, lapped at the front. Any tyro at dressmaking who tries her hand at cutting such a collar will appreciate the art which produced the one pictured with the dark red coat.

Limousine Coats Supremely Distinguished.

There is a vast difference between the limousine coat, for wear over formal afternoon frocks, and the ordinary motor coat which is primarily built for warmth and may be donned over anything at all. Limousine coats express the highest type of style and elegance and are only less luxurious than evening wraps. The pictured model, a coat from Doeuillet, is of marine blue velvet with trimming of beaver fur and the golden brown tones of the beaver are echoed by pocket motifs of dull gold lace which catch down the full folds of velvet under the arm, giving a very graceful silhouette. The coat is lined with white satin. It is one of the handsomest models of the season.

Another limousine coat that will appeal to the fancy of the pretty matinee maid, is of pink corduroy trimmed with rose fox. The pink is very faint—just off a white and the corduroy coat is lined with white soiree silk which makes the faint pink unmistably a pink, when the coat is thrown open. Front, back and sleeves are all attached to a deep, shaped yoke and the fullness is arranged in pleats at either side of the arm, and underneath, so that at the sides the coat has a tremendous flare, falling in ripples over the skirt. A knotted girdle or sash of the material holds the fullness in at the waistline and the swing below is very dashing and jaunty. Turned back cuffs and wide, turned down convertible collar are edged with rose fox and there is a band of this beautiful fur all around the wide skirt of the coat.

Another pink limousine coat is of rose colored silk plush with collar and cuffs of black velvet. From the turned down velvet collar falls a deep shirred cape of the rose plush and the front sections of the coat extend in points over the gathered back, a strap and two buttons, made of the material, holding the points in place. A distinctly novel cut is this and the coat in question has received much attention.

Pontine Coats Shed The Raindrops.

A talk about autumn coatwear without mention of the new pontine coats would be like Hamlet with the Dane left out. These new coats are the rage just now. The material—pontine—is an entirely new idea which has taken the fashionable world by storm. On one side it has a waxed surface like soft, glossy leather; on the other side one may have silk, or cloth or even velvet. By using pontine on both sides in the same garment pleasing effects of contrast are secured, even when both sides of the material are in one tone. In green and gunmetal gray pontine—the green side having the waxed surface, the gray side being broadcloth—is a very good looking coat for street or motor wear. Collar, cuff, belt and a broad band at the hem show the gunmetal gray cloth very attractively against the glossy dark green of the coat. The buttons are of green and black onalith. This waxed material is entirely waterproof and is warm enough for winter motoring, though pontine is so supple and light in weight that it can be stitched, pleated and even gathered. Coats of this fabric in the russet and mahogany brown shades, with a reverse of bright colored cloth or silk, make very stunning sport garments for autumn wear.

Fur In Demand For Trimming.

Though it is perfectly permissible from a style standpoint, to have a velvet collar on the new autumn coat, a fur-trimmed collar will be much smarter. And by the bye, fur-trimmed collars and cuffs now—not fur used alone to make these details of the coat, if you would be in the very van of the mode. A Bernard coat of gray velour which has just reached this country, has a high, convertible collar of the velour lined with sealskin. Turned up, the collar is mostly velour; turned down, it is a small cape of sealskin. The cuffs are the most unusual yet in this season of bizarre cuffs. They are bell-shaped and very wide at the hands, with bands of sealskin at the edge, and the tops of them are gathered and applied under inch-wide stitched straps of the material, just at the turn of the elbow. This coat has also bands of sealskin at the foot and big sealskin buttons. Much silk stitching is used to garnish the autumn coats of velour, broad cloth and silk, a particularly dainty Jenny coat of dark blue faille is stitched on collar, cuff and front with silver gray silk and trimmings of silver cord echo this note of the stitching. The lining is of gray silk splashed over with blurred Chinese designs in blue.

A little later we shall touch on fur coats and wraps but you will enjoy seeing on today's page one of the first fur coats of the season, an exclusive model in the new fitted effect above the waist, with ripple skirt below; the lines achieved by skillful cut without recourse to a belt to confine the fullness. This coat is made of a very handsome fur fabric imitating moire pony and is trimmed with gray raccoon which is to be much used this year.

A good example of the modish knockabout coat for general wear is shown in the model of caster brown soft wool fabric—an imported English coat this, soft warm and very light in weight because of its beautifully woven wool fabric. The lines are comfortable and loose and the fullness is gracefully disposed at the back. A new cuff, buttoned and in bell shape trims the sleeve, and collar and deep hood are faced with plaid taffeta in shades of tan, green and cream.

The Flattery of Tulle in Ruff and Muff

THE most formal of dress accessories is a tulle neck ruff. Such a belonging should never be donned with an unconventional costume, or with a frock or suit obviously intended for morning wear and making no pretensions to formal elegance.

If this be true of the tulle neck ruff, how much more is it true of the tulle muff! No woman would dream of carrying one of these airy trifles, the very essence of festivity and elegance, with a tailored serge shopping suit; yet one sees the tulle ruff disporting itself with all manner of street costumes; with sport clothes, with cotton frocks for the morning and even—absurd though it may seem—with the raincoat. The truth is, it is hard to resist the temptation of a tulle ruff, once its flattering qualities have been discovered. One looks so exceedingly well in it; one's complexion seems so much fairer and softer, and the fluffy pleatings of it hide all the unpleasant little lines behind the ears and under the chin.

A black tulle neck ruff should not be worn unless there is some other note of black in the costume. With a gray and white costume, or a gray one, the black tulle ruff is very smart; but with a costume in color the taupe or smoke toned tulle ruff is much more harmonious. Sometimes with a dark blue tailleur a black tulle ruff looks well, provided the hat, veil and boots are black also. The black ruff is seldom as becoming to the complexion as the taupe or gray ruff, though it may make up in chic—any hardness of outline it gives to the face.

White tulle below the face is almost always becoming, except when skin, hair and eyes are of the swarthy brunette type. The white tulle ruff is, however, a very perishable affair; one or two wearings will usually despoil it of the dainty freshness such an accessory should have; and these ruffs are prettiest for the evening, with light colored and very dressy costumes. A black and white checked tailleur is well set off by white gloves, white and black hat, white tulle ruff and boots of white washable kid; but the same tailleur will look equally smart with a black hat, white gloves stitched with black, black tulle ruff and buttoned boots of black glazed kid. Another telling touch with such a costume will be a lorgnette ribbon of narrow black ribbon edged with white. There is infinite style-value in these little touches and they should be carefully studied by the woman who desires to be smartly turned out in every detail.

Some of the tulle sets are elaborate affairs for dressy wear and give great distinction to an otherwise simple costume; but it must be remembered should be of the formal type—these accessories are not for the knock-about street tailleur.

Some of these sets are expensive trifles to add to the evening wardrobe. Butterflies, made of shirred white velvet, trim one big, soft tulle muff and the full ruche and through the center of the ruche runs a twisted cord of the white velvet. There are three double pleatings of tulle above and below the cord in the neckpiece, each pleating very full. Five yards of very wide tulle at least, have gone into the ruche, and probably ten yards into the big muff, so one can compute what such belongings would cost—even without the butterflies of panne velvet. The muff-pad of cotton wadding is covered first with thin white silk, then with a draping of white chiffon, and over this is swathed the gathered tulle, full pleatings finishing the ends.

Nothing is worse than a skimpy effect in tulle, so if you plan to build a new ruff, or one of these beautiful muffs at home, be very sure to start with enough material. Tulle is always used double for the pleating, the folded edge making a richer finish than a straight, unfinished edge, cut by the scissors. It requires about a quarter of a yard, doubled in half, for the width of each pleating, and the strip should measure three times the space to be filled in, for a full and handsome pleating. There are tulle neckruffs in the shops, made of unfolded malines, pleated skimpily along a ribbon neckband but they are scarcely worth the price one pays for reduce them to bedraggled limpness. The tulle accessory is an expensive trifle in any case and would be better left alone unless one can afford to pay for a good model.

The gray tulle set shown is suitable for afternoon wear or restaurant wear in the evening and is a particularly stunning arrangement of gray, black and white tones. Bands of white pontine, the new waxed fabric over which fashion is mad just now, trim the gray tulle ruff and muff and on the pontine are black cut jet buttons. A narrow fringe of black fox adds a finishing touch at the edges of the white strips.

Feather neckwear promises to be very fashionable this season and the woman who has put away a lot of little white ostrich tips, should get them out now, have them dyed in some becoming shade and make them into a collarette. The tips are sewed to a foundation of ribbon, stiffened underneath, so that the feathers hang over the collar at the back and sides, a smart bow or rosette covering the fastening of the ribbon at the front. There are large cape collars also, made of small ostrich tips, mounted in rows of fluffiness all the way up the cape which is usually of net or some very light fabric; so that these capes, intended for evening wear, are extremely light though sufficiently warm to protect bare shoulders.

Pretty for theatre wear are long scarfs of tulle in three layers, gathered at the ends and finished with silver tassels. It is always wise to carry a scarf of some sort to the theatre for draughts abound when the curtain is raised and it is not desir-

YELLOW GOGGLES FOR THE MOTORIST

IT is always wise to protect the eyes on a long motor trip, especially if one is not used to riding constantly against the brisk wind. It is not necessary to spend a substantial sum for motor goggles; any sort of glasses, large enough to cover the eyes will answer. For twenty-five cents can be purchased a pair of light-rimmed spectacles mounted with clear yellow-tinted glass; and such goggles, though neither smart nor becoming, will protect the eyes from wind and dust and soften the blinding glare of the sun. Ordinary eyeglasses help a great deal, by breaking the force of the wind, but they do not soften the glare of light. A face veil of fine mesh should be worn over the glasses one's more or less high-priced lenses whisked away by a sudden breeze. For less than a dollar comes a special motor goggle with green or amber colored glass mounted in soft white rubber rims, and the curve of the rim makes these goggles very comfortable, even on an all-day tour.

TEA AS A BASIS FOR LEMONADE

IF there are eight guests on the veranda and you have only two lemons in the kitchen all will be well, provided there is a bottle of cold tea ready in the icebox. Weak, iced tea makes a splendid basis for lemonade and very little lemon juice will impart a delicious flavor. An orange may be squeezed in too, if you have it; and a mint leaf or two float-

TRENTON EXPOSITION FRUITS AND FLOWERS

Displays This Season Promise to Overshadow Record of Vegetable Department.

The display of agricultural and horticultural products at the Trenton Fair promises to overshadow the enviable record established by this department during the past few years.

A favorable season combined with liberal prizes offered by the association is expected to bring together one of the greatest collections of fruit, flowers and vegetables ever assembled in New Jersey and its neighboring states.

Improvements are being made in the exhibit buildings that will set off to greater advantage than ever before the wonderful crops now being produced on an eastern farm.

A number of the most successful fruit growers in New Jersey and Pennsylvania are to make a display that will clearly demonstrate the possibilities of commercial fruit growing in the eastern states. Such a display, it is believed, will prove an attractive feature to all interested in progressive agriculture.

The vegetable department will also contain displays of value to all who attend the Fair. The watermelons will equal if not surpass the wonderful exhibit made in former years, it is announced.

Collections of garden vegetables attractively arranged will show the possibilities of the properly managed garden.

The commercial display of vegetables will again demonstrate the high standard maintained by intelligent and scientific market gardeners.

The flower show, which was such an attractive feature at the Fair last year, will again be an important part of the horticultural display.

Orchids, large and attractive display of dahlias, cut flowers and potted plants artistically arranged in the center of the spacious exhibition building make a striking centerpiece for various exhibits of fruit, vegetables and other farm products.

Arthur J. Farley is superintendent of the agricultural and horticultural products.

Trenton Fair will be held from Sept. 25 to 29.

WILL AWARD PRIZES TO CANNING CLUBS

More Premiums Offered For Competition at Trenton Fair, Sept. 25 to 29.

To help advance the campaign to prevent waste and to store up food supplies for the lean winter months Colonel Mahlon R. Margerum, secretary of the Trenton Fair, has this year added an attractive list of prizes for the Boys and Girls' Garden and Canning Clubs of New Jersey. The products will be exhibited at the Trenton Exposition, which will be held from Sept. 25 to 29, and premiums will be awarded for the merit of the displays.

This is the slogan of the 1,200 members of the clubs throughout the state in the preparedness campaign to preserve foods.

The boys and girls' gardening and canning club work in this state is being carried on by the New Jersey State Agricultural college with the co-operation of the United States department of agriculture. The beginning of the campaign was made in May of last year.

In some of the clubs the members have home gardens and raise their own products to can. In other clubs the boys and girls buy the fruits and vegetables. The clubs have regular meetings and are instructed in the latest and best methods of canning by experts from the New Jersey State Agricultural college. All the native vegetables and fruits of New Jersey, such as peas, string beans, lima beans, corn, tomatoes, peaches, cherries, etc., are canned. A favorite expression of the boys and girls is "We eat what we can, and what we can't we can." Their motto is "To make the best better."

Running Races at Fair.

A revival of the old time running races will be one of the features of the Trenton Fair, from Sept. 25 to 29. Prizes to the amount of $2,400 will be awarded.

New Jersey at one time was the home of some famous running tracks where records were made, many of which still stand on the books of the Jockey club. Knowing ones look for the smashing of some of these records on the Trenton track this year. Three running races have been carded for the first four days of the Fair, and good fields are promised for each race.

Unlike most fairs, Trenton puts on its running races in exactly the same manner as the races are conducted over the tracks of the New York Jockey club. The Jockey club rules govern, and the officials are those with the stamp of approval from the big metropolitan tracks. All of this makes for better sport, and in the past the contests have been of the kind that thrill the crowd which always fills the big grand stand and bleachers at Trenton.

PLAN AUTO TOUR.

Former Councilman Edward Rushmore, of the borough, will leave Monday for a week's automobile tour of the Adirondacks, accompanied by the manager of the plantation in Porto Rico, in which Dr. Rushmore is a prominent stockholder. Mr. Rushmore's family has been spending the summer on a farm near Hudson, N. Y.

BALKAN EXPRESS EXCLUSIVE TRAIN

Passengers Examined, Then Given Ticket Like Passport.

NO BRIDGES LEFT IN SERVIA

With Whole Country Infected With Typhus No One Is Allowed Near Railway Platforms—Travelers, For Most Part, Are German and Austrian Officers and Officials.

An American who recently made the journey from Berlin to Constantinople on the celebrated Balkan express writes the following letter of the trip to the London Times:

"Twice a week a train of seven cars pulls into Berlin. It is labeled in foot high letters throughout all its length 'Balkanzug.' This is the much lauded Berlin-Constantinople express, which conveys military officers and officials to and from the Turkish capital.

"The obtaining of a permit to travel on the Balkan express is a matter of extreme difficulty. Every passenger, after a thorough examination, is provided with a train ticket like a passport, which, in fact, it really is. It bears the portrait of the traveler and all particulars of use to the police and the military. These particulars are written in German and Turkish. The train is a Turkish train when it is in Ottoman territory, but immediately it leaves it becomes a German train. All the train attendants are Germans.

Passengers All Officials.

"As the train passes through the various countries along the route the populace is immensely interested. The stops are short, none longer than twenty minutes. At Dresden only seven minutes are allowed. Passengers may not leave the station, but are expected to keep to the platform. For the most part the travelers are German and Austrian officers and officials, but a few Turks use the train for journeys as far even as Berlin, where now the tarbush may be seen in the streets.

"Running through Servia the most impressive signs of the German occupation were the encampments of the troops alongside the permanent way. There are huge notices up at all stations warning the inhabitants to keep away from the railway. No one is allowed on the platforms because the whole country is still infected with typhus, and there has to be rigorous supervision for this reason. All along the line may be seen the trenches and the rusty barbed wire entanglements that tell of the fighting months ago. At each little fortified encampment German soldiers have planted vegetable gardens over which may be read the legend 'Kriegsacker' (war garden). There were no signs of their having planted any wheat or grain.

"Through Servia nearly all the bridges of any size had been destroyed, at least partially. Often whole spans had been blown out. In many cases the Germans had replaced these, moving them bodily to their old positions. In some of the other bridges, where the girders and way were so badly damaged as to defy repairs, temporary bridges on wooden trestles had been built. These structures may serve during the summer season, but they could not stand even a moderate flood. The work therefore still goes on, and in time the old bridges will be reconstructed.

"Along the whole line from Berlin to Constantinople and even down into Syria there are thousands of Belgian railway cars. These are easily recognized, for they still have the Belgian marks on them. To these the imperial cipher and the eagle have been added. Troops are on the move in Bulgaria, as elsewhere, but they seem to be mostly away from the line of the Balkanzug. There is not the briskiness that is evident immediately one enters Turkish territory. At Adrianople there are signs of great activity."

5,000,000 PRISONERS TAKEN ON ALL FRONTS

Germany Holds Greatest Number, 1,750,000, Dr. Mott Says.

More than 5,000,000 prisoners, double the number of men engaged in any previous war that the world has known, now are confined in prison camps of the belligerent nations, according to Dr. John R. Mott, general secretary of the international committee of the Young Men's Christian association, who arrived in New York on the Danish steamship Oscar II. from Copenhagen. Dr. Mott left here in May for Russia and has visited the prison camps of nearly all of the belligerents.

Dr. Mott said that of the prisoners Germany has the greatest number, approximately 1,750,000. Russia, with about 1,500,000, comes next; then Austria, with 1,000,000, followed in order by France, Italy, Great Britain and Turkey. Russia's prisoners, he added, are rapidly increasing, more than 400,000 having been added to the camps since the beginning of the last Russian drive. In six weeks, Dr. Mott added, 230,000 passed through Kiev.

TO RESUME MEETINGS.

The Epworth League of the Monroe Methodist church will resume its regular meeting Sunday evening at 7 o'clock. A rally will be held at that time for which a special program has been prepared. The regular service will begin at 7:45, and the pastor, Rev. D. B. F. Randolph, will preach on "The Love Token."

RILEY WAS SENSITIVE.

Why He Stopped Reciting One of His Poems In Public.

"As an illustration of Riley's sensitive nature," said Melville E. Stone, "Jim and I went alone to the theater to see Sol Smith Russell, who also belonged to the Saints and Sinners' Corner. He was playing 'The Poor Relation.' In the play was a scene where Russell took a young boy and put him in a barrel while he removed his trousers to mend them. The audience roared with laughter at the comic situation. Next to me in the box sat James Whitcomb Riley, sobbing as if his heart would break. He saw no humor in the plight of the little boy. To him it was pathos.

"He, like Eugene Field, was devoted to children. He loved them, but he loved them artistically. I am not sure that personally—that is, mind you, hanging to a man's coattails—they either of them wanted children around. They lacked the patience necessary for daily contact with children. Riley and Field could write heartbreaking verse in respect of children and put into them an inordinate amount of human sympathy, but so far as I know this was at arm's length from the youngsters themselves, especially in Field's case. Riley was ever exceedingly sympathetic. One evening Jim was reciting his poem, 'A Happy Little Cripple,' before a large audience. He had scarcely begun the lines—

"I'm thist a little crippled boy an' never goin' to grow
An' git a great big man at all, 'cause aunty told me so.
When I was thist a baby one't I fell out of the bed
An' got 'the curv'ture of the spine'—'at's what the doctor said—when he noticed a man and a woman in the audience leaving the hall. He made inquiry and found out that they had a little lame child of their own much like the one he was describing. He resolved never to recite that poem in public again."—New York Post.

DRESSY

There's no chance about it—it is as well defined as the style of his coat or his hat. And it is a very important feature of his dress.

Our high lace and button Shoes for Fall will certainly lift a man high up and into the class of true footwear form—and keep him there!

There's no chance whatever about it. At $3.50 and $5.00 a pair they are sure as sunrise.

PLAN FOR TAKING SOLDIER VOTE

Militiamen Are Not Certain That They Like Arrangements Made.

NO INTEREST IN CAMP

Do Not Even Know the Names of the Candidates—Troopers Are Told to Prepare List of Baggage They Will Bring Home.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 12.—That New Jersey intends to give her soldier citizens at the border an opportunity to cast a vote in the coming primaries was made certain by the arrival here last night of Benjamin E. Farrier, sent by Secretary of State Thomas Martin to conduct a primary election on any date he may choose. Mr. Farrier was connected with the Jersey City Signal Corps at the time of mobilization but was discharged from service because of physical disability brought out in the Federal examinations.

When interviewed this morning the election officer said that as soon as the 3,500 allotted official ballots arrive he will immediately poll the vote and return the sealed envelopes to designated parties. The ballots were shipped two weeks ago from New Jersey by freight and are already overdue.

The system to be used in taking the vote is a complicated one and when the officers were apprised of the plan today they expressed doubt regarding the outcome of the proposed plans. Each eligible man will be provided with an envelope on the outside of which printed an affidavit form and which will contain the official ballot for him to mark. Besides indicating his choice and swearing to the form on the exterior of the envelope he will have to furnish the name of some person living in his electoral district to who Mr. Farrier will send the sealed envelope and this third party will cast the ballot at the polls. Mr. Farrier will have to take the men's word for the fact that they are eligible to vote and it it exjected that some trouble will thus be piled up for the officers who will be burdened with the task of checking up the ballots back home.

Several of the officers expressed their doubts of the legality of this course today and it is even rumored that some will not take advantage of the opportunity offered them by the State Secretary. They claim that inasmuch as the country is not actually in a state of war that the men have no right to vote from the border and if the State wants their ballot it should recall them. Mr. Farrier's statement that he would not await the official date for voting but would secure the vote immediately, also caused some surprise. He claims he has to have the ballots back in the hands of the proper parties before election day.

The appearance of an election officer would seem to indicate that the State, at least, believes that the soldiers are to be kept here until after September 26, and his presence here has not struck a popular keynote. The militiamen are not interested in politics, only inasmuch as they concern the National Guard's stay in Arizona and many of the men are not even familiar with the names of the candidates. New Jersey newspapers arrive at the camp daily but the men have only a little time to spare reading them and this is spent in scanning the news about themselves and the probibilities of an early return.

All commanding officers of troops, companies and corps were today ordered to prepare at once a list of the baggage which they will take home with them and the number of cars each will need for the transporattion of his individual unit. The hope of the many who anticipate an early departure were given another boost today when the proposed three day hike for the Fifth Regiment was called off at the last minute. It was said later, however, that the Fifth would join the battalion in a hike the latter part of the week and that the entire squadron of cavalry will leave tomorrow on an eight day outing, spending tomorrow night at Warren where a big detachment of troops are already quartered.

No new cases of paratyhpoid were reported today but several members of Company A, of the Fifth Regiment, are still confined in the Base Hospital for observation. The disease sometimes takes as many as ten days to develop and Captain Frederick E. Rohrback has notified the physicians to assume every precaution. The Fift Infantry is now occupying its isolated quarters where the First Regiment formerly was located.

Rev. Howard E. Clarke, pastor of the Congregational church, will occupy his pulpit, Sunday, September 24, the official board having extended his vacation two weeks.

MUSIC TO FEATURE NO LICENSE MEETING

Dutch Arms Band Will Play and Well Known Soloists Will Sing.

An attractive musical program is promised those who attend the men's "no-license" meeting at the Plainfield Theatre tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Dutch Arms orchestra will play and the Biederwolf male choir will sing under the direction of Clifford A. Braider. Edgar A. Cole will be the soloist for the afternoon. The choir is requested to meet at 3:45 o'clock.

The speakers at this meeting will includer Arthur M. Harris, Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson and Rev. W. L. Imes. Joseph W. Gavett, president of the Church Co-Operative Association, will preside.

There will be a meeting for women at the same hour at the First Baptost church, at which Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson will preside. Miss Etta Raybert will be the soloist and Miss Alice Drake pianist. Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, will be the speaker.

VINTON BREESE WEDS FILM STAR IN SECRET

Judge at Plainfield Kennel Show Marries in Newark

Combining elements of the stage, the screen and the dog show, a romance led this week to the secret marriage of Miss Carlotta de Felice and Vinton P. Breese at the Dutch Reformed church in Newark. Mr. Breese is to be one of the judges at the fifth annual show of the Plainfield Kennel Club.

There had been many rumors at dog shows that the two were to be married. It was learned yesterday that the ceremony was performed on last Monday night in the presence of a few friends who were pledged to secrecy.

It is not known at present whether or not the marriage of Mr. Breese will interfere with his acting in the capacity of judge at the coming local dog show.

Mr. Breese is known from coast to coast as one of the leading all around judges of dogs and he also is well acquainted in Great Britain. He is not only a judge of dogs but is one of America's leading critics on kennel doings and is an artist of no mean ability.

ACTION OF MARTINE IS APPROVED BY HIBERNIANS

The Ancient Order of Hibernians of New Jersey at the State convention held at Atlantic City this week went on record as approving the action of United States Senator James E. Martine in trying to prevent the execution of Sir Rogert Casement, and adopted resolution expressing the gratitude of the member toward Senator Martine. John J. Casey and Thomas Farrell represented the local branch at the convention.

AUTO DRIVER INJURED.

In trying to turn out for another automobile on South avenue, near Terrill road, last night, an automobile truck owned by the Cresanga Marchione Co., of Newark, and driven by James Maeszana, of that city, went into the ditch recently dug for the sewer. The driver was thrown out and hurt about the legs. He was taken to his home.

DR. ZELIE WILL PREACH.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, is expected to occupy his pulpit at the 10:30 o'clock service tomorrow morning, after a vacation of several weeks.

EMERGENCY!

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally, are hereby requested to report daily to the Board of Health, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., the arrival of all persons from out of town, INCLUDING PLAINFIELD PEOPLE WHO HAVE BEEN ABSENT FROM THE CITY (DAILY COMMUTERS EXCEPTED). Such report should state the name and residence of the person making the report; and also the names and ages of the parties from out of town and the locality from which they came. The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

ENGLISH MOVE ON; TAKE 500 GERMANS

Bulgars Inflict Heavy Damage on Roumanians—Serbs Victorious.

London, Sept. 16.—A statement issued by the War Office today says that the British centre has been advanced to a point of 500 yards north of Foureaux Wood. The whole of the villages of Courelette, Martinpuich, Aud Flers are firmily in British hands. Five hundred more prisoners have been taken, making a total of 2,800 Germans officially reported captured in the first 25 hours of renewed fighting.

Spain Protests to Germany.

Madrid, Sept. 16.—Spain has made a sharp protest to Germany against its practice of sinking peaceful Spanish ships, it was announced today, and has demanded that there be modification of the submarine campaign. The government took action after three Spanish steamers, including the Olazzani, 2,586 tons, had been torpedoed in two days.

Roumanians Ahe Repulsed.

Sofia, via Berlin, Septy 16.—Efforts by Roumanian troops to cross the Danube for an invasion of Bulgaria has been repulsed twice, the War Office announced today. It was also stated that Bulgarian troops are continuing their advance in Dobrudja, inflicting heavy losses on the enemy.

Counsellor Hit a Mine.

Washington, Sept. 16.—The British freighter Counsellor, of the Harrison line, bound from San Francisco to Liverpool, was sunk at noon on September 15, 5 miles south of Galley Head by an explosion, according to a report today to the State Department from Consul Frost at Kingston. The British Amiralty believes that the disaster was caused by a mine. There were no casualties.

Serbs Press Bulgar Retreat.

Saloniki, Sept. 16.—Pressing forward in their pursuit of the Bulgarians on the western end of the Macedonian front the Serbian army has inflicted another defeat to the retreating enemy and are approaching Florina.

Florina Is Captured.

London, Sept. 16.—A despatch from Saloniki says that French and Russian troops entered Florina last night.

LIGHTNING SETS FIRE TO MT. BETHEL BARN

During the heavy storm of yesterday afternoon the barn and grainery belonging to William Kirch and located on the Kirch homestead on the Mt. Bethel road, was struck by lightning. Within a short time the entire structure was a mass of flames and it was with much difficulty that one of the horses was gotten out of the burning building. Another horse was so badly burned it was found necessary to shoot it. An alarm was sent in to the Mt. Bethel fire department but when the apparatus arrived nothing could be done to save the building.

A call was sent to the Plainfield fire department and Councilman John Cose took charge of the crew of the pumping apparatus which responded. When they arrived, however, there was no water and were helpless to do anything. A shifting of the wind saved the house from being destroyed. All the buildings were consumed, including the season's crops, twenty tons of hay, large quantities of corn, and the machinery were a total loss.

The damage is placed at between $2,500 and $3,000, partly covered by insurance.

RESIGNS AS POSTMISTRESS AFTER 34 YEARS' SERVICE

Miss Edith M. Dickinson, of Leland avenue, this city, succeeds Miss A. E. Bornmann as postmistress of Warrenville, a position which the latter has held for thirty-four years. Miss Bornmann's father, Daniel Bornmann, was appointed postmaster of Warrenville on March 31, 1866, and on his death his daughter assumed charge of the duties attached to the position. She conducted the work in a manner that elicited her much praise up to her rrecent resignation.

DR. RYDER TO PREACH.

Rev. Dr. Charles J. Ryder, secretary of the American Missionary Association, will preach at the Congregational church tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. The Sunday school sessions will be resumed October 1. There will be a special prayer service at 7:15 o'clock in the evening, to be followed at 7:30 o'clock by a Christian Endeavor service.

THREE PRINCES WHO ARE LEADING ARMIES

Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, centre, the German Crown Prince; bottom, Duke Albrecht of Wuerttemberg. Berlin—The official army headquarters report today reveals a general rearrangement of commands brough about by the appointment of Field Marshal von Hindenburg as chief of staff. The new order divides the western front into three sectors and assigns to them three princely commanders who, regardless of reasons of policy which actuated their appointments to command of armies at the beginning of the war, have won their spurs by the successfu. conduct of operations. Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria has assumed the overcommand of all the German armies on the Somme front, with general direction of operations against the Anglo-French offensive. Duke Albrecht, prospective heir to the kingdom of Wuerttemberg, who is in command of the northern sector, inflicted the first defeat of the French in the offensive that was begun when the Germans swept through Belgium. The German Crown Prince has the overcommand in the Verdun (southern) sector.

WILL GO AHEAD WITH CITY HALL

Council Decides to Take Action Next Monday Night.

The Plainfield Common Council will proceed at once with the construction of a new city hall according to plans already approved. This was decided at a conference of the Council as a whole, held in the chamber of the board list night. Councilman Hylan, chairman of the City Hall Building Committee, will have a report ready for the meeting of Monday night and while no official announcement was made after the conference, it is understood that contract will be awarded to the lowest bidders.

Bids opened at the last meeting showed that the construction would mean an expenditure of approximately $110,000. As $32,500 has already been spent for a site and architect's fees must yet be paid, this brings the total cost of the new building near to $150,000, which was the amount appropriated, and leaves little or nothing for the furniture.

Some reductions were agreed on at last night's conference, it is said. They had been provided for in the plans and specifications and do not call for a change in the bids, the lower prices having been inserted by all contractors who entered into the competition. The total amount to be taken off the cost by these changes is not known. If the contracts are awarded to the lowest bidders the work will be done by the following firms: General contract, P. F. Kenny Company, New York; plumbing, Dennis Galbraith, Plainfield; heating, Miller & Brady, New York; electrical work, Manhattan Engineering Company, New York.

Councilmen who attended the conference of last night had carefully sounded public sentiment on the city hall proposition and they felt that the people would not brook delay in the building of a new municipal building. It was the opinion that a building should be erected at once that will answer the needs of Plainfield for the next fifty years. The City Hall Committee reported that it had investigated the successful bidders and had found each of the firms to be erfectly responsible and backed by a long record of successful and satisfactory work.

TROOPERS WANT TO TRY A LONG TRIP

They Have Even Tired of Being Homesick—New Cooks at Work.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Camp Plainfield, Pirtleville, Ariz., Set .12.—Yesterday was moving day for Plainfield troopers, the orders issued the latter part of last week by Captain Albert Borden shaking up the various aquds, being carried out. The change in tent occupants was caused by the raising of ten privates to first class ranks and the promotions to fill vacancies caused by dependency discharges. The men all hated the idea of breaking up the squads, but like good soldiers took their medicine and last night occupied their new quarters.

Added to the hustle and bustle of moving day was the distribution of the new allowance of overcoats, shirts, trousers, puttees, shoes, etc., which arrived yesterday morning. Corporals Gus Fiske and Roger Mellick assisted in the work of unpacking and the men received their respective consignments yesterday. All of the old equipment, much of which has been condemned and it not fit for further use, will be turned in to Sergeant John F. Sickler and sent back to the government.

With this new assortment of wearing apparel the Plainfield guardsmen are ready for any kind of service, but are particularly anxious to see how it will last on a 2,790-mile train trip, having taken a sudden liking to transcontinental travel in other words they want to go home, but that is nothing new around here and everybody is getting pretty well used to being homesick.

A great sendoff was accorded last night to Leslie Kinslow, William Daniels and James Hall, the three colored youths who have rendered valuable assistance in the kitchen ever since the troop left Sea Girt. These youths were affected by the government order for white units to get rid of all negro help and they were all keenly disappointed at not being allowed to remain and go home with the other soldiers. Since the troop has been here they have been three of the hardest workers, rising at 4 o'clock each morning and quitting a hard day's work only after every one had been fed at supper and the kitchen put in first class order. As entertainers they all did their share, and each had won a place in the hearts of the other militiamen. Kinslow and Daniels will go to Atlanta, Ga., to visit the latter's mother, but Hall will go directly home, probably arriving in Plainfield Thursday night or Friday morning. Privates John Logan and John Murray, who have been serving a month's apprenticeship in the regular army cooking school, took charge yesterday and will now have control of this end of the camp work for Troop D. Both volunteered to take the course and they have been highly recommended.

MOSQUITO COMMISSION WELL PLEASED WITH WORK

S. P. T. Wilbur, of this city, who is chairman of the Freeholders' Committee on Mosquito Extermination, in company with Louis J. Richards, fo the State Board of Health, were intrested spectators of the Union county contingent that yesterday examined the "mosquito plants" of five counties of New Jersey. The party went over the Passaic River, spent some time in Paterson, went on to Rutherford and thence to North Arlington. Observations were made near the Hackensack River and the turnike. nd the autoists went to view Frank's creek at Harrison.

At all the points included in the day's tour the men found evidence of the excellent work done in mosquito extermination.

The membership of the Union county commission has remained practically the same since its organization five years ago, Dr. Frank C. Ard, of the city, being president; C. C. Hope, of Roselle, treasurer; L. J. Richards, of Elizabeth, secretary and the other members being Dr. James S. Green, of Elizabeth; Dr. Frederick W. Sell, of Rahway, and Dr. William J. Lamson, of Summit.

GRACE M. E. SERVICES.

Sunday-school at the Grace M. E. church will be held at 9:45 tomorrow morning for those over sixteen years of age. The pastor, Rev. C. S. Gillespie, will preach at 11 o'clock on the subject of "The Mystery of the Prayer Vision." At the evening service the subject of the sermon will be "The Secret of Steadfastness." Tuesday evening Epworth League will hold a corn roast at Mr. Neier's place.

SALE OF FINE GOODS.

Robert Murray, the auctioneer, will conduct a large auction sale of select household goods commencing Tuesday morning, September 19, at 10 o'clock, in the large auditorium, 316-318 West Front street, over J. W. Gavett's china store. The goods comrise the contents of two estates that must be closed. Those interested in fine goods are asked to read the list of articles advertised on another page of the Daily Press.

"MAYOR BILL" TO SPEAK ON LICENSE QUESTION

Will Tell What He Would Try to Do if Plainfield Goes "Dry."

Accepting the invitation of Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, Mayor William L. Smalley, of North Plainfield, will attend the evening service tomorrow and will tell what he would try to do in the borough if Plainfield votes against the granting of liquor licenses. Dr. Hudson will preach as usual.

Mayor Smalley, as his wriends know, has very definite ideas concerning the liquor traffic and he even went so far as to say that he would be willing to resign as executive of the borough and then run for office on a no-license platform. Mr. Smalley is an active member of the Home Rule League of Somerset county, and has for some time been fighting the liquor interests in the borough.

PROGRESSIVES WILL NOT NAME A TICKET

H. W. Herrman Takes Decided Stand at Meeting of State Committee.

The Progressive State Campaign committee will not put a full party ticket in the field this fall. This was decided at a meeting of the committee at Morristown Thursday night, when J. A. H. Hopkins, the chairman, was defeated in his efforts to have a State ticket. The result is considered a severe blow to Hopkins and his influence.

The defeat of the Hopkins proposition was brought about by the three Union county representatives, H. W. Herrmann, of this city; Edward A. Leach, of Elizabeth, and Harvard Fish, of Roselle. Mr. Fish took a decided stand in opposing a third ticket and he was ably supported by Mr. Herrman.

"I have neither time nor money," he said, "to spend in a Progressive campaign this year. I think it would be worse than unwise—it would be suicidal. I do believe the time may come when we must again fight shoulder to shoulder for those principles which we fought for in the past. Although I shall vote with the Republicans this fall, I shall carry into that party my Progressive principles."

One of the speakers, who opposed the resolution was Supreme Court Justice Swayze, who declined to vote as a member of the committe because he said he had already cast his fortunes with the Republicans, but his words had great effect on the meeting.

MISS ANNA CASE WILL GIVE FIRST SONG RECITAL

Miss Anna Case, the American soprano, who stepped from a church choir position in this city to the Metropolitan Opera Company stage, will give her first New York song recital at Carnegie Hall, Wednesday evening, October 11. Miss Chase has sung often in New York, at the Metrapolitan and other functions, but this will be her first recital in New York, having waited until she felt that the psychological moment had arrived, which she considers is now.

At Montreal, Canada, late last spring, on her first appearance outside of the United States, she scored a triumph. one of Canada's severest critics gave her a lengthy review of her work, such as is rarely ever given to any artist.

Miss Chase has spent the summer at Sea Bright very quietly, and reports have it, that she was never in better or stronger physical condition. The novelty of Miss Chase's New York program will be a group of Scandinavian songs, sung in the original.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S LEAGUE PLANS FOR BUSY SEASON

An enthusiastic meeting of the Business Women's League was held in the Y. W. C. A. last night, it being the first one of the fall. After a short business session the time was spent in a social way, and the Y. W. C. A. orchestra gave a number of musical selections.

During the winter meetings will be held the first and third Fridays of every month. The next one will be held on October 6, when a special peaker will be present. It is expected that there will be an illustrated lecture on the telephone.

GOSPEL TENT MEETINGS.

The evangelistic services of the Christian and Missionary Alliance are still being held in the Gospel tent on Watchung avenue, near the Y. M. C. A. Sunday morning service will be held at 10:30, and the evening services begin at 8 o'clock. On Tuesday evening the seventh of a series of sermons on the "Second Coming of Christ" will be given.

LABOR COMES TO AID OF STRIKERS

70,000 Men Vote to Join in Sympathetic Tie-up of Railways.

LEADERS THREATENED

Interborough Company Says It Will Prosecute for Conspiracy—800,000 Workers May Be Called Out Soon.

New York, Sept. 16.—Union labor forces of Greater New York began limbering into action this morning to aid the hard pressed traction strikers. Following the vote of the general labor conference last night to call out Monday 70,000 trades unionists, "whose labor is keeping the traction cars running," the individual unions this morning began taking strike votes. No union will go out unless its members ratify the vote of the general conference.

The Longshoremen's Union, the Tidewater Boatmen's Union and 25,000 machinists will go out today, according to reports reaching police headquarters and to statements issued from strike headquarters at the Hotel Continental.

Chief Inspector Schmittberger immediately made preparations to handle the situation. Police were detiled for strike duty along the waterfront. They were ordered to make their quarters on the recreation piers, eating and sleeping there.

The threat of labor strikers to call out 800,000 union workers to aid the striking carmen has aroused officials of the Interborough Company, who today announced that arrangements had been completed for the starting of proceeding for criminal conspiracy against the men who, without legitimate cause, encourage sympathy strikes.

An official of the Interborough Raid Transit Company, who has been watching closely developments in the widespread labor agitation, and who has had lawyers collecting evidence, asserted today that he was prepared to invoke the full machinery of the law to punish those who, with justification might seek to throw the city into a state of industrial chaos in order to win the transit strike.

It is known that traction officials have been keeping a close watch on the doings of their labor leaders and have collected a mass of evidence that they are prepared to lay before the District Attorney in the event sympathy strikes are called.

"FALL OF A NATION."

In booking "The Fall of a Nation," the management of Proctor's Theatre has been careful to select an acting piece of great merit as well as a lavishly staged spectacle. The picture will be presented a the local playhouse next Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," "The Birth of a Nation," and other famous works, wrote and directed the film. No other picture equals its truly wonderful depictment of twentieth century warfare. With al the love story is a fascinating one, the comedy episodes are thoroughly amusing and the acting will satisfy the mast exacting lovers of sterling dramatic art.

WHERE IS LIZA FORD?

Police Chief Kiely received a telegram from Inspector Faurot, of the New York police force, last night, asking him to locate Liza Ford and tell her that her mother, Elizabeth Chambers, was in the municipal lodging house at 432 East Twenty-fifth street, New York. The police have thus far been unable to locate anyone of that name.

CHIMNEY FIRE.

The fire department responded to a telephone call at 10:12 this morning to extinguish a chimney fire at the home of E. V. H. Voorhees, of 918 Madison avenue. One line of hose was sufficient to put it out with slight damage.

CHIEF DOANE AT SEASHORE.

Fire Chief Doane left yesterday for Atlantic City to be gone until October 1. He will attend the annual convention of the Firemen's Relief Association that will be in session there next week.

Rev. Dr. Birney S. Hudson will preach at the Park Avenue Baptist church tomorrow morning on "Greater Works," and in the evening on "Living Issues, or Why Plainfield Should Be Without Saloons."

LOCAL REALTY MARKET IS ACTIVE AT PRESENT

Standard Investment Co. Busily Engaged in Erecting Several Dwellings.

The Standard Investment Company, in which local men are interested, is quite active at present in the realty market. The Apgar Construction Company is erecting three houses for the concern on Fourth street, near Monroe avenue, Plainfield. The houses will have seven rooms and all improvements.

At Lincoln Heights the Apgar Construction Company is erecting two more houses for the company. These will have six rooms with partial improvements. The company has sold a house on Fourth street, Plainfield to John McCue. At Lincoln Heights it has sold two houses to Mrs. E. Haselinger and John Sarobica.

The concern is having plans and specifications made for several houses to be erected on its tract on West Front street, Plainfield, the installation of sewers and grading having been completed there.

PLAN FIRST SERVICE IN HANDSOME EDIFICE

New Catholic Church at Dunellen Will Be Opened September 24.

Members of St. John's parish, Dunellen, are making great preparations for the opening of their new edifice Sunday, September 24. Owing to the inability of Bishop McFaul to be present on that day the dedicatory exercises have been put over until Thanksgiving Day morning when the solemn mass Coram Pontifive will be celebrated. The inaugural service next Sunday will also mark the beginning of the forty hours of devotion.

The new church which will have a seating capacity of 600, is constructed of tapestry brick on the lines of old English Gothic architecture.

The edifice, grounds and furnishings represent an expenditure of close to $190,000. Among the gifts is a memorial window for Mrs. Mary McMann, given by her children Mr. and Mrs. Michael Heyl; other windows bear the names of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Kerwin, Charles M. Stilliger, Charles L. Wahl and family, Mr. and Mrs. Montville Knight, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Maier, Young Ladies' Sodality, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ryan, Mr. and Mrs. John Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Owen Mohan, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dineen.

The rose window in the choir loft is the gift of the Holy Name Society and the others were given by Miss Carrie Heyl and members of the choir.

The gift of Father Dunphy was a Gothic marble altar as a memorial to his mother, Mrs. Ann Dunphy, who died at Dunellen about six years ago.

The Sacred Heart and St. Anthony statutes for the sanctuary were given by Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Weiner and Mr. and Mrs. John Kochen and the pedestals were presented by Mrs. Louis Anerot, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Maier, Mrs. Jacob Fern and John Kochen.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Levens were the givers of the sanctuary lamp and the altar railing was presented by the children.

Among the fourteen stations of the cross are memorials to William Stilliger, Theodore Petit by Mrs. Petit and daughter Clementine, Mr. and Mrs. William Gallagher given by their son, Joseph Gallagher, who is now with the U. S. troops on the Mexican border.

Others are given by Miss Helen Teston, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Reidy, Mrs. Anna Shittinger and family.

Other gifts include two pairs of brass candelbra given by Robert Fern and the Misses Margaret, Kathryn and Mary Moynihan. The sanctuary bench is a joint gift by Mrs. Nicholas Harris, Miss Katharine Donahue, Julia and Alex Bublavic.

St. Mary's church was organized 36 years ago with a membership of thirty. Prior to that the members worshipped in St. Mary's church, this city. Father Dunphy was assigned to the parish fourteen years ago and his labors have been marked with success. Prior to coming to Dunellen he was the rector at East Millstone and assistant in the Trenton Cathedral, his home town.

Lieutenant William Buckbee, of the Jersey City police, is visiting Mr. and Mrs. William Russ of North avenue.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.

Joseph Hubbard, of Plainfield, accused by Edgar Shively, of assaulting and robbing his brother-in-law, Walter Lewis, was held for the Grand Jury yesterday following the testimony given by the remaining witnesses for the laintiff's side. Among these were William Vail, William Mundy and Leslie Bowlby.

Borough Engineer and Mrs. L. T. Churchill and Mr. and Mrs. John P. Faber motored to New York city afternoon, taking home Mrs. William E. Mosher, who has been visiting Mrs. Churchill.

Mrs. Samuel R. Strickland, of Second street, has returned from a visit to Brooklyn.

The Misses Gladys and Hazel Marlen, of Lincoln avenue, have been spending the past several days in visiting relatives at Cranford.

Frederick R. Haynes is making arrangements for his annual trip to the Adirondacks for a period of several weeks.

Fred A. Fedderman and Arthur Bogardus departed this afternoon on an automobile trip to Virgina.

Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Hartpence, of New Market road, are entertaining relatives from out of town.

INTERESTING NOTES ABOUT TROOP D

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Sergeant John Sickler has been getting a taste of hard work recently, the arrival of new equipment and the checking up of old stuff giving him plenty to keep his time occupied. Sickler has been a hard worker ever since he joined the troop and is constantly on the job.

"Sherman" Schultze is recovering from the effects of a mauling he received on the hike the other morning when he slept this one. Schultze was sleeping under one of the little "pups" which were originally built for soldiers shorter in length than this fellow Schultze. He awoke in the middle of the night and shouted, "I'll bet anybody five to three that I'm sticking out the other end of this thing two feet." Everyone looked up to find the challenger's two feet dangling out in the cold, cold world.

Speaking of cold air, last night was the coldest the boys have spent down here. Several blankets were used by each of the troopers, but these were not sufficient to keep them warm. The queer part of the Mexican border life is that the air warms up to a scorching point within an hour after the sun appears.

Trooper Barry has been added to the list of eligibles for newspaper notice. If Barry doesn't get his name before the public pretty soon we're afraid he is going to offer us a bribe or do something else rash.

Larry Moynihan is another hard worker in the Plainfield outfit. He has had considerable to do with the horses since arrival here and his work has been of high order.

Warren Ackerman thought he'd like to go to the Queen City for a hot breakfast yesterday morning, but later decided that he'd pass it up and eat in the mess hall.

The Signal Corps, of Jersey City, with quarters a short way from Troop D, has planted this sign on top of its wood pile with a hand pointing west ward: "2,600 miles to New York." Direction and distance are both slightly off color, but the boys like to look at it.

Corporal "Don" Fullerton introduced himself to his new tent mates last night with a supply of jam and crackers. Needless to say he is now in soft and they all got up when he told them to this morning.

Ned Stevenson was on kitchen detail yesterday and he's still talking about the work he did. However, Ned must have worked pretty hard for he was either too tired to take his white kitchen uniform off before going to bed or else he thought it was also to be used as a pair of pajamas.

Sergeant "Turk" Righter is the life of D street. Without him there would undoubtedly be considerably more cases of homesickness and low spirits. He always has something new up his sleeve and when he springs it all eyes are turned in his direction.

The press tent has been presented with a Mexican dog. That the little animal has a "nose for news" is demonstrated by his fondness for tearing to shreds every newspaper that comes within his reach.

MRS. HOWE, SISTER OF PRESIDENT, DIES

End Came at Early Hour Today—Wilson Was at Shadow Lawn.

New London, Conn., Sept. 16.—Mrs. Annie W. Howe, only sister of President Woodrow Wilson, died at her apartments in a local hotel early today. Mrs. Howe had been extremely ill for about a week with peritoitis, and the end had been expected at any moment for the last two days.

The President was informed a week ago of his sister's critical condition, and on Monday came here, returning on Wednesday to Shadow Lawn. Mrs. How had been too weak to recognize him. He was kept constantly informed of her condition, and when death came a message was sent to him.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR JOSEPH EHRHARDT HELD

Th funeral of Joseph Ehrhardt, whose death occurred Wednesday night, was held this mroning at 9:15 at the home of his brother, Fred Ehrhardt, 65 Manning avenue, and at 10 o'clock in St. Joseph's church, where a solemn high mass of requiem was offered by the Father Lanigan, of Far Hills, as celebrant. Mr. Ehrhardt was a member of Father Lanigan's congregation for many years. Rev. Father Thomas Carroll acted as deacon during the service and the Rev. P. J. Hart, subdeacon. The latter also spoke. Vocal selections were sung by Mrs. Alfred Seidel with Mrs. H. De Meza at the organ. Many beautiful floral pieces were sent by relatives and friends of the deceased. Beside the brother with whom he lived, Mr. Ehrhardt is survived by two sisters and two nieces, the latter the Misses Dorothy and Margaret Ehrhardt.

The interment took place in St. Mary's cemetery, the following acting as pallbearers: Daniel Horan, William Morgan, Walter Chandler, William Feaster, George Fosbrae and Paul Kellem.

ART OF BEING ALONE.

Try Taking to the Woods and Being Natural For Awhile.

The art of being alone is worth cultivating. Unless you have really tried it you have no idea how unusual and refreshing it is. City life and even modern country life are not conducive to its practice. It is very different from being lonesome and quite another matter from being ill. It is found at its full flower only in the woods, and its best development requires some adjustment and practice.

The first experience is apt to leave one somewhat baffled if not frightened. We live so much with other men and with the evidences of their activity that we hardly know how much is ourselves and how much some one else.

In the woods—and it need not be the remote wilderness—we can divest ourselves of all that is not really a part of us. We can learn how small—or perhaps how large—we are. We can soak up impressions with time to taste them and consider them. We can learn the true value of wind and clouds and sun and shade. If we feel like it we can talk out loud to ourselves, and there will be no one to think us crazy. We can sing and no one will tell us we are off the tune.

In short, we can be natural for once in our lives—free from the warping effect of what other people think. That is surely an experience worth while.—Outing.

OUR FIRST FOREIGN WAR.

When Tripoli Tried to Wring Tribute From Our New Republic.

The first foreign war in which the United States was engaged began in 1801, when Tripoli issued a declaration of war against the new world republic.

The ruler of the piratical African state had learned that the United States had paid larger sums to Algiers than to himself and demanded a greater annual tribute. This was refused, and on June 10, 1801, he declared war.

An American squadron under Commodore Richard Dale was dispatched to the Mediterranean and was followed by squadrons commanded by Commodore Morris and Commodore Preble.

The war continued until 1805 and was characterized by several feats of valor performed by American sailors. The bey of Tripoli and the other Barbary rulers, who had long preyed upon the commerce of America and Europe, were brought up with a short turn.

Prior to the Tripolitan war the United States and France fought several sea engagements, but war was not officially declared, and the difficulties were settled without recourse to open and avowed hostilities.—New York World.

Painfully Explicit.

"Gentlemen who come in this hotel not say anything about their meals they will be charged for, and if they should say beforehand that they are going out to breakfast or dinner, and if they say that they not have anything to eat they will be charged, or unless they bring it to the notice of the manager, and should they want not to say anything, they must order the manager for, and not any one else, and unless they not bring it to the notice of the manager, they will be charged for the least things not, according to hotel rate. And no fuss will be allowed afterward about it, and nothing will be allowed to deduct anything out of it."

After this explicit information there surely could be no excuse for misunderstanding.

Frelinghuysen and Murphy

From the Newark News:

Two men, Franklin Murphy, of Essex, and Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset, are seeking the Republican nomination for United States Senator. Both are native Jerseymen, both men of high character, successful in business and experienced in public life.

Mr. Murphy has been Assemblyman and Governor; Mr. Frelinghuysen twice State Senator and now president of the State Board of Education and of the State Board of Agriculture. Both are distinguished for public spirit and private benevolence, and both are self-made men who have risen through native ability, industry and square dealing.

If the contest hinged solely on the personal character and human qualities of the two men there would be little to choose between them. Such, however, is not the case. The choice must be made on their attitude toward questions of national polity, their open-mindedness, whether they are given to looking backward or forward, whether they are progressive or reactionary; whether in the Senate they would be found lined up with Penrose, Smoot and Gallinger or with Cummins, Kenyon, Borah and Lodge; whether, in a word, they are for the people or of "privilege." The question is not of personal capacity but of the use either would make of it.

In comparing the two men from this viewpoint Mr. Murphy suffers because he has an established record in national politics made as a member of the national committee which stamps him as one who politically has never emerged from the dark ages of machine domination. In that committee he has been the confidential associate of Barnes and Penrose, of Crane and Smoot. He has been a member of the inner circle which in 1912 drove the party upon the rocks of disaster and in 1916 struggled vainly to nominate a candidate who would repeat the performance of four years before.

Hughes was not Mr. Murphy's choice as a candidate, and it was through no fault of his that any concession was made to progressive sentiment. To nominate Mr. Murphy for Senator would be a direct slap in the face to the 145,000 New Jersey Republicans who in 1912 voted for Theodore Roosevelt and thus expressed their disapproval of Mr. Murphy's activities in promoting the nomination of Taft. Politically, Mr. Murphy is a Bourbon of Bourbons, and there are too many of that family in the Senate now.

Mr. Frelinghuysen has always been an organization Republican, but has never been an organization slave. He has no record in national politics, but his record in State affairs as a legislator and in other public positions has been consistently progressive and forward looking. When the position taken by the party organization on a matter of public policy has been, in the opinion of Mr. Frelinghuysen, inimical to the public interest, he has not hesitated to follow his own convictions.

Because of the support that he gave in the Senate to Governor Wilson's reform measures, Mr. Frelinghuysen is now charged with having sought political preferment by sacrificing his party and serving the Democrats. Instead of serving the Democrats Mr. Frelinghuysen was serving the people who had long and vainly sought from Republican administrations, including that of Mr. Murphy's, the remedial legislation enacted under that of Governor Wilson.

AN ORDINANCE

Concerning the Construction of Sidewalks and Curbs. Revision of 1916.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. The space devoted to sidewalks, not already laid out under prior ordinances of said City, shall have a width not less than one-fifth of the entire width of the street. On all streets, lines drawn parallel with the side lines of the street and distant therefrom the exact width of the space devoted to sidewalks shall be known and designated as the curb lines. The grade and width of all sidewalk spaces and the grade of the curb lines shall be that fixed by ordinance or otherwise legally established either heretofore or hereafter, but all sidewalks shall be so graded as to rise from the top of the curb line to the nearest side line of the street at the uniform rate of one-half inch to each linear foot of such distance unless otherwise specifically directed by resolution of the Common Council.

Sec. 2. All sidewalks shall be curbed and paved at such established grade and kept and maintained so curbed and paved in good condition so as to be even on the surface and freely shed water, and all of said space devoted to sidewalks shall be kept free from long grass, weeds, shrubs or other thing or substance likely to interfere with safe and easy travel thereon or thereover by pedestrians or persons lawfully using the same, at the expense of the owner or owners of the land or lot abutting thereon, as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 3. All curbs hereafter constructed in this city shall be of concrete, six (6) inches thick and at least twenty (20) inches deep. Where combined curb and gutter is used, the curb shall extend to the bottom of the gutter concrete, which shall be at least six (6) inches deep below gutter grade.

Concrete for curbs shall consist of one (1) part Portland cement, two (2) parts fine aggregate and from two and one-half (2½) to three (3) parts coarse aggregate, mixed with clean water, in the manner hereinafter specified. A coat of mortar, mixed one to two (1 to 2) and not more than one-half inch thick may be applied to the inside of the forms immediately before placing the concrete.

Curb and gutter shall be divided into sections not less than five (5) nor more than eight (8) feet long, by some method which will insure the complete separation of the sections by a joint not less than one-eighth nor more than one-quarter inch wide.

Curb corners at intersecting streets shall have a radius of at least six (6) feet, where possible, the radius shall be equal to the width of the narrower sidewalk of the intersecting streets. The circular corners shall be protected by approved corner bars.

At private driveways, the upper edge of the curb may be lowered to within one inch of gutter grade, the grade of the base of the curb to be at same elevation as that of the adjoining curb. Where a driveway is concreted from the paved portion of the sidewalk to a line outside the curb line, the curb may be omitted. The ends of the curbs at the driveways may be beveled at an angle of forty-five degrees, or circular corners, having a radius of not more than two (2) feet, may be used, the return curbs disappearing at the established grade of the sidewalk at a distance of not more than eighteen (18) inches from the curb line.

Sec. 4. All sidewalks hereafter paved in this city shall be constructed of concrete, of the materials and in the manner hereinafter specified.

No paved walk shall be less than four (4) feet wide and four (4) inches thick. Sidewalk slabs twenty-five (25) square feet in area shall be five (5) inches thick; slabs thirty-six (36) square feet in area shall be six (6) inches thick.

The concrete for one-course work shall consist of one (1) part Portland cement, two (2) parts fine aggregate and from two and one-half (2½) to three (3) parts course aggregate.

The cement shall meet the requirements of the Standard Specifications for Portland Cement of the American Society for Testing Materials.

The fine aggregate shall consist of sand or crushed stone, graded from fine to coarse, passing, when dry, a screen having one-quarter inch diameter holes; it shall be clean, sharp, coarse, free from deleterious matter, and not more than five per cent. shall pass a sieve having one hundred meshes per lineal inch.

The coarse aggregate shall be sound gravel, trap rock or blast furnace slag. It shall be free from all foreign matter, uniformly graded and of sizes that will pass a one and one-half (1½) inch screen and be retained on a one-quarter (¼) inch screen.

Such methods of measuring the several materials for the concrete shall be used as shall insure reliable proportions.

The ingredients of the concrete shall be thoroughly mixed with clean water on a water-tight platform. The concrete shall be wet enough to be easily "struck on," but so that it can be handled without causing a separation of the coarse aggregate from the mortar.

Cross forms shall be of three-sixteenths inch metal, of a depth to correspond to the thickness of the proposed walk and shall extend the full width of the walk and be set at right angles to the side forms. They shall be left in place until the concrete is sufficiently set to permit of their withdrawal without injury to the walk.

On walks which are four feet in width they shall be placed not more than four feet apart, and on no walk shall the divisions or joints be more than six feet apart in any direction.

After the forms are filled, the concrete shall be "struck off" and the coarse particles forced, with a suitable tool, to a depth below the surface which will permit of properly finishing the walk.

The slabs shall be rounded on all surface edges to a radius of about one-half (½) inch.

Concrete shall not be mixed or deposited when the temperature is below freezing.

All sidewalks and curbs shall be protected from injury by sun, rain, or freezing until sufficiently set.

Sidewalks constructed in two courses will be permitted. When used, the concrete for the base course, three (3) inches thick, shall consist of one (1) part Portland cement, three (3) parts fine aggregate and five (5) parts coarse aggregate. The mortar for the top course, one (1) inch thick, shall consist of one (1) part Portland cement and two (2) parts fine aggregate.

Sec. 5. All sidewalks of the following named streets and portions thereof, to wit: Front Street (East and West) from the easterly side line of Watchung Avenue to the Easterly curb line of Grove Street on the Northerly side of West Front Street and to the Easterly curb line of Central Avenue on the Southerly side of West Front Street; Madison Avenue from the Southerly side line of Green Brook to the Northerly line of the right-of-way of the Central Railroad Company of New Jersey; Second Street (East and West) from the Easterly side line of Watchung Avenue to the Westerly side line of Madison Avenue; North Avenue from the Easterly curb line of Park Avenue to the Westerly curb line of Watchung Avenue; Somerset Street from the Southerly side line of Green Brook to the Northerly curb line of Front Street; East Fourth Street from the Westerly curb line of Watchung Avenue to the Westerly side line of Park Avenue; Watchung Avenue from the Southerly side line of Green Brook to the Northerly curb line of East Seventh Street; Park Avenue from the Southerly curb line of Front Street to the Northerly curb line of Seventh Street, and West Third Street from the Westerly curb line of Liberty Street to the Easterly curb line of Plainfield Avenue, shall be paved as aforesaid from each side line of the street to the nearer curb line thereof except such portions of such space devoted to sidewalks as aforesaid as may be occupied by telegraph, telephone or other like poles lawfully standing therein and except such portions thereof as may be occupied by the trunks of any trees growing therein and an additional space not exceeding five (5) square feet in area around each tree.

Sec. 6. All sidewalks of each and every street in the said City of Plainfield other than the streets and portions of streets in Section 5 of this ordinance particularly described, shall be paved, for a width of at least four (4) feet, with concrete of the materials, the proportions and in the manner required in Section 4 of this ordinance.

That hereafter, whenever a new sidewalk line is to be laid out on any street, it shall be located so that the nearer edge of the concrete shall be the following distances from the side lines of the streets, that is to say: On streets having a width of eighty feet or more, a distance of six feet; on streets having a width of seventy feet or more, and less than eighty feet, a distance of five feet; on streets having a width of more than sixty feet and less than seventy feet, a distance of three feet; on streets having a width of fifty feet or more and not more than sixty feet, a distance of two feet, and on streets having a width of less than fifty feet a distance of one foot.

Where the sidewalk is crossed by a private driveway, the concrete shall be six (6) inches thick.

Where a sidewalk, paved for its entire width, is crossed by a private driveway, the driveway shall be depressed at the curb line to the gutter grade and shall slope up to the established grade in a distance not exceeding eighteen (18) inches from the curb line.

Sec. 7. The word "street" as used in this ordinance is intended to include and to mean every public highway in the City of Plainfield, whether commonly called a street, road, avenue, place or otherwise, and shall be so taken and construed.

Sec. 8. If after the passage of this ordinance the owner or owners of lands affected thereby shall neglect for the space of thirty days to make the improvements to the sidewalks thereof by this ordinance directed and required, the Common Council may cause such improvements to be made under the direction and supervision of the Street Commissioner, as authorized by the statutes in such case made and provided. Before proceeding to make any such improvements the Common Council shall cause notice, by publication as hereinafter mentioned, of such contemplated improvements to be given to the owner or owners of any land thereby affected, which notice shall contain a description of the property affected sufficiently definite in detail to identify the same, as well as a description of the required improvements and a notice that unless said improvements shall be completed by such owner or owners within thirty days after the date of the first publication thereof, it is the intention of the City to make said improvements or cause the same to be made pursuant to the authority of the Act of the Legislature of New Jersey entitled "An Act to authorize cities to construct and repair sidewalks and curbs and to provide for the payment of the cost thereof," approved April thirteenth, one thousand nine hundred and eight, and acts supplemental thereto and amendatory thereof, such notice shall be published in one or more newspapers published in the City of Plainfield for a period of five days, and proof of publication of such notice shall be filed with the Collector of Taxes of the City. If such improvements shall not be completed by such owner or owners within the time and in the manner directed in said notice, the Street Commissioner shall thereupon forthwith cause such improvements to be made by the City under his direction as authorized by this ordinance and said Acts of the Legislature, including an Act of the said Legislature entitled "An Act to amend the Act entitled 'A supplement to an Act entitled an Act to authorize cities to construct and repair sidewalks and curbs and to provide for the payment of the cost thereof,' approved April thirteenth, one thousand nine hundred and eight, which supplement was approved April sixteenth, one thousand nine hundred and nine," approved April thirteenth, one thousand nine hundred and fifteen.

Sec. 9. When any improvement of the character hereinbefore mentioned shall be made by the City pursuant to said Acts of the Legislature, a true and accurate account of the cost and expense thereof shall be kept by the Street Commissioner and apportioned among the several properties improved in proportion to the frontage of their respective lands, and a true statement of such cost under oath or affirmation of said Street Commissioner shall forthwith be filed by him with the Collector of said City, whereupon said charge shall be and remain a first lien upon the lands and real estate thereby improved, and shall bear the same rate of interest as other assessments made under the laws governing said City, and shall be collected in the same manner as assessments are now collected under such laws, and in case of the non-payment of such charges the land and real estate subject to such liens may be sold in the manner provided for the sale of lands for the non-payment of assessments made under such laws.

Sec. 10. That all ordinances and parts of ordinances inconsistent herewith are hereby repealed, provided however, that any and every proceeding for the laying, installing and improvement of any sidewalk or curb heretofore begun and now pending under any such inconsistent ordinance shall not be affected hereby.

Adopted by the Common Council September 5, 1916; approved by the Mayor September 8, 1916.

LEIGHTON CALKINS, Mayor.

Do You Want Your Kidneys Experimented On?

Kidney troubles are getting more common every day. Government health bureau figures say deaths from this cause are 72 per cent. more than twenty years ago.

Anybody who suffers constant backache, who feels blue, nervous and irritable; who has dizzy spells, headache and urinary disorders should suspect kidney weakness. Overworked kidneys must have a rest. Take things easier; live more carefully. Take a good kidney remedy to build the kidneys up again.

But be sure to get Doan's Kidney Pills—the oldest, the most widely used, the best recommended of all kidney pills, now in use all over the civilized world. Don't experiment with your kidneys. Thousands have already tested Doan's. You have their experience to go by. Plenty of cases right here in Plainfield. Here's one:

Mrs. Edward Mayer, 430 West Fifth street, Plainfield, says: "I had frequent dizzy spells that made me feel as if I was about to fall. At times they were so severe that I had to go to bed, as I could do nothing. My kidneys were also irregular in action. I found no relief from any medicine until I started to use Doan's Kidney Pills. They proved their merit in a short time by driving away all these ailments."

Price 50c. at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Mayer had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.—Advt.

Value of White Oak.

The white oak has served for more useful purposes than perhaps any other tree, and its wood today is worth as much as mahogany. Furniture of "solid oak" is now a rarity, for the wood has become so expensive that it is used in the form of a veneer over baser woods. So used it loses none of its beauty, and even the thin veneer resists wear for an incredibly long time. This wood was a useful one to the early agriculturists as well as to those of the present day. It was durable when exposed to the elements and was also durable in contact with the soil. It was and is still used in fencing, and much of the second growth white oak timber in America is now being cut for railroad crossties.—Outing.

Story of a Bakeshop.

In Braunschweig, a quaint old German town, is pointed out the building—still used as a bakeshop—where Till Eulenspiegel, famous as a jester in the fourteenth century, worked as a boy. Many persons who have listened to the musical composition "Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks," which enshrines his name, have never associated this with the merry baker boy of Braunschweig. He is credited with having made many little gingerbread owls and monkeys, which he gave away to children. The shop at 11 Backerlint still does a thriving business.

September News from Hearn's

"Please help Emily," or Margaret, or any other school girl you know, to decide what sort of dresses she needs for school. For the school girl—the middy blouse is indispensable. Then she needs some simple durable frocks—as well as several more elaborate ones. All this you will find in our Girls' Department and it is quite true as the signs there say, that we buy from the same manufacturers as do the uptown specialty shops. Our great Boys' Department has hundreds and hundreds of suits, in fact everything that the school boy or young man needs. The tailoring in our suits is exceptionally fine.

With the Fall really here, our large stocks in suits and coats are now ready.

The coats—really their large collars and deep cuffs, whether of fur or velvet—make lovely lines that give a youthful effect, particularly in the soft velours, and just in passing, do know that the linings are of soft crepes, in the weirdest patterns. Fur and plush make an effective combination. The suits in broadcloth, velours and serges are nearly all in the Fall shades—blue, black, green or burgundy and some brown. The semi-fitted coats, the button trimmings, the more conservative designs in pockets, give the suits the serious spirit that fits in with Autumn time. When you come for your fitting for your suit, (remember all our alterations are free) you will want to decide upon your hat, and this season there's not a shadow of an excuse for an unbecoming one—the styles, extreme or conservative, are made to suit many, many kinds of faces and people.

Blouses—exquisite effects in crepes, satins, with remarkable plaids in taffetas—seem more beautiful with each new shipment. The Fall blouses have deeper collars, some almost to the waistline in back, and others have most unexpected frills coming from under these straight and pointed collars.

Now with the Fall season the store is open from 9 to 6, including Saturdays. Whenever it is impossible for you to come to the store, we're very glad to fill your mail or telephone orders. We take pleasure in serving you promptly.

Smart Yellow China

At Once-in-Six-Months Prices

This year we shall wear yellow gowns, look at yellow crettone covered walls and furniture, read by the light of yellow shaded lamps and eat from yellow china—so says the mode.

Just over from France are four casks of Chas. Field Haviland specially-priced dinner sets. One of the two new border decorations is wonderfully effective in yellow with gilded edges and handles. The yellow bordered sets contain 108 pieces at $42.50 set; another style, with 107 pieces, $32.50 set. These prices are 27½ to 33 1-3 per cent. less than market quotations.

American Uncommon Dinner Sets

These sets show the marked improvement made recently in quality of the body and in decoration of American porcelain and china. They are both much lighter in weight and vastly improved in design.

Complete porcelain sets, 100 pieces, with bread and butter plates, $8.50, $10.

Complete porcelain sets, 108 pieces, with bread and butter plates and 4 dishes, $15.

Complete porcelain sets, 108 pieces, real American china, bread and butter plates, $25.

Thirteen patterns to choose from, all we believe unmatched in value.

MARTINE HAS NOT OPPOSED PRESIDENT

It is Declared That He Has Voted Consistently With His Party.

The public spirited citizenry of the State of New Jersey cannot be fooled by the opposition to Senator Martine into believing that he has been an opponent of the Administration. As a matter of fact he has voted consistently with the Democrats of the Senate on all matters of legislation, and differed with the Administration only once—in the matter of the repeal of the Panama Canal tolls—on which question the Senator stood flatly on the national platform of the Democratic party adopted at Baltimore in 1912.

Senator John W. Kern, Democratic floor leader of the Senate, in a letter to Senator Martine written on Saturday, says:

"Dear Senator Martine: Before leaving for home I want to assure you of my appreciation of your unfailing courtesy and many kindnesses. And I may add that no Senator has warmer or better friends on both sides of the Chamber than yourself.

"You have never failed in your championship of the cause of the people, and that's what makes a genuine Democrat. I hope that the masses of the common people of New Jersey will not fail to appreciate your splendid service."

The great bulk of legislation that comes before Congress each session is gone over by the committees rather than by the entire body of the Senate, as popularly supposed. Committee assignments, therefore, play a large part in the usefulness of a Senator. Martine is a member of industrial expositions, of which he is chairman; census, conservation of natural resources, education and labor, national banks, postoffices and post roads, public buildings and grounds, and university of the United States.

The Senator has shown the results of his research and study, and he has taken an actual part in helping the passage of the following legislation: The parcels post law; all legislation affecting postoffices, clerks, carriers, railway postal clerks and rural free delivery carriers; the Federal workmen's compensation, the eight-hour law as applied to all work done for the government; the child labor bills; the popular election of United States Senators; the Clayton anti-trust law, with especial reference to the labor sections; the seaman's law, which abolished involuntary servitude on the sea and made travel safe for both crew and passengers; the abolition of the Taylor or stop-watch system of management in government shops. His successful fight conducted almost single handed to prevent an indirect reduction of wages on the Panama Canal zone, is an indication of the power he has developed in the Senate. He fathered an investigation into the Lawrence, Mass., West Virgina coal mines, and Roosevelt, Paterson and Bayonne strikes. In the West Virginia affairs Martine took the initiative and did yeoman service. He made of this a real investigation, which is popularly claimed the first Congressional investigation to prove neither a junket or farce.

More than possibly any other member of the body, Senator Martine has been called to serve as presiding officer, both by Vice-President Marshall and the late Vice-President Sherman. His constant attendance at sessions and attention to details fit Martine well for this service.

ALLENTOWN FAIR TO BE BIGGER AND BETTER

September 19th, 20th, 21st and 22d. The great Allentown Fair is the one big event of the year that is looked forward to by the public at large. All preparations have been arranged so that the Allentown Fair this year will not only surpass its previous records, but will be the largest, finest and most interesting fair of its kind ever held in the United States.

There will be four days' trotting, racing and pacing. Over $35,000 in purses and premiums, a $20,000 cooling out shed. A grandstand that seats over 10,000 people is built for the public's convenience. The best vaudeville and circus acts that money can obtain are free to all visitors of the fair. Many of these acts have never been seen in America.

The cattle show will be one worth seeing and very interesting. The poultry and pigeon show will be the largest ever held in the world. Chickens from almost every State in the Union, some worth as high as $500 apiece.

The midway, which is one of the most interesting parts of the great Allentown Fair, will be lined on both sides with the most interesting booths, containing all kinds of novelties, and the large building which are on the fair grounds will be handsomely decorated and will display seventy thousand dollars' worth of various articles, novelties, etc., that the United States use, wear and manufacture.

For the benefit of those who are going to visit the great Allentown Fair on September 19th, 20th, 21st and 22d, all roads will lead to Allentown, and no fair can offer better travel accommodations to its patrons than this. The great Allentown Fair has made arrangements for special trains and reduced rates on all railroads—Reading, Lehigh Valley, Jersey Central and Perkiomen railroads. The Lehigh Valley Transit Company will run limited trains direct to the grounds from Sixty-ninth street and Chestnut Hill, Philadelphia. Come and enjoy yourself with the crowd. Free parkage for all automobiles.

PLAINFIELD THEATRE

Monday afternoon and night, "The Merry Rounders," musical comedy, will hold the boards at the Plainfield Theatre. The regular vaudeville and photoplay program will not be seen until Tuesday afternoon, for which time Manager Shannon has secured an unusually well balanced bill. The headline act consists of a sensational drama with realistic train effects, entitled "The Operator," presented by Harry Nestler. The act is said to be a thriller. A carload of scenery with a wonderful cast compose the production.

Othe numbers on the bill are as follows: "The Bruces," man and woman, who entertain with piano and vocal selections; "Dick Sheppard," comedian, with a new line of jokes that are said to be sure blue chasers; "Ward and Davis," comedians, and "Maximillian and Wills Co.," who present a "little bit of everything" in a twenty-minute sketch.

The program is rounded out with a series of Pathe comedies and dramas, as well as the famous Pathe Weekly, the animated newspaper of current happenings. The entire program will be seen at the theatre Tuesday and Wednesday afternoon and night.

IN THE SUBURBS

DUNELLEN.

Mr. Hiram J. Scandell, of Plainfield, formerly of New Market, and who did business in Dunellen for some time, has just completed a real estate deal of some magnitude. He has exchanged three properties belonging to him, one a house and lot on Fairview avenue, Plainfield; one a farm at Sydney, and one a farm at Somerville, for an apartment house in Mount Vernon, N. Y. The house rents to twenty-six families and is therefore quite a sizable proposition.

Mrs. Delia L. Hogan and brother, William P. Farrell, have moved from the Hogan house on Front street, Dunellen, to their farm just below Blue's corner on the Dunellen-Stelton road in Piscataway township.

W. H. R. Hardingham has moved into his house on Mountain View Terrace, Dunellen, vacated on Monday by his son, Enoch Hardingham.

The new house on Dunellen avenue, just west of Sanford avenue, Dunellen, owned by the National Land and Building Company, has been sold through the agency of W. S. Freeman to H. W. Smalley, of Somerville.

The work of remodelling the old Benward homestead, Dunellen, which is to be the new parsonage of the First Baptist church, has proceeded so fast, the contractor, Firman H. Gise, was able to begin plastering on Tuesday.

Work is proceeding rapidly on the erection of a combined garage and storage building for Contractor H. Clifford Smith on his lot on Front street, Dunellen. The building is being put up by Contractor Walter G. Clawson and is to be of concrete blocks. It will be two stories in height and 48 by 30 feet in ground measurements. The lower story will be used by Mr. Smith to house the automobiles in his contracting business and in the second story furniture will be stored.

NEW MARKET.

Another real estate deal of large proportions has been put through in New Market real estate through the hustling agency of John Fedderman, of Dunellen. All the property of the C. E. Kelly Company, west of Prospect avenue in New Market, including about three acres of land, the C. E. Kelly mill, storehouse and siding from the main line of the Lehigh Valley Railroad, has been sold to Robert Stock, of Cornwall, N. Y., the consideration mentioned being $6,500.00.

Mr. Stock buys for the urpose of erecting a factory for the manufacture of sterilized grain products, and developments along the line of actual work may be looked for at once, as the new owner wishes to get his plant in operation and start manufacturing.

Tentative inquiries with regard to estimates have already been made from various local contractors. This deal means another fine advancement for the village in the process of being transformed from a quiet agricultural community to an industrial centre of some importance.

The present mill building will be used for the manufacture of articles necessary to the proper treatment of the grain. The main factory will be 190 feet long by 35 feet wide. The plans for the same are now beinfl drawn by Architect William H. Clum.

FANWOOD.

Elizabeth contractors have nearly completed the erection of a $5,000 bungalow for James Earl, of Elizabeth. H. C. Lockwood reports the sale of a number of lots in various parts of the borough, on which buildings will be erected in the near future.

SCOTCH PLAINS.

Work has been completed on the cutting of Flanders street through the property of that name on Front street, and lots are now being staked off. The Hoag house on Union street has been completed, and the paper mill is nearly ready to be used again after being rebuilt.

T. J. VAIL REPORTS SEVERAL SALES IN PAST FEW DAYS

J. T. Vail, the North avenue realty promoter, has reported several sales during the past few days. He has sold two and a half acres on the Watchung Mountains, back of Bound Brook, to H. Clark Saunders, of New Brunswick. Mr. Saunders intends building a large stone house there in the spring.

Mr. Vail also sold the Suffern tract at Dunellen to Messrs. Perrin and Campbell. This is the tract which, it was rumored, had been purchased by the Fergus Motor Car Company as a factory site.

PERMITS ARE STILL WAY BELOW NORMAL

Only Six Are Granted by Building Inspector During Week.

TABLE OF BUILDING PERMITS.

Ward.	No.	Amount.
1	2	$1,200
3	3	425
4	1	250
Total	6	$1,875
	2	6,250
September total	8	$8,125

Six permits that did not total two thousand dollars were approved by the building inspector' office during the second week in September, raising the total number of permits issued for the month to eight and an aggregate outlay of $8,125.

The largest permit was issued to Rosi La Costa, of Jackson avenue, for the building of an addition on to the residence of 110 East Second street to cost $1,200. It will be of frame construction, two stories in height, and 22x24x36. Joseph Indico will do the work. John Wyman & Son were granted permission to build an extension onto the barn at 404 East Front street. It will cost $100, be two stories in height and of frame construction. It will be 16x16x22 and be built by Mr. Wyman for use as a shop and garage.

Charles Krauss filed plans for the erection of a cement and hollow tile plumbing shop to be located at 427 West Fourth street and to cost $300. It will be one story in height, 30x30x16 and be erected by Anthony Toto. Hector C. Smith is to build an addition to his barn at 977 Madison avenue to cost $25 and be used as a garage. It will be 6x12, one story high and of frame construction. H. D. Smith has the contract. The third permit issued in the Third ward was to Willis Wilson for a garage to cost $100, to be built at 506 Lee place. It will be of one story, frame construction and 12x12 x18.

The only permit for the Fouard ward was to Charle Smalley for a garage at 345 Evona avenue to cost $250. It will be 12x12x16, of frame construction and one story in height. Charles Sandberg will do the work

TWO PLAINFIELD PLACES SOLD AT SHERIFF SALE

Two tracts of land in Plainfield were sold at a sheriff sale Wednesday afternoon. One of these tracts is located at Leland avenue and George stret, and was sold to V. W. McCutcheon for $3,625 to satisfy the claim of the Prudential Insurance Company against the Highland Park Realty Company for unpaid mortgages.

The other tract, located at the corner of Short Hills road and Central avenue, was sold to William L. Smalley, complainant, fof unpaid mortgages against Peter J. McDonough and others.

WOFRK ON DEMEZA & BLIMM BUILDING TO COST $1,500

Work was started this week remodeling of the store recently vacated by Daley Brothers on East Front street. It will be occupied by DeMeza & Blimm about November 1 as a first class gents' furnishing shop. The improvements will cost about $1,500 and will include an entire new front and interior changes.

Alexander Milne has the general contract, Ryder & Graves the electrical work, and Van Arsdale the tiling.

A FIVE-ROOM BUNGALOW

DESIGNED BY CHAS. S. SEDGWICK, ARCHITECT.

HERE is a bungalow well suited to a northern climate with a frontage of 38 ft. and a depth of 45 ft. including the glazed piazza. There are five good rooms with all necessary conveniences, ample closets and a good large attic for storage, but not high enough for rooms. The exterior is of frame construction and veneered with brick up to the windows and above this point covered with wide siding and the gables finished with stucco and half timbers. It is estimated to be constructed for $4,000 to $4,800 exclusive of heating and plumbing. The entrance is onto a wide cemented terrace extended across the front of living room and with a vestibule opening into the living room which is 13 ft. wide by 22 ft. long. A columned opening connects this room with dining room and French windows open onto the glazed porch. This porch is glazed and screened and finished the same as other portions of house. The arrangement of rooms is convenient and they are all of good size. There are stairs to the attic between the dining room and front bed room with basement stairs underneath, with a small hall between the bed rooms, kitchen and bath room in the rear. The finish of wood work is in mission stained fir or oak, with oak floors. The outside trimmings are painted white with the wide siding and all shingles stained brown. The brick used up to windows to be of dark Oriental, also for the terrace wall, with the large corner piers built of natural field stone. The entire combination of the exterior is artistic and pleasing.

BUILDING NOTES

Contractors have completed the remodelling at 1109 Park avenue, and all is ready for the initial oening of the new Wardlaw School. Recitation rooms, gymnasium and all other departments of the school have been built in the most modern manner.

As soon as the local postoffice is moved to the Federal building on Watchung avenue, it is said George Babcock will make a number of changes to the Babcock building, at the corner of Front and Madison avenue. The front of the ground story will be extended out to the building line of the upper stories of the structure, doing away with the large pillars, and several airshafts and other improvements will be made.

Work has been started on the laying of sidewalks and grading the ground about the new postoffice building on Watchung avenue. The interior work of the structure is being pushed forward rapidly and it is probable the building will be ready for occupancy shortly after the first of the year.

Work has been temporarily stopped on the remodeling of the Dreier building at Front street and Madison avenue by an injunction granted by the Vice-Chancellor at Newark. Harvey and Garret Drier are having John Cunniff take 8 feet 6 inches off the Madison avenue side of the building to make room for the street widening and add the same number of feet to the rear. The work is to cost $4,-$430 and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Senger, the complainants, say they can have the same work done for $2,000.

A number of improvements are under way at the residence of Allen E. Beals at Front and Norwood avenues. A solarium is to be built by G. A. Renninger on the upstairs front porch, the lower porch is to be rebuilt and Winn & Higgins have installed Mott plumbing fixtures in the toilets. Other parts of the house will be improved. Mr. Beals will move into his new home about October 1.

The Apgar Construction Company, of Dunellen, has been awarded the contract for the erection of a $9,000 bungalow on the Stirling road, near Watchung, for William J. Spicer. It will have nine rooms and several baths, besides all other improvements. It will be ready for occupancy by November 1.

James McMillen has awarded George Nolty the contract for the erection of a two and a half story house to be built at 472 Watchung avenue. It will be of frame, colonial construction and cost in the vicinity of $4,500. The building will contain seven rooms and bath.

Harry McWade is to build a two and a half story house for himself on Crescent road to cost $3,500. It will have all improvements and be completed about November 1.

CONTRACTS FILED

The following building contracts have been filed with the county clerk in Elizabeth during the past week:

Cohen and Israelsky Building Company with Merchants' and Traders' Realty Company, entire work six new buildings, Plainfield; $10,800.

FEEDING THE BOY.

Give Every Healthy Youngster the Diet His System Craves.

The growing boy—the active, healthy, normal boy—is a better judge of his diet than mother or father or doctor. He needs every kind of food, plenty of it, and his system will naturally crave for just those foods that are best for him.

Such, in substance, is the theme of an article in the National Food Magazine by Dr. H. E. Barnard.

There are two kinds of food—proteins, with which the body is built up, and the growing boy needs as much of these as the full grown man, often more; carbohydrates, which are the fats and sugars and starches that supply heat and energy.

The boy's protein food need not all be meat. Dr. Barnard says "it is better that no small part of this nitrogenous food come from milk and eggs, cheese, beans and peas. If he has plenty of these rich and relatively cheap foods he will not crave meat so inordinately as some growing boys do," Dr. Barnard continues:

"The boy needs a large quantity of carbohydrates. That is why his demand for bread and butter is limited only by the supply at hand; and when he uses almost as much butter as bread, do not stint him. By the pound butter is expensive, but it is pure, wholesome food, and he can use it readily. It will not make him ill; quite the contrary.

"And do not be afraid of sugar and sweet foods. Sugar is a true concentrated food. Give him candy for dessert. He craves it and his craving is natural, not abnormal.

"The boy's instincts will lead him to choose the all around diet he needs."

OUR BELT OF ATMOSPHERE.

In Thickness It Is to the Earth as the Skin Is to the Apple.

In a contribution to the year book of the department of agriculture Roscoe Nunn of the United States weather bureau compares the thickness of the atmospheric envelope that surrounds the earth with the diameter of the earth itself.

The extreme limit of the earth's atmosphere above the surface of the earth is estimated to be 180 miles. The earth's diameter is approximately 8,000 miles. But the density of the atmosphere decreases rapidly as altitude increases, so that three quarters of the mass of the atmosphere lies below the seven mile level.

Thus the solid earth has but a thin coating of air, at most only about one-fortieth as thick as the diameter of the earth, or if we consider only its really appreciable extent, which is about forty miles above the earth, only one-two-hundredth as thick as the diameter of the earth. It is therefore a mere coating, not thicker, relatively speaking, than the skin on an apple of ordinary size. When we consider the fact that storms operate only in that part of the atmosphere which lies within about seven miles of the earth, and chiefly within three miles, it is truly wonderful what mighty forces they generate and what vast energy they expend within that thin film of gas.

A storm condition may cover one-third of the United States. The disturbance may be 1,000 to 1,500 miles in diameter, but less than seven miles thick. In other words, the body of air in which those tremendous forces work is of about the same proportions as a postcard.

NO ARCTIC WARRIORS.

As Hunters the Natives Are Wonders, but Cannot Make Soldiers.

Battle history halts at the arctic circle. Beyond that human life is so difficult to sustain that its willful waste is unthinkable. Nations with a foothold in the icy north recruit no armies in that frigid zone. Indeed, the men are of such meager stature and intellect that a military training is next to impossible.

The real natives of the arctic can endure hunger and fatigue, can march in their own fashion through hurricane and blizzard, but their value is rather to the explorer of the inhospitable north than to the soldier. As hunters they are wonderfully clever, yet they are curiously formal in administering the coup de grace.

They will apologize to the fierce white bear which they have cornered before advancing to a close attack with bone tipped arrows and spears, a duel in which the odds seem decisively on the bear destroying the man. They are therefore not cowards in any sense, and few sportsmen would risk their lives against bear and wolf and walrus protected only by futile weapons and their own personal dexterity.

The Lapps and Samoyeds of arctic Russia, like the Eskimos of North America and Greenland, are so often compelled in times of dearth and famine to sacrifice their aged weaklings that this form of death has become a vague religious and social principle with them.

Nature's Rifle Bullets.

What man has learned by dint of thought and experiment some of the lower animals appear to know through instinct. An instance is furnished by what is called the "spiral swimming" of certain organisms, such as the spherical shaped volvox and several elongated infusorians. As these revolve about the axis of progression in the manner of a projectile fired from a rifled gun the consequence is that they are able to travel in a straight line, as they could not do otherwise, the revolution compensating with absolute precision for any tendency to deviate from a straight course. Without such a device many of these minute creatures would simply describe circles, making no forward progress.

Creation of a Knight.

The ceremonies at the creation of a knight have been various. The principal were a box on the ear and a stroke with a sword on the shoulder. John of Salisbury tells us the blow with the naked fist was in use among the ancient Normans. By this it was that William the Conqueror conferred the honor of knighthood on his son Henry. It was afterward changed into a blow with the flat of the sword on the shoulder of the knight.

Appreciation.

"How was the concert last night?" asked the low browed person.

"Splendid," replied the lover of music. "Signor Spodelli actually made his violin talk."

"It's remarkable what some of those fellows can do with a fiddle. I heard a chap in vaudeville once who could imitate the howling of a dog to perfection."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Losing Ground.

"My wife is in a fix about her garden party."

"What's wrong?"

"Declinations are coming in about as fast as she can send invitations out."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Making Progress.

"Has he asked for your daughter's hand?"

"No, but I have hopes. He has taken to ordering the servants about."—Life.

PLAINFIELD, NEW JERSEY, SEPTEMBER 16, 1916.

On Saturdays the editorial column of the Daily Press is conducted, at our request, by citizens who are free to express their own views. The contributing editor for today is S. S. Swackhamer.

"Prisoner at the bar, have you anything to say why sentence of death shall not be passed upon you?"

"I have, Your Honor, you have asked me a question, and now I ask, as the last favor on earth, that you will not interrupt my answer until I am through.

"I stand here before this bar, convicted of the wilful murder of my wife. Truthful witnesses have testified to the fact that I was a loafer, a drunkard and a wretch; that I returned from one of my prolonged debauches and fired the fatal shot that killed the wife I had sworn to love, cherish and protect. While I have no remembrance of committing the fearful, cowardly and inhuman deed, I have no right to complain or to condemn the verdict of the twelve good men who have acted as jury in this case, for their verdict is in accordance with the evidence.

"But may it please the court, I wish to show that I AM NOT ALONE RESPONSIBLE FOR THE MURDER OF MY WIFE:

"I repeat, your honor, that I am not the only one guilty of the murder of my wife. The Judge on this bench, the jury in the box, the lawyers within this bar, and most of the witnesses, including the pastor of the old church, are also guilty before Almighty God, and will have to appear with me before His Judgment Throne, where we all shall be righteously judged.

"If twenty men conspire together for the murder of one person, the law power of this land will arrest the twenty, and each will be tried, convicted and executed for the whole murder, and not one-twentieth of the crime.

"I have been made a drunkard by law. If it had not been for the legalized saloons of my town, I never would have become a drunkard; my wife would not have been murdered; I would not be here now, ready to be hurled into eternity. Had it not been for the human trap set out with the consent of the government I would have been a sober man, an industrious workman, a tender father and a loving husband. But today my home is destroyed, my wife murdered, my little children—God bless and care for them—cast out on the mercy of a cold and cruel world, while I am to be murdered by the strong arm of the State.

"God knows I tried to reform, but as long as the open saloon was in my pathway, my weak, disease will-power was no match against the fearful, consuming, agonizing appetite for liquor. At last I sought the protection, care and sympathy of the church of Jesus Christ and for a time my reformation seemed complete, but unfortunately I attended an evening party where beauty shone and wine flowed freely and when the sparkling glass was passed to me by the delicate hand of a lady of fashion and culture I could not resist the temptation, but took the cup that contained the same alcoholic serpent that is found in every bar-room in the land. It proved too much for my weak humanity and out from that social circle I rushed to the last debauch that ended with the murder of my wife.

"For one year our town was without a saloon. For one year I was a sober man. For one year my wife and children were supremely happy, and our little home a perfect paradise.

"I was one of those who signed remonstrances against re-opening the saloons in our town. The names of one-half of this jury can be found today on the petition certifying to the good moral character (?) of the rumsellers, and falsely saying that the sale of liquor was 'necessary' in our town. The prosecuting attorney in this case was the one that so eloquently pleaded with this court for the licenses, and the Judge who sits on this bench, and who asked me if I had anything to say before sentence of death was passed on me, granted the license."

The Judge made a motion as if to stop any further speech on the part of the prisoner, when the speaker hastily said:

"No! No! Your Honor, do not close my lips; I am nearly through, and they are the last words I shall utter on earth.

"I began my downward career at a saloon BAR—legalized and protected by the voters of this Commonwealth which has received annually a part of the blood money from the poor deluded victims. After the State had made me a drunkard and a murderer I am taken before another BAR—the bar of Justice (?) by the same power of law that legalized the first bar and now the Law power will conduct me to the place of execution and hasten my soul into eternity. I shall appear before another bar—the JUDGMENT BAR OF GOD, and there you who have legalized the traffic, will have to appear with me. Think you that the Great Judge will hold me—the poor weak, helpless victim of your traffic—alone responsible for the murder of my wife? Nay, I in my drunken, frenzied, irresponsible condition, have murdered one but you have deliberately and wilfully murdered your thousands and the murder mills are in full operation today with your consent.

"All of you know in your hearts that these words of mine are not the ravings of an unsound mind, but God Almighty's truth. The liquor traffic of this nation is responsible for nearly all the murders, bloodshed, riots, misery, wretchedness and woe. It breaks up thousands of happy homes every year; sends the husband and father to prison or to the gallows, and drives countless mothers and little children into the world to suffer and die. It furnishes nearly all the criminal business of this and every other court, and blasts every community it touches.

"The infernal traffic is legalized and protected by the Republican and Democratic parties, which you sustain with your ballots. And yet some of you have the audacity to say that you are in favor of prohibiting the traffic, while rumsellers and the worst elements of the land are in favor of continuing the business. Every year you are given an opportunity of voting a protest against this soul and body destroying business and wash your hands of all responsibility for the fearful results of the traffic; but instead you inform the Government by your Democratic or Republican ballot that you are perfectly satisfied with the present condition of things, and that they shall continue.

"You legalized the saloons that made me a drunkard and a murdered, and you are guilty with me before God and man for the murder of my wife.

"Your honor, I am done. I am now ready to receive my sentence and be led forth to the place of execution and murdered according to the laws of this State. You will close by asking the Lord to have mercy on my soul. I will close by solemnly asking God to open your blind eyes to the truth, to your own individual responsibility so that you will cease to give your support to this hell-born traffic."

The Arkansan's Prayer.

O stay Thy wrath

The Weather Man.

The weather man (I know him well),
Who has charge of the station,
Is quite a decent sort of chap
Outside his occupation.

When not concocting devilish schemes
To pester us with weather,
He is a charming man to meet—
Delightful altogether.

It's a Mortal Cinch—

That the fellow who calls you up at 2 a. m. on the telephone by mistake is going to call you down. He is going to say: "What? Ain't this six-eleven sixty-six? Well, why in blazes ain't it?"

That the pie that comes home from the grocery is going to have a cracked top and part of the edge peeled off

That the telephone is going to be busy for half an hour when you want to get your wife in a hurry.

That the fellow is going to marry the girl before you get to the end of the book.

That the good things on the quick lunch bill of fare are going to be gone before you get there.

That your automobile is going to balk just as soon as you pick up some one to whom you have been praising your car all summer.

That the lady with the large hat will get peevish at you when she runs onto you and twists it out of shape.

Isn't It Queer?

That a woman will spend two hours arranging her hair and then put on a hat that covers it all up so nobody on earth can see it.

That a man can always find all of his dress suit fixings in time if he is going to a musical comedy, but always has a monkey and parrot time finding anything at all if he is going out.

to a reception.

That a man will call his wife a little dear when his jocketbook tells him she is much dearer than a little.

That most of the articles giving advice to mothers are written by old maids.

That a woman never keeps a pen that anybody but herself can write with.

An Excusable Mistake.

Mr. Puddleford entered the living room, and looked at the thing in a startled sort of way. It was a thing with four rubber tired wheels and a pair of handles to push it by.

He could not imagine why the thing should be in his house and he was perplexed, alarmed and mystified. He then looked at his wife.

"Well, I'll be jiggered," he exclaimed. "This is a fine way to break the news to me. I'll be——"

"Don't get excited," interrupted his wife quietly. "It isn't what you think it is, at all. It's only a tea wagon."

He Should Have Been More Explicit.

A Lowell man who was enjoying great sport with the finny tribe at Clifford Lake, went to the telegraph office and wired his wife as follows: "I've got one weighs seven pounds, and it is a beauty." In reply came the following one from his wife: "So have I; weighs ten pounds; he isn't a beauty; looks like you."—Portland Review.

"For the tail light, you chump," replied the evcited man. "A policeman just told me my tail light was out. Hurry up."

- Proctor's Theatre -

"The Fall of a Nation," at Proctor's Next Wednesday, Thursday and Fri day.

Today a double feature program is presented for the entertainment of patrons attending Proctor's local playhouse, a prominent feature of the program being exclusive motion pictures taken by the Proctor camera man of the huge Newark Parade of Elks. The management of Proctor's took special care to get good views of the local delegation and upon its first presentation yesterday many excellent scenes of the Plainfield Elks were shown. The program today consists of a Paramount and a Metro offering, the former being a picturization of Sir Henry Arthur Jones' play, "Lydia Gilmore," starring Pauline Frederick, and the Metro production, starring Harold Lockwood and May Allison, and entitled "The Masked Rider." In "Lydia Gilmore," which was secured by the Proctor management by the request of many of the patrons, Miss Frederick is seen at her best and scores an emotional triumph. "The Masked Rider" is a stirring story of adventure mingled with a charming love tale, and features Harold Lockwood and May Allison as Metro stars for the first time. On Monday Vitagraph will present two excellent features. One "The Daring of Diana," starring Anita Stewart, is a vivid tale of newspaper life, Diana being a reporter on one of the biggest sheets in New York city. The other is entitled "The Redemption of Dave Darcey," and features James Morrison. This feature contains more real thrills than the average production. On Tuesday Wilfred Lucas and Bessie Love will co-star in the great Triangle success, 'Hell to Pay Austin," which recently completed a triumphant run at the New Rialto Theatre, New York. Other features Tuesday include the presentation of the first episode of "The Grip of Evil," the last episode of "The Secret of the Submarine," and an uproariously funny Keystone comedy.

True to the announcement made by the Proctor management last week that the local theatre would be the scene for some wonderful photoplay productions in the near future, we have been made aware of the fact within the past few days that the mighty Thomas Dixon war spectacle, "The Fall of a Nation," will be presented Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of next week.

"CIVILIZATION" TO BE SHOWN HERE WITHIN SHORT TIME

Devotees of the theatre will be interested to learn that Thos. H. Ince's million dollar spectacle, "Civilization," will be the attraction at a local theatre soon. "Civilization" is said to be the greatest battle drama of all time. Seldom, if ever, has a production of this kind received such unanimous praise. The cast consists of the following: Herschel Mayall, Miss Lola May, Howard Hickman, Miss Enid Markey, George Fisher, J. Frank Burke, Charles K. French, J. Barney Sherry, Jerome Storm and Miss Ethel Ullman. It may be remarked that Victor L. Schertizinger's masterful score will be played in its entirety during the unfolding of the great story.

Plainfield Theatre.

"The Merry Rounders," with Abe Reynolds and Geo. F. Hayes featured, presenting a two-act revue in ten scenes, entitled "This is the Life," comes to the Plainfield Theatre for a one day's stay Monday, matinee and night, September 18.

The show is owned and produced by Max Spiegel and it is said to be the most elaborate production ever made by this past master in the producing game. Spiegel practically revolutionized burlesque with his shows and has been in the vanguard, showing the way to other producers and show owners ever since his first production, "The College Girls."

Reynolds, for many seasons the star of Spiegel attractions, will be seen in the character which he has made famous, the shrewd but at the same time kindly Hebrew "Jacob Rosenbloom." Eugene MacGregor, for years a musical comedy favorite, is with "The Merry Rounders," as well as Frank Ward, a vaudeville headliner for years. May Latham, who won her reputation last season as a song bird, again heads the female contingent by reason of her ability to entertain those who like light, clean and refreshing burlesque. Elizabeth Jane, a comely little miss, is cast in the soubrette role and possesses all the qualifications necessary for that exacting part. Ruth Wesley, a charming ingenue, completes the female principals.

COLGATE BOOM SHOWS STRENGTH

Political Students Surprised at the Progress of His Candidacy for Governor.

Trenton, Sept. 16.—Political students in the State have been surprised during the past weeks at the leaps and bounds made shown by the candidacy of Austen Colgate for the Republican nomination for Governor. Especially has this boom for Colgate shown strength during the past two weeks, despite the fact that many of the county leaders have been advocating Walter E. Edge.

Mercer county has always been the place to study the political composition of the State, what the people are thinking about, and how the politicians are giving their allegiance to various candidates. This is because New Jersey is relatively a small State where the politicians gather in Trenton every Tuesday to exchange views.

Mercer county has been in the limelight during the present campaign due to the activities of A. Crozer Reeves, the leader of the former Progressives here, who has not forgotten the principles he fought for four years ago, but says that in the candidacy of Austen Colgate everything progressive in politics can be found. So the Mercer Progressives have followed Mr. Reeves for Colgate.

Borden D. Whiting, former chairman of the Progressive State Committee; Irving K. Taylar, chairman of the Essex County Progressive committee; Edgar A. Knapp, vice-chairman of the Progressive State committee; Frank B. Jess, former Progressive candidate for Congress in Camden, and many other Progressives are out for Colgate, and the Union County Progressive-Roosevelt League has gone over to Colgate in a body.

The workmen of Mercer have issued a resolution stating that they found Colgate always ready to aid them in legislation.

A Man Who Knew Everything.

Thiers, the French statesman, was a victim of many whimsies. None had stronger hold on him, says Mgr. Gabriel Hanotaux in "Contemporary France," than his desire to get everybody to recognize his universal competency.

Of an applicant for the post of director at the Sevres manufactory Thiers said:

"He is no more made for that part than I for" and then he stopped.

"Ah, oh! M. Thiers," said his interlocutor, "you find it hard to say what you could not do."

"That's the truth! That's the truth!" cried the statesman cheerfully.

One day Thiers said, speaking of a man who had been raised to a high function:

"He is no more suited for that office than I am to be a druggist. And yet," he added, catching himself up, "I do know chemistry!"

Force of Light.

Light has an actual mechanical pressure and can be measured in the laboratory. It has been found that the sun's light in itself presses against the earth with a force something like 70,000 tons. As the surface of a sphere varies as the square of the radius, and as the volume or mass varies as the cube of the radius, and as the mechanical pressure of light on the whole surface varies as that surface, and as the force of gravity varies as the mass, if a sphere is made smaller and smaller it is easily seen that the pressure of light does not decrease so fast as the force of gravity, so bodies beyond a certain minuteness could not reach the sun, but would be repelled by the mechanical force of its light.

MADEMOISELLE ARMOR PLATED WITH BRAID.

At this stage of the game in the fashionable world there is little to surprise one—not even the fact that Mademoiselle is to go about encased in a veritable armor-plated costume of serge so densely embroidered in soutache that she appears almost "stiff." She is not this, however, for the embroidery is so supple that it is not at all cumbersome. One extremely smart model of this type was recently shown in navy blue serge. The lines were rather straight, showing only a slight suggestion of fittedness at the waistline. The bodice was almost entirely braided with matching colored soutache, and was cleverly finished with rows of buttons. The skirt was about seven inches from the ground, and while there was ample fulness it was disguised under the deep inverted pleats. This is so in Mademoiselle's of the smart models this season. There are pleats and shirrings and plenty of fulness; but this fulness is not distended to any great extent. A band of wichtex is stitched in the hem and the collar, but further than this there is no stiffening. With the gown illustrated, smart button boots and a velvet chapeau were worn.

NEW SPORT COATS.

By Mary Glynn.

The fur sport coat is really very new and assuredly very attractive. We've all seen the nice old seal coats "nipped" at the waistline and perked out in back, the kind that grandmothers used to wear. Well! These remind one of them, mostly because they are short and also because they are in many instances "niped" at the waistline. However, they are otherwise very modern, very chic, to say the least. The flare from this "nipped" waistline, not out in back or any one direction, but all around. They have cosy pockets and deep cuffs and huge comfortable collars, generally of a combining fur. They are beautifully lined often with pussy willow or satin. These coats are shown invariably in moleskin, seal or Kolinsky, and are trimmed with 'possum, skunk or fox. They undoubtedly will be the joy of every happy possessor, for they are not too cumbersome, as most long fur coats are for sports wear, and are certainly extremely smart and very comfortable. To match any of these sport coats there are hats either of the one or two furs shown in the coat.

Heinel Was Crowned King of the Golden Mountain.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Heinel Became King of the Golden Mountain.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

JACK and Evelyn, like good children, had daddy's chair all placed for him. So he began at once: "This is a story about Heinel, who bore a beating and torments three nights in order to save a princess from a horrid fate that a bad fairy had wished on her. Black men came and pinched him for three nights, and then the spell broke. At midnight the young princess turned from a white snake back into her own form.

"She was so very grateful to Heinel for bearing pain for her sake that she put her arms around his neck and kissed him. Joy and gladness broke through the dreary old castle. The wedding was celebrated, and Heinel was crowned king of the Golden mountain.

"Heinel and his queen lived together very happily and had a little son, and thus eight years of happiness passed when the king thought of his old father. Heinel wanted to see his father again, you see.

"But his queen did not want him to leave her and their little boy. 'Misfortune will come to us if you leave us now,' said the queen to Heinel.

"But Heinel gave her no peace till she would let him go. When he left she gave him a wishing ring. 'Take this ring and put it on your finger,' she told Heinel. 'Whatever you wish it will bring you, only promise that you will never use it to make me come to your father's house.'

"Then Heinel promised, put the ring on his finger and wished himself near the town where his father lived.

"In less time than it takes your daddy to tell it Heinel was at the gates of the town. But the guards would not let him in because he was strangely clad, like a king. So he borrowed a frock from a shepherd and, going to his father's house, said he was the long lost son. But even his father would not believe him. He said his son Heinel had died at sea long ago. But Heinel showed his father a mark like a raspberry on his right arm, and his father had to believe him.

"Then Heinel told how he had become king of the Golden mountain, married a princess and had a little son seven years old. But his father cried, 'It is a nice king that travels about in the frock of a shepherd!'

"This vexed Heinel, and before he thought of his promise to his wife he turned his ring and wished for his family. In a flash they stood before him, but the queen wept and said he had brought bad luck upon them all. At last Heinel made her happy again. And now a good night kiss!" cried daddy.

Training a Husband

BY MRS EVA LEONARD

Morris is Thoughtful for Once and His Wife Gives Him Credit for Having a Kind Heart.

"It is eight o'clock." Morris Southy held his watch in his hand. "I will sit with Florence until one and give her the medicine. You lie down on the couch and I will call you when I am ready to go to bed."

"I am afraid that will be too hard on you with your teaching tomorrow," demurred Marian.

"That will be all right. I will have six hours then to sleep before seven and I need not get up till seven if breakfast is all ready. I do not need to be at school before half-past eight, you know." Morris started for the bedroom with his book. Marian followed to see how the child looked. She was not quite so flushed with fever as she had been in the afternoon and Marian turned to leave the room. Morris was sitting by the shaded lamp, his slippered feet on a chair.

"Now sleep well," he said kindly. "You need all the rest you can get."

"I feel guilty, leaving you to sit up with her." Marian stooped and kissed his forehead just below the line of the thinning hair. "Be sure and call me before one o'clock if you feel tired." Morris waved his hand toward the door and Marian said no more.

She curled up on the couch by the open window. The soft night air stole in and fanned her tired face. It had been a very hard day and so utterly weary was she that she dropped off to sleep almost at once, happy in the thought that Morris had thought of her comfort.

At one o'clock Morris came into the room to waken her, but she was so sound asleep that she did not hear him when he spoke her name. He stood over her some minutes, then gently laid a shawl over her shoulders, for the night was growing chill, and went back to his vigil. When Marian woke the faint light of early dawn was creeping into the room. She rubbed her eyes and sat up. At first she could not remember where she was. Then it flashed over her. Why had not Morris called her? She rose hastily and went into the sick room. Morris had fallen asleep in his chair, his head resting on the table. Florence was sleeping peacefully, her fever all gone.

"Dear Morris, why did you not call me?" she asked, gently stroking his face. "It is after four o'clock and you will not have much time to sleep. Hurry and get to bed."

Morris roused himself. "Did I go to sleep? Well, I thought it was not very necessary to give the medicine so often, as she seemed so much better. Her fever was all gone."

"Why did you not call me as you agreed?" repeated Marian.

"I did go in to call you but you were sleeping so soundly I decided to let you alone. You had a hard day yesterday." Morris yawned and rose.

"I will not call you till a quarter to eight. You can get to school in time, and if you were late for once there would be no harm done," said Marian.

"No, make it half-past seven, sure now. I cannot afford to be seen coming to school after the first bell rings." He left the room.

Marian seated herself by the bed and felt of the little hands. They were cool and moist.

"Thank God, she is better," she breathed. "How kind of Morris to let me sleep when he is tired and needs the rest as much as I do," she mused as she gazed at the reddening eastern sky. "Morris is a kind man and I must not misjudge him. One thing I am convinced; I am making a great mistake in showing irritation. It is but adding fuel to flame. If I can only keep cheerful and pleasant no matter how irritable he is I surely can accomplish much more than if I show anger." She took the soft hand of the child in her own and pressed it against her cheek. "It is as mother used to say, 'It is all in being able to have your sense of humor lively enough to be of use in any emergency.' The trouble is with me; it fails me when there is the greatest need." She kissed the warm little fingers. "When I am tempted to be impatient I must remember how Morris sat up nearly all night that I might have a good sleep. That will help me keep in mind what I know is true, that he has a kind heart under his burr of an exterior."

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

CALLAHAN'S STORY.

There has been much comment recently about the length of Jimmy Callahan's contract as Pirate manager. This comment is not confined to fans, but includes members of the Buc team. Cal is there to stay for awhile. In a little discussion not long ago in the clubhouse at Forbes field a remark was made by one of the players to Cal that perhaps he would not be with the team for long, and Jim answered in no uncertain tone that he would be with the Pirates as manager long after most of the present fellows have gone. Incidentally, the man who make the remark about Cal probably leaving soon is no longer a member of the Buc club. Jim took hold when conditions were bad and has been obliged to build a clug to his own liking. It has been tough and he has been handicapped by lack of material, but he is beginning to see the light. Then the players did not work in extra accord with Cal the greater part of the season, as there seemed to be an undercurrent of feeling against his methods and ideas of bossing the men. Cal is one of those fellows who wants it understood thoroughly who is boss of the outfit, and is not backward in telling an obstreperous player just where the big mistakes lies. This is something new for a lot of the Pirates, but they are getting away from the idea of antagonism now, as they realize Cal means business and to cross his ideas means a shift for another job. Conditions are better on the Pittsburg club right now than at any time this year, and, in fact, for several seasons.

PENNANT RACES TIGHTER.

"The major league pennant races are tighter than ever The Superbas have a lead of three points on the Phillies and are ten points ahead of the Boston Braves. The Red Sox lead the Tigers by two points and the White Sox by thirteen. As a result it would not be surprising if new leaders appeared tomorrow in both leagues. The Red Sox appear to be facing the hardest task of any of the six contenders. Carrigan's crew must play most of their remaining games on the road, while the Tigers and White Sox are home for the remainder of the season, with the exception of one short trip. The Superbas are home to stay, the Phillies have three games to play on the road, while the Braves have eleven battles staged for foreign fields."—Newark News.

• • • • • •

THAT SUNDAY GAME.

When tomorrow rolls around the battle will begin. According to well founded information, Pete Simmons is prepared for the fray and has secured talent that is talent in every sense of the word. Well, we have endeavored to do a little scouting and have come to the conclusion that the Tabs are also prepared. To us it looks as though there is going to be a battle of "Preparedness" versus "Preparedness." Who will win out we do not know. We don't care to make predictions and we do not believe in betting. It is merely a case of the better team winning and, in our opinion, it's going to be a hard job telling which is the better combination. It is probable that the best array of colored talent that ever appeared in this city will be on hand tomorrow.

• • • • • •

THE VALUE OF PRAISE.

To some it may appear that there is little or no value attached to columns that are devoted to praising the work accomplished by athletes. Fortunately, there are only a few who hold such ideas. When a feature of the "League Limelight" nature is instituted, there begin various comments, many of them favorable and a few that are not favorable. But we believe that such articles of praise do at least a little good. When a person does something worth while he deserves commendation. In order that such commendation might be given unreservedly, we instituted the "League Limelight." And we are told that this feature is popular.

• • • • • •

WHY NOT USE HIM?

Cliff Randolph may pitch for the Tabs on the morrow and then, again, he may not do the pitching. Manager Scott would do well to have him on the mound, for it is a well known fact that Simmons has secured the best there is in the line of talent. There is also a report in circulation to the effect that Eugene Lidgate will catch for the locals. Lidgate is a local youth as is Randolph and the purely "home" battery would be immensely popular with the fans. And if they won—nothing would be too good for them.

• • • • • •

CHANGE THAT LAUGH.

We understand that Westfield fans and players are still laughing over the defeat handed the Dunellen team. Also we learn that Westfield believes that it now has "some" baseball team, although it is an admitted fact that only High School boys did the trimming on Maurer Oval. It might be well for Tommy Apgar to invite the Westfield management to return for another match. Perhaps things would be a little different with John Dixon or Warry McLaughlin on the mound. At any rate, were we Tommy Apgar we would order another test. But we are not Tommy Apgar.

STEVENSON SAYS RUMOR IS UNTRUE

Plainfield Youth Never Considered Pingry and Will Enter P. H. S.

Allan Stevenson, the local athlete, whose probable entrance to Pingry School in Elizabeth was reported in an Elizabeth newspaper the other evening says that there is not a bit of truth in the rumor that he even considered entering the Betaytown institution.

The report was put in circulation by the Elizabeth newspaper and the account was reproduced in the Sport Topics. Much was said regarding Allan's prowess and physical ability, and it appeared as though the Elizabeth people counted on Stevenson for this year's football squad. Inasmuch as Allan says that the statements are not true and that he intends to return to Plainfield High School, it is only just that this correction be made. It would not be amiss for the Elizabeth newspaper to make the correction, also.

FARMERS TO TRAVEL.

The Farmer baseball team will take a short trip to Somerville tomorrow. While there the local boys will endeavor to repeat at the expense of the Tigers.

On the GRIDIRON

Yale.

After ten days' drilling at the hands of Head Coach Tad Jones and his staff of assistants the Yale varsity football squad played its first practice game with the second team yesterday afternoon. The varsity had about twenty minutes of hard scrimmage on a wet field, during which Harry Legore plunged the ball over the opposition line for the first touchdown this year. An attempt to score a second time by the regulars was stopped by the scrub team at the ten-yard line.

Head Coach Jones made no change in the lineup excepting Emil Jacques, substitute halfback last year, went in at fullback, replacing Rex Hutchinson, who was given a rest.

Princeton.

As the rain came down in torrents all day at Minnewaska John Rush was compelled to give his Princeton players a little repite. The rest was welcomed after the strenuous workouts.

The players were divided into three elevens yesterday morning and sent through the first signal drill of the season. Moore, Driggs and Brown were in the backfield of the first eleven, while Cyril Haas was at quarterback. Brown and Haas are both new men in their positions, but will probably be heard from again this season. Rahill and Wilson were the ends of this team, with Latrobe and Sinclair the tackles, Capt. Hogg and Charles the guards and Gennert the pivot man.

Cruikshank, who will handle the centres this fall, arrived at the camp Thursday evening and took charge of the centres in yesterday morning's practice. Dave Tibbott was also welcomed at Lake Minnewaska yesterday.

Army.

The squad is making fine headway and the culls have already been separated from the first class material. The first game will be played with Lebanon Valley on September 30.

JACK MARTIN'S CRACK CATCHER DRAFTED BY CUBS

The sixteen big league fishermen from the various National and American preserves did their fall casting at Cincinnati yesterday, and Connie Mack, Charley Comiskey and other nimrods made some big hauls in the minor league pond.

Of the seventy-four minor leaguers plucked by the big fellows forty-seven go to the Americain League and only twenty-seven to the National League. These figures do not necessarily mean that the Johnsonian fishermen were more fortunate that the Tener crowd. The American Leaguers went into the sticks furtner than the Nationals, and especially paid more attention to the smaller fry.

"Pickles" Dilhofer, who is Jack Martin's crack backstop, was drafted by the Chicago Nationals. "Pickles" is considered a most promising catcher.

CLIFF RANDOLPH WILL HURL FOR ABSTAINERS

Either Bradford or Murphy Will Be On Mound for Royals.

Pete Simmons will lead his husky braves to victory at the expense of the Tabs tomorrow. That's the way Peter feels about it. James Scott will be at the head of his outfit when victory is registered by the Abstainers tomorrow. That's the way James feels about it. The air is full of feelings and rumors.

When so many rumors are in circulation, it is difficult for one to ascertain the truth. But we do know that there is going to be some battle. The Royals will use at pitcher with a "reputation." He will be either Bradford or Murphy. Each of these fellows is a crack Philly Griant huhler and each has the habit of winning. Behind the bat the fans can expect to see Stewart or Waldorf. Stewart is the regular Philadelphia Colored Giant catcher.

Cliff Randolph will be on hand for the Tabs. That's not a rumor. Unless something unforeseen happens, Clifford will be there when the gong rings. However, it is expected that Mickey McFadden will start the game.

The lineups, just as they were given to us, follow:

TABS.		GIANTS.
Hannon	first base	Cooper
Mullin	second base	Hatchett
Coughlan	third base	Griffen
Rosenson	shortstop	Culver
Wall	left field	Borden
Brennan	right field	Fiall
Brown	centre field	Hall
Teeling	catcher	Fuller
McFadden	pitcher.	Bradford
Randolph		Murphy

BATTIN HIGH GAME MAY BE STOPPED

Epidemic of Paralysis May End Competition for Union County Title.

Because of the epidemic of infantile paralysis, Harold Switzgable, manager of the Battin High School football team, does not know whether or not his schedule, as prepared, will be carried out. However, he believes that his warriors will be able to attend to ten games, the start being made on September 30.

According to Elizabeth authorities, Battin High School is going to make a desperate attempt to annex the Union county title. Fortunately, Planfield High is going to do the same thing. But practice should begin. Both the Battin and Rahway teams have already been practicing daily and each squad is considered excellent. The Battin boys play Rahway on November 18.

PRIZE BOWLING AT TAB CLUBHOUSE

First Social of Season Featured by Athletic Feats.

The social season at the T. A. B. clubhouse was ushered in last evening, when a dance and general "good time" was enjoyed. A large crowd was in attendance, music for the occasion being furnished by Al Squires' orchestra.

Prize bowling occupied part of the evening's entertainment. Jack Force was the winner of first prize in one of the bowling contests, while "But" O'Keefe captured the award in the other event. For the women, Mary McDonnell was the winner.

Charley Schuck, with 70, and Patrick Melvin, with 104, were winners in the pool contest. The next social and dance will be held in Tab Hall on October 6.

WHILE DUNELLEN WEEPS.

"'Pat' Gilmartin's stop of Dixon's bid for a hit was a beaut.

"Marenghi took care of left field and made two fine running catches.

"Harry Martin's catch of Randolph's drive was loudly appluaded.

"Alex Hunt never caught a better game and Jimmy Archer had nothing on Alex in throwing 'em out at second.

"The Royal Rooters—'Bob' Jacobi and 'Judy' Worth while small in numbers, made up with noise for the deficiency.

"'Ken Davies took care of third in fine style.

"George Young, the manager, was all smiles. By the way he is anxious to book some more games.

MARTY M'DONOUGH ON JIM SCOTT'S TRAIL

But "Mac" is Having Hard Time Arranging a Battle.

Marty McDonough, the manager of the St. Joseph baseball team, is looking for Jim Scott, the leader of the Tab cohorts. In fact, "Mac" has been on Scott's trail for some time.

The object of the hunt is well-known to Plainfield fans. The North Plainfield manager believes that his team is perfectly capable of trimming the Tabs. In addition to that belief, McDonough is of the opinion that the trick can be done whenever and wherever Manager Jim Scott decrees. But, according to Marty, the Tab leader is making promises but that is about all. Action is desired by the St. Joseph official, who believes that his team is superior to the Abstainer outfit.

The Highlanders are also looking for games. The Highlanders care to meet all-comers. No team is barred. The Highlanders believe that they are the class of the East End and are willing to demonstrate. Managers get busy.

NEAF APGAR STILL WESTY HOGAN HEAD

Plainfielder Trapshooter Re-elected President at Atlantic City.

The East defeated the West in the international championship at the annual trap shooting tournament of the Westy Hogans, which closed at Atlantic City yesterday. The winning squad aggregated 2,419 breaks in three days' program of 2,500 clay birds, and the West collected 2,403. Members shot at 500 each. Scores:

Eastern Team—George N. Fish, 489; Aaron Heil, 486; Frank Wright, 484; Charles Newcomb, 481, and Ralph S. Potts, 479. Western Team—Fred Harlow, 491; C. D. Coburn, 481; Woolfolk Henderson, 478; R. H. Bruns, 478, and H. E. Smith, 473.

Neaf Apgar, a resident of this city and one of the greatest trap shots in the country, was re-elected president of the Westy Hogans. Mr. Apgar has the unique distinction of still being "the first and only president of the Westy Hogans."

WESTFIELD HIGH EAGER TO ANNEX COUNTY TITLE

The Westfield High School football team has already started practice. It must be remembered that Westfield is in Union county and that the Union title can be annexed by them.

Ted Davies is the captain and manager of the Westfield team. He will have Cooper, Clotworthy, Hefele, Duk and Welch of last year's team. In addition to these, Davies will tryout a squad of new players.

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

EXPERT REPAIRING.

By Peter P. Carney.

Although the Interstate Association for the Encouragement of Trapshooting does not award the Grand American Trapshooting tournament for 1917 until its meeting in December there are at this time no less than five cities in the field for the trapshooting classic.

These cities are: Toledo, O.; Milwaukee, Wis.; St. Josephs, Mo.; Chicago, Ill., and Indianapolis, Ind. At the recent Grand American tournament in St. Louis, Chicago trapshots talked it up for the "Queen City of the Lakes," and the St. Joe trapshooters buttonholed every trapshooter and pinned a button on him—or her—which declared in no uncertain language that St. Joe was the spot for the 1917 tournament.

The Chiago trapshots said they would pull off the tournament at Grand Park, with Lake Michigan as the background, with ten traps and would guarantee the greatest trapshooting event ever held in these glorious States. And Chicago looks pretty good to many of the shooters. Toledo, Indianapolis and Milwaukee were not very strong at the Grand American, but they will present their claims at the annual meeting of the Interstate Association.

Indianapolis has one of the finest trapshooting grounds in the country; Milwaukee has several available places, while Toledo has the grounds of the Power Bay Gun Club, 160 acres, room for any number of traps desired and with the waters of the bay for the background. And a clear background is going to help a whole lot in the selection of the place for the Grand American Handicap. The background at St. Louis didn't please all the shooters.

There are many trapshots of the opinion that a Grand American Handicap in the East would be a great thing for the sport. The entries at the present time are mainly from the Middle West. Eastern trapshots are inclined to the belief that if the tournament was held in one of the largest Eastern cities that there would be fully as many entries as in the tournaments in Dayton and St. Louis. If one of the larger clubs in one of the larger Eastern cities could stage the event it would be well worth a trial.

PROPOSALS FOR CULVERTS IN FANWOOD TOWNSHIP.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Committee on County Roads of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders at the Court House, Elizabeth, N. J., at 3:00 p. m., on Wednesday, Sept. 27, 1916, for the following described work.

Two new culverts crossing Cooper Street at intersection of Terrill Road in the Township of Fanwood, Union County, N. J.

Each bid on this work must be for both culverts together in lump sum and must be accompanied by a certified check for $50.00, as required by the specifications.

The Committee reserves the right to reject any or all bids as may be deemed best for the interests of the County of Union.

Plans and specifications for this work may be examined at the office of the County Engineer, 120 Broad Street, Elizabeth, N. J.

NEW PROGRAM OF WORK

Many on Sick List, But None in Serious Condition—May Put Moving Picture Show Near Y. M. C. A. Tent.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 14.—Rumors of an early home going were shot to the four winds here today when General T. F. Davis, commanding the Arizona Division of the National Guard, declared that the New Jersey troops would be kept here until October 1 at least, and probably longer. His decision bears more weight with the men than any that have been previously made and it is generally believed here today that Thanksgiving and Christmas will both find some of the Jerseymen in Douglas. The officers have begun a new program of work, the initial move being an eight day hike which will get under way tomorrow for the entire squadron of cavalry and later on all of the units will combine in a similar outing.

More men are on the sick list now than at any time since the units landed here, but a majority of the confinements are due to severe cases of homesickness. The officers now believe that they have the paratyphoid epidemic well in hand and that no other companies will become afflicted. The sick men are getting along nicely and no serious results are anticipated.

Officers in charge of the Army Y. M. C. A., which is located in the Plainfield building, are planning the erection of a motion picture booth and the installation of a modern machine. Among other numbers it is proposed to secure films taken of the Jersey guardsmen as they were leaving home for the border.

Benjamin E. Farrier, of Jersey City, will today begin the work of taking the camp vote, all of the outfits being notified of the election at retreat last night.

AUTOS COLLIDE AT CENTRAL AVENUE AND SEVENTH STREET

An automobile accident that was remarkable for not resulting seriously occurred at West Seventh street and and Central avenue last night shortly after eight o'clock, when a car driven by Frank Weeks, of 825 West Seventh street, and occupied by members of his family was run into by an automobile driven by Frank Martin, of 183 Somerset street. Martin was arraigned in city court this morning on a charge of reckless driving, the case being set over until tomorrow morning.

According to witnesses, Weeks was driving along Seventh street when Martin started to cross that thoroughfare on Central avenue and crashed into the side of Weeks' car. The occupants of the machine escaped with a severe shaking up, but both of the cars were badly damaged.

HORSE KILLED AS RESULT OF AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT

Driving his automobile north on Park avenue early last Saturday night, Charles Drake, the local contractor, collided with a horse and wagon, breaking the horse's leg. The animal was shot by Patrolman Kriney. Cooper was uninjured save for the shaking up, while the automobile was damaged around the front.

According to Mr. Drake, Cooper drove across Park avenue just as he approached the corner. He blew his horn several times, but he did not see the horse and wagon until too late to avoid striking them because there was no light. The matter was settled between the two men.

MRS. RANDOLPH IMPROVED.

Mrs. T. R. Randolph, of West Fourth street, who recently underwent an operation in Muhlenberg Hospital, has recovered sufficiently to be taken to the home of her parents Captain and Mrs. William C. Smith, of Grandview avenue, the borough.

BOARD OF HEALTH ORDER

Parents are hereby warned not to take sick children on the public street for any purpose whatever.

If a child is sick, call a physician. The Health Department has learned that a child from out of town was brought to Plainfield on the trolley car, the child at the time showing the beginning symptoms of Infantile Paralysis.

JUDGE WESCOTT TO DISCUSS THE ISSUES

Senatorial Candidate Will Appear at Columbus Auditorium Tonight.

Attorney-General Wescott, who seeks the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, in opposition to James E. Martine, will speak at Columbus Auditorium at 8:15 o'clock tonight. Prior to the meeting several friends will entertain Judge Wescott at dinner at the Queen City Hotel. David T. Kenney has consented to act as chairman of the meeting at Columbus Auditorium, and a number of local Democrats will sit on the platform as vice-presidents.

Judge Wescott will be the principal speaker of the evening and it is expected that he will discuss the issues of the campaign and tell his audience why they should vote for him in the primaries. He is being supported by President Wilson in his candidacy. Judge Wescott, it will be remembered, placed Wilson in nomination at the St. Louis convention.

MISS ELSA COOK BRIDE OF O. H. LOUNSBURY

Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong Officiates at Attractive Home Wedding.

An attractive home wedding took place Saturday night at the residence of Mrs. Charles Cook, of 1016 Putnam avenue, this city, when her daughter, Miss Elsa Mae Cook, became the bride of Orlando Hastings Lounsbury, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue. Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, officiating. About one hundred relatives and friends of the young couple witnessed the ceremony.

The wedding took place beneath a bower of ferns, palms and cut flowers, intermingled with hydrangeas, larkspur and asters. Following a contralto solo, "O Promise Me," sung by Mrs. Malcolm J. Wilson, of Binghamton, N. Y., the nuptial march was played bzy Miss Aimee Cook, a sister of the bride. The bridal party was preceeded by five ribbon girls, Miss Cornelia Lounsbury, sister of the groom; Miss Mabel Lounsbury, of this city; Miss Mildred Merrill, of Roselle; Miss Jessie Billings, of this city, and Miss Marion Todd, of of this city. Miss Louise Schmidt, of Millington, a cousin of the bride, was the maid of honor, and Harold Lounsbury, brother of the groom, was best man.

The bride wore a gown of white tulle and taffeta caught up with orange blossoms and carried a boquet of bride's roses, while the maid of honor wore a pale blue silk dress and carried a bunch of lavender asters.

Following the ceremony a reception followed, and later Mr. and Mrs. Lounsbury left on a several weeks' wedding tour. On their return they will reside on Helena avenue, this city. Both are graduates of the Plainfield High School in the class of 1908, and Mr. Lounsbury is engaged in business in New York.

SLOANE TRACTOR-BIPLANE COMPLETED FOR U. S. NAVY

The Sloane Manufacturing Company, builders of aeroplanes and hydroplanes, shipped a 125-horsepower tractor-biplane from the North avenue plant Saturday for Pensecola, Florida, as part of an order for two machines for the United States Navy. It can attain a speed of eighty miles an hour and is meant for a passenger and pilot.

The factory is now working at top speed to fill an order recently received from the Government for 18 machines for use in the army.

TO OBSERVE LORD'S SUPPER.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered Sunday, October 1, at the Trinity Reformed church. Those wishing to unite with the church may do so at that time. Those who intend to join by letter are urged to send for their letters at once, or are asked to notify the pastor, Rev. John Y. Broek, and he will send for them at once.

4,200 POST CARDS.

The Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church sends 4,200 post cards to the workers on the Home and Foreign fields every six months. Those that have been used are asked for, as the writing is covered with white paper. Any cards, whether anniversary or views are acceptable. Collections may be sent to Mrs. W. A. Woodruff as early as convenient.

SEWING MEETING.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society will hold a sewing meeting in the parlors of the Trinity Reformed church tomorrow afternoon at 2:45 o'clock. The meeting is called to prepare for the annual box and a full attendance is desired.

500 VOTERS AT "DRY'S" MEETING

Plainfield Theatre Crowd Hears Arguments for Candidates.

FEW BOYS ARE PRESENT

A. M. Harris, the Rev. B. S. Hudson and the Rev. W. S. Imes Argue for Prohibtion From Business and Moral Standpoints.

A crowd that comfortably filled the first floor of the Plainfield Theatre yesterday afternoon heard the appeals of the Rev. Birney S. Hudson, the Rev. W. S. Imes and A. M. Harris for a "dry" Plainfield. The audience was one of voters. There were no women, and few boys. From the applause that frequently greeted remarks of the speakers the 500 men present were enthusiastically in sympathy with the "dry" movement.

Joseph W. Gavett, president of the Interchurch Federation, presided. On the platform with him were seated E. C. Estes, secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; the Rev. Philip B. Strong, the Rev. J. J. Zelie, the Rev. B. S. Hudson, the Rev. C. M. Anderson, the Rev. W. S. Imes, the Rev. J. Y. Broek, the Rev. E. C. Conover, the Rev. D. B. F Randolph and Arthur M. Harris. Conspicuous among those in the audience were Mayor William L. Smalley, of the borough of North Plainfield; the Rev. Joseh McKelvey and Councilman Charles S. Sminck, of Plainfield.

Clifford Braider led the men in songs, and they used many of the hymns made familiar through the Biederwolf evangelistic camaign.

The campaign for the election of Councilmen on a "dry" latform is a common sense matter, said the Rev. W. S. Imes. It is being conducted in the name of the church and every churchman should be enlisted in the movement. He said that the law had been called ineffective in a campaign for righteousness and admitted that force could not be used to reform the inner men, but insisted that the morals of prohibition did not leave room for argument. The move that is planned is not a cure-all for the ills of Plainfield, he said, but is only a step in the right direction. Mr. Imes declared that it was the duty of churchmen to point the way for men of the world, and that if they failed in the present moral crisis they would not have the right to ask reformation of other citizens. Mr. Imes dismissed the argument that Plainfield needed the money of the saloons with the simple declaration that it was blood money and that Christian citizens did not want it. The sale of whiskey is responsible for an economic loss that cannot even be estimated, he said, and this loss is shown in the police records, the number of bad debts merchants must carry, and the many rent delinquents.

Mr. Imes called attention to the fact that whiskey brought the white and colored races to an equality here when all other interests had failed. He told of a local hotel that provided searate bars for its white and colored patrons, but later permitted them to drink as equals when its trade was falling off. The speaker made an appeal to colored voters to stand by their plain civic duty in the primary of this month.

If Plainfield is ever to be eminent for any thing, it will be as the City of Homes, said the Rev. Birney S. Hudson.

Plainfield can never compete with Detroit as an automobile city, he said, nor with Pittsburgh as a steel city, nor even with Maulwaukee, but it can be made the City of Homes, and every effort of its citizenship should be bent toward making a clean, pure town—free from evil influences so that the better element of commuters can be attracted from New York and Brooklyn. Dr. Hudson said that Milwaukee advertised everything but its breweries—Atlantic City everything but is saloons. A few years ago Atlantic City had 38,000 people and 300 saloons. Now it has 60,000 people and only 200 saloons. He told of the hard fight made to close the saloons on Sunday, which finally succeeded, although the business men fought it bitterly. Among those who were most active in this fight, he said, was Senator Edge, who is now a candidate for the Republicn nomination for Governor. Dr. Hudson compared the bank deposits for two years—one with the saloons closed on Sunday and the other with them running wide open. There was more than a million dollar increase after the regulation, he said.

"If I was mayor," said the ministed, "and anybody said that the law could not be enforced, I would take it as a personal insult to my dignity and character."

Plainfield is not facing a question of saloons or blind pigs, as the whiskey men declare, said the minister, but a question of saloons and blind pigs, or no saloons and a few blind pigs with the power to stamp out also.

Edgar Cole sang "Open my eyes

MARTINE CONFIDENT OF PRIMARY RESULT

Senator Not Least Bit Worried Because of Opposition to His Candidacy.

United States Senator James E. Martine dropped in his home town Saturday afternoon prior to going to Union Hill, where yesterday he made an address at a civic-religious gathering. While here the Senator took occasion to express his great surprise that what he termed as a number of so-called Democrats should arrange a Democratic meeting, invite Judge Wescott, his opponent for the nomination, and not give him an equal opportunity to be heard by his townsmen.

However, the Senator let is be known that he intended to speak in this city before the primaries, and that he would have something to say that would be pertinent and full of interest to every voter. The tentative date for his appearance is Friday night, September 22. Senator Martine feels sure of his return to Washington and is apparently not the least bit worried over the opposition to his candidacy.

ARGUMENTS AGAINST THE LICENSED SALOON

Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring Makes Interesting Address at 1st Baptist Church.

Arguments against the continuation of the saloon were presented to a good sized company of women at the First Baptist church yesterday afternoon by Rev. Dr. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, the service being arranged by the Church Co-Operative League in connection with the campaign against liquor licenses in this city. Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, county president of the W. C. T. U., presided at the meeting and introduced the speaker. Rev. C. S. Gillespie, of Grace M. E. church, took part in the service and Mrs. T. C. Bodine offered prayer.

Dr. Herring said in part:

"The arguments to me against the continuation of the saloon are these:

"First, that even drinking in moderation strikes at the mental efficiency of men. 'Ty' Cobb, the ball player, said he never drank because it dimmed his batting eye.

"There is nothing on this earth that will so stimulate a young woman to wrong impulses and so powerfully paralyze good moral instincts as alcohol. Ninety per cent. of the girls who go wrong will tell you they felt before the 'teasing effects of drink,' and there is danger in the smallest amounts of drink. The moderate drinker puts himself in a position where moral relations are not clearly seen. Dr. William Lee Howard is the authority for this statement.

"The Pennsylvania Railroad Company employs no drinking men. The American Car and Foundry Company will not employ a man who signs a liquor dealer's license. Thirty-eight daily newspapers in Pennsylvania bar all liquor advertisements.

"Russia at the beginning of the present war discovered that to fight the greatest fighting army of the world, her men must abandon 'vodkha.' It meant the loss of a half a billion dollars, but her money loss has been her moral gain. Taxpayers of Plainfield will find suggestion in what Russia did for the moral and physical welfare of her people."

HARTRIDGE SCHOOL OPENING DEFERRED UNTIL OCT. 16

As Miss Hartridge thinks from last week reports that the epidemic will not be over as soon as she had hoped, she has decided to wait until October 16 before opening school and reassembling the pupils. In this way she hopes to avoid any risk that might result from bringing children who might have been exposed on trains or in some other came in contact with the others. At the present rate of decrease the date chosen should give a margin of safety and save parents from anxiety.

The time lost from the school term will be made up by the omission of the holidays falling on February 12, February 22 and May 30; by the shortening o the longer vacations, and by the lengthening of the second year.

ABUSED HIS FATHER.

Edward Kline, of Manning avenue, was arraigned in the borough court this morning on a charge of disorderly conduct preferred by his father. It is said that the younger Kline came home in an intoxicated condition and became abusive to his father. After giving the man a severe reprimand, Recorder Fred Hand suspended a ninety-day sentence over his head. A repetition of Kline's offense means a trip to the Somerset county jail.

CHIMNEY FIRE.

The fire department was called out early last night to extinguish a chimney fire at the home of Randolph Chandler, at 942 Park avenue. Chemicals put the blaze out with no damage.

BORO TEACHERS HOLD CONFERENCE

'GETTING ACQUAINTED'

Principal Aungst Gives Instructors Practical Suggestions Regarding Class-room Work—Schools Open October 2.

A meeting of the North Plainfield teachers is being held in the auditorium of the North Plainfield High School this afternoon. The forty-one women who will teach in the borough schools this year are getting acquainted with each other and with their duties. Although school does not open until October 2 the teachers were requested to report before that date in order that preliminary matters might be attended to.

The teachers of the North Plainfield High School will hold a separate meeting in the near future. This meeting will be under the supervision of Supervisor D. Fred Aungst. The members of the North Plainfield High School teaching staff for this year are: Albert Early, principal; Irene M. Duchesne, teacher of English; Miss Gertrude F. Curtis, modern languages; Mildred Hodges, Latin-French; Elsie Campbell, history; Roxana Love, English and biology; Dora Loetzer, commercial; Mertie Montague, commercial; Jennie Mohring, science, and Ruth Safford, mathematics and English.

In his address to the teachers this afternoon, Supervisor D. Fred Aungst emphasized the need of the proper arrangement of books and material. He said that the training of the child's mind along these lines is essential and that it is certain to produce lasting results. Strict compliance with the regulations was advocated by Mr. Aungst. In addition to advocating the proper arrangement of the material to be used by the student, Mr. Aungst stated that each child should have a hook upon which to hang his hat and coat and that each pupil should be taught to respect the place assigned to his neighbor.

The question of talking in line of march as well as the manner of marching were subjects given considerable attention. Mr. Aungst expressed the opinion that he did not believe in enforcing a strict "no talking" rule, although instructions were given to the teachers to the effect that "talking in line was not necessary." That inspections, both of the methods employed by students and teachers, would be held at various times was stated by the supervisor. According to Mr. Aungst's plan the rules and regulations to be followed by the teachers would be posted in conspicuous places. Spelling matches will be held in the borough schools from time to time.

Mr. Aungst said that he was exceedingly surprised at one time last year when, upon questioning, he learned that one of the high school boys could not either pronounce or spell a certain teacher's name, although that name had been carefully pronounced in chapel on several occasions. On the borough school teachers' list there are several names that are difficult to pronounce. Mr. Aungts said that the pupil should be taught to correctly pronounce and spell all these names. The names, "Montague, Earley, Loetzer, Duchesne and Huggen," he said were of unsual pronunciation, but he believed a mastery of them could be easily obtained after practice. That Americans are neglectful of pronunciation and that we often "jingle" words was the opinion expressed by the borough supervisor. Co-operation on the part of the teachers was asked by Mr. Aungst.

Meetings of the teaching staffs of each of the borough schools will be held at various intervals during the next few days. This plan has the approval of Supervisor D. Fred Aungst, who believes that much can be accomplished by these gatherings.

MAYOR SMALLEY SPEAKS FROM A BAPTIST PULPIT

Strong arguments for the election of the four "dry" candidates for the Common Council in Plainfield were made at last night's service at the Park Avenue Baptist church. The Rev. Birney S. Hudson, pastor, shared his pulpit with Mayor W. L. Smalley, of North Plainfield. Mayor Smalley told of the co-operation that might be expected from the borough if Plainfield went dry. He assured his audience that the borough would follow when the city refused to grant licenses to open saloons.

ENDEAVOR SOCIAL.

The Christian Endeavor Society of the Trinity Reformed church will hold a lecture in the lecture room Thursday night. The committee in charge have prepared some interesting surprises. The thirty-first anniversary of the Christian Endeavor Society will be held on October 2 and the occasion will be celebrated with a program.

POSTPONE MEETING.

The Westminster Guild of teh First Presbyterian church has postponed its meeting scheduled for today until Monday, October 2.

EFFIE BEEKMAN AND JAMES M'NABB WEDDED

Rev. Benjamin Warren Performs Ceremony in New York Saturday Evening.

Miss Effie Alice Beekman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Beekman, of East Front street, became the bride of James Leland McNabb, son of Mr. and Mrs. John McNabb, of Bound Brook, in New York Saturday night, when the Rev. Benjamin Warren, pastor of the Eighteenth Avenue Methodist church, that city, performed the ceremony in the presence of the immediate families of the young couple.

Both Mr. and Mrs. McNabb are graduates of the Plainfield High School in the class of 1912 and are well known in this city. They will reside in New York, where Mr. McNabb is engaged in business.

OBSERVE THEIR 25TH WEDDING ANNIVERSARY

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. LaBoyteaux, of North Plainfield, Celebrate Event.

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony C. LaBoyteaux, of Fairview avenue, the borough, quietly observed the twenty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, yesterday. Because of the recent death of Mrs. LaBoyteaux's mother, Mrs. J. S. Powlison, there was no celebration of the event.

Mr. and Mrs. LaBoyteaux were married on September 17, 1891, in the Congregational church by the pastor, Rev. Charles L. Goodrich. After their marriage they resided for a time on East Sixth street, but in a few years Mr. LaBoyteaux built the home on Fairview avenue, where they still live. Both and Mrs. LaBoyteaux are members of the Congregational church and the latter is a charter member. Mr. LaBoyteaux has been a deacon several times; teacher of the Men's Bible class for several years and is now on the official board. He is associted with the banking firm of Winslow Lanier & Company, of New York, with whom he has been for the past forty-nine years. Mrs. LaBoyteaux has two brothers, John A. Powlison, of this city, and Mrs. Charles F. Powlison, of New York.

RECEPTION FOR NEW PASTOR OF SOUTH PLAINFIELD CHURCH

The South Plainfield Baptist church congregation will tender a reception to the Rev. William Porter, the new pastor, and his family, on Wednesday evening, September 20. In connection with the reception, the $1,200 campaign committee will render a report of their work and the notes representing the floating indebtedness will be burned. Members of the congregation are requested to be present.

During the evening Assemblyman William N. Runyon and Alfred C. Estes, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., will make short addresses and in conclusion a social hour with refreshments will be enjoyed.

MISSIONARY MEETING.

The Woman's Missionary Circle of the First Baptist church will hold its first fall meeting tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock. An address will be given by Mrs. Willard H. Smith, State Director of the New Jersey W. A. M. S. During the meeting here Mrs. G. H. Robins will have charge of the devotional service and Mrs. S. Whitney Brown will narrate the current events.

EMERGENCY!

By order of the Board of Health, which will be effective until further notice, all hotel keepers, landlords, tenants and householders generally, are hereby requested to report daily to the Board of Health, between the hours of 8 a. m. and 5 p. m., the arrival of all persons from out of town, INCLUDING PLAINFIELD PEOPLE WHO HAVE BEEN ABSENT FROM THE CITY (DAILY COMMUTERS EXCEPTED). Such report should state the name and residence of the person making the report; and also the names and ages of the parties from out of town and the locality from which they came. The report may be made personally at the Board of Health office (No. 104 East Front street), or by telephone (No. 646). The purpose is to place full information at the command of the Board of Health for such inquiry and investigation as it may deem necessary.

FALL OF PERONNE IS NEAR AT HAND

Berlin Admits That the Allied Offensive Endangers This Fort.

FIERCE FIGHTING AHEAD

London Not Blind to Sacrifices That Must Be Made Before Combles is Taken—Serbs Still Go Forward—Turks Are Defeated.

London, Sept. 18.—British troops on the Somme front have made some additional gains during the last twenty-four hours, but the general situation is unchanged. The British line has been advanced further east of Courcelette, while south of Thiepval additional German trenches have been captured.

Seemingly untired by their unparalleled advances of the past week, French and British troops continued today with terrific infantry smashes against the fortified field works of the Germans along the Somme, apparently with the intention of giving the Teutonic defenders no rest until Combles and Peronne, their important bases, have been taken.

A continuation of the British offensive until Bapaume, one of the most important links in the entire German line in Picardy, and now less than four miles from the British advanced posts, has succumbed, is not unlikely. The winning of Bapaume military men assert, would compel the long forecast shortening of the German lines in France and Belgium, for which Berlin is already preparing its peole by carefully worded admissions of defeat.

Not even the most optimistic will assert the Germans have been crushed. Severe fighting may be expected before Crown Prince Ruprecht of Bavaria gives up his hold on Comoles and Peronne, but those two bases, already almost encircled by the allies and under terrific gun fire, must give up. Even the censor in Berline yesterday permitted correspondents to wire to neutral nations that their fall was imminent.

Turks Meet With Defeat.

London, Set. 18.—Turkish troops were defeated by a British flying squadron east of the Suez Canal on Sunday, the War Office announced today. The attack came as a surprise to the Turks, who were led by German officers, and they suffered heavy losses.

Raid German Aerodome.

London, Sept. 18.—British naval aeroplanes raided German aerodomes at St. Denis and Vestrehem on Sunday, according to a statement given out today by the War Office. A large number of bombs were dropped with successful results. One of the machines, however, made a forced landing in Holland. The pilot has been interned.

Serbs Make More Gains.

Saloniki, Sept. 8.—Serbian troops have smashed the second Bulgarian line of defence in Western Macedonia, it was announced. The Bulgar positions aren ow firmly in the hands of the Serbians.

Paris Reports French Gains.

Paris, Sept. 8.—French troops have enlarge their gains south of the Somme and southwest of Peronne, the War Office announced today, by advancing east of Bernq, Deniecourt has been surrounded. German counter attacks at Clery, Berny and Deniecourt have been repulsed, and the French have taken twelve hundred prisoners. A trench near Clery has also been captured by the French.

Roumanians Lose Heavily.

Sofia, Set 18.—Advance of Bulgarian troops and their allies into the Dobrudja province of Roumania continues, the War Office announced today. There has been fighting at several points, the enemy suffering enormous losses.

THE FORUM

Edward Bauer, of Elizabeth, one of the candidates for county clerk on the Republican ticket, requests the publication of the following letter which was written by David Armstrong, of the firm of Hyer & Armstrong, Rahway, to George Johnston, of Scotch Plains:

Sept. 14, 1916.

George H. Johnston,
Fanwood, N. J.

Dear Mr. Johnston:—I have been asked several times to state my reasons for supporting Edward Bauer as a candidate for the Republication nomination for county clerk and I am glad to take this opportunity of stating to one of Mr. Bauer's strongest supporters the reason for my position in the three-cornered contest for this nomination.

My work as a lawyer for the last seven or eight years has kept me in close and constant touch with the work of Mr. Bauer as deputy register of Union county. Without any fear of contradiction I can state it to be the unanimous opinion of both lawyers and layment who have had any business with the office of the register of Union county, that they have always met with unfailing courtesy and real help with their work in that office. In a large measure this is due to Mr. Bauer whose duties keep him in constant touch with the people using the register's office.

The duties of a county clerk are those of a court clerk and a recording officer and this fact, in my mind, would render the candidacy of Mr. Bauer a particularly appropriate one. He has already served as clerk of the Elizabeth District Court and the experience gained there added to his experience as a recording officer in the Register's office, makes him in my opinion the ideal candidate for the office of county clerk.

From my knowledge of the man, I know he would give to the duties of his new office the same painstaking care and attention that he has always given to any duty imposed upon him. In these days when the prevalence of the idea of reward for merit in public service has gained wide recognition, it would seem to me that an excellent opportunity is offered to Republicans to show that the party favors emphatically the civil service reform by making Mr. Bauer its candidate for county clerk.

DAVID ARMSTRONG.

LUCKY GREENSTONE.

It is Found Only In a Wonderful Mine In South Africa.

Situated in the beautiful Knap valley, in the Jamestown district of Barberton, Transvaal, there is a mine known by the name of Verdite. The name was given to it on account of the peculiar green stone found in the mine, which is unknown in any other part of the globe. Articles of jewelry and ornaments are made of verdite, and it has been called the lucky greenstone of South Africa.

The greenstone is a silicate of magnesia, or talc, colored green by nature in the course of its formation. Other silicates of magnesia may be mentioned here, peridot, serpentine, meerschaum and steatite. The mine, or rather hill, consists of three varieties of talc—green, white and black.

But a peculiar fact is that in the black talc there is present pure gold. Some of the finest specimens of gold bearing rock have been found at this mine. Every one knows that gold is found in quartz, pyrites, or even sea water, but scarcely ever has it been mentioned in books that gold exists in talc.

When the verdite rock has gone through the ordinary process of crushing and the gold has been extracted the waste (or what is called the slimes of a gold mine) is used in the manufacture of soap, grease, paint, paper, toilet powders, gas jets, electric insulators, crayons and many other articles of everyday use.

Surprising the Bullock.

In times of crisis and worry a kind word has been known to have surprisingly good results. The unexpectedness of such a word is perhaps the secret of its force. A book, "On the Wool Track," backs the moral with an anecdote.

A team was working on the Broken Hill road, and a bullock—the Beelzebub of the team—had gone obstinate, and the coach was passing. The whip was swinging, and some apt remarks were just forming on the back of the teamster's tongue when he caught sight of a clerical hat on the front seat and just in time thought better of it. He coughed politely.

"Ahem—Strawberry," he said, "proceed!"

To his obvious astonishment Strawberry proceeded.

POLICEMEN'S WIDOWS MAY GET PENSIONS

Chief Kiely Trying to Help Families of Vanderweg and Sweeney.

If plans which Police Chief Kiely is now working on materialize Plainfield will probably be the first city in the State to give widows of deceased patrolmen the benefit of an act passed at the last session of the Legislature, which provides for the payment of pensions to those whose husbands have helped support the Policemen's Pension Fund for nine years previous to their death. Chief Kiely was one of those instrumental in having the law passed and is now working to have Mrs. Frank Sweeney and Mrs. Martin Vanderweg receive the pension they deserve under the new act.

The matter has first to be brought to the attention of the Police Pension Board which, after passing upon it, will ask the corporation counsel for an opinion. The police committee of the Common Council will then be asked to appropriate sufficient funds to pay the pensions.

Both Sweeney and Vanderweg died within the past year and besides their wives leave several children. Sweeney was on the force nine years, being forced to leave to enter a hospital for treatment of heart disease. Vanderweg was on the force for twenty-three years and was one of the most efficient officers.

The proposed action is favored by various police officials, members of the force and city officials and will very likely be passed.

GET LIST OF THOSE WHOSE ARE RUNNING IN BORO

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Pirtleville, Ariz., Sept. 14.—Borough Clerk Frederick Martin, of North Plainfield, has furnished the Daily Press representative here with a list of condidates who have filed petitions this year for borough, county and State offices. These have been posted on the troop bulletin board and those guardsmen living in North Plainfield are acquainting themselves with the names on the list.

This is the first opportunity many of the men have had to get a line on just who is in the field for the various offices and Clerk Martin's thoughtfulness is greatly appreciated. The posting of the names has already started a round of political discussion, this being about the first that has been noted among the Plainfielders. Those who will cast ballots for Plainfield candidates haven't any information to guide them as yet, but they are spending their time discussing the merits and faults of the North Plainfield possibilities.

THE FORUM

Editor, Plainfield Daily Press:

In point of numbers the meeting against against saloon licenses in the Plainfield Theatre yesterday was a success for which I was glad. As to the speeches they were good, but somehow or other there was so much of the freezing element in them that when I went to bed last night I had to use an extra quantity of covering to get rid of that cold sensation which came over me. If we anti-saloon people are to win in a good cause we must put more warmth, or ginger, into our speeches and get up enthusiasm enough to convince the voters that we mean to carry our cause to a success.

J. W. HARRISON.

PERSONAL.

Frank I. Bound and Russell Woodfield, of Farmingdale, visited friends in the borough yesterday. The young men made the trip by automobile. Before coming to Plainfield they made a stop at Glen Gardner.

C. F. Nelson and family, of this city, have returned to Warrenville to live.

Mrs. D. R. Conover and daughter, Gertrude, of Jackson avenue, the borough, have returned from their summer home at Avon-by-the-Sea.

Miss A. Margaret Speidel, of Rome, N. Y., has returned to the borough to resume her teaching at the High School.

Mrs. A. B. Darby, of Grove street, has returned from Dansville, N. Y.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Geary and J. V. Geary, of Woodland avenue, and the Misses Kathryn and Anna Geary, of West Fourth street, spent Sunday with friends at Nyack, N. Y.

NEW Y. M. C. A. BOYS' DIRECTOR IS AT WORK

H. J. Center, Boys' Work Director of the Plainfield Y. M. C. A., assumed his new duties this morning. He succeeds Fred S. Lynn in the local work. Mr. Center comes to Plainfield with a record of many years as a successful director of boys' work.

The Young People's Association of the Park Avenue Baptist church will hold an important meeting tonight in the school rooms. The session will be called to order at 8 o'clock.

It Used to Be an Important Function For the Newly Wedded.

Were you ever invited to an infare dinner? You are familiar with the term, of course. It is as likely to be a plain dinner as any other meal, and if you are a business man you cannot have escaped the demand for a formal reply when some new firm has established in your particular line of trade or profession.

But the chances are that if you know anything definite about an infare dinner you are either too old to care about discussing it or you are of Scotch or North of England origin, unless, of course, you happen to have spent most of your life in Indiana. In the latter event you learned all about a charming custom from your mother or grandmother.

In rural Indiana the old ceremonial has even yet not gone the way of most of the ceremonial practices of our ancestors, for it is still observed in a modified form. However, there is no sinister meaning attached to its omission, as was the case two generations ago.

In the days of our grandparents if the groom's mother failed to invite the bride to the infare dinner the day following the wedding it meant one thing and one thing only—that she was not to be regarded as a member of her husband's family. The dinner was usually a more elaborate affair than the wedding supper at the bride's father's house the previous evening. It was served at high noon and included the entire bridal party, although in Scotland the bride was supposed to leave all her own kindred behind when she went to eat the dinner cooked by her mother-in-law.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

JAPAN'S WOLFISH DOGS.

Famed For Their Savage Ferocity and Tenacity of Grip.

Most of the dogs in Japan are of native breed and are quite different from the dogs in western countries. Like the Japanese horses, they are smaller. As the Japanese have ever been an agricultural people, hunting dogs were not known, nor did they have any use for watch dogs, as they kept neither flocks nor herds. The Japanese dog, therefore, is a domestic animal, to the breeding of which no particular attention was given, thus producing a mongrel type.

A great many years ago one of the shoguns became interested in the breeding of dogs, so more care was given to developing a good type. Many of the daimyos, thinking that they would stand in better favor with the shogun, presented him with presents of anywhere from ten to twenty dogs. At one time the emperor had over 5,000 at Kamakura.

The average native dog of Japan has a savage, wolfish aspect, with flat head, pointed muzzle and short, erect ears, with bushy, foxlike tail. They are bold and obstinate in disposition and never know when they are beaten. A Japanese once gave a live dog to his pet tiger as a treat. But the animal, realizing the situation before the tiger did, seized the tiger by the throat and choked it to death before it could defend itself, though the dog also died from its wounds. The Japanese dog is thus far famed for its unexampled ferocity and tenacity of grip, something like the western bulldog.—Japan Magazine.

Byron In an Ugly Mood.

I have not yet read Byron's "Conversations," but there was an anecdote in one of the extracts which confirms what I heard long since, but which I could not depend on before. He had an aversion to see women eat. Colonel —— was at Byron's house in Piccadilly. Lady Byron in the room, and luncheon was brought in—veal cutlets, etc. She began eating. Byron turned around in disgust and said, "Gormandizing beast!" and, taking up the tray, threw the whole luncheon into the hall. Lady Byron cried and left the room.—Told by Haydon, the Painter.

He Saved Time.

An English weaver who had spent two or three years in America was paying a visit to the old mill to see some of his former workmates.

One of them said to him: "I hear it's all hustle and bustle in America. In fact, you 'aven't time to eat."

"Hustle and bustle," said the visitor. "Why, when I left here I spelt my name 'Mirrill,' but now I spell it 'Merrell!'"

"How's that?" asked his friend.

"Because," replied the Americanized one, "I haven't time to dot the 'i's!'"—Exchange.

Curious Old Clock.

In the tower of the town house of Heidelberg was an old clock so constructed that when the hours struck the figure of an old man pulled off his hat, a cock crowed and clapped its wings and soldiers fought with one another. But this curious piece of workmanship, with the castle and town, was burned by the French in 1693.

It Won't Harm the Pigs.

T. A. B. S. PLAN AN EXTENSIVE CAMPAIGN

Local Catholic Society Will Endeavor to Increase Membership.

Preliminary plans for an extensive campaign for new members were formulated at a meeting of the membership committee of the Total Abstinence Benevolent Society yesterday. James Scott is chairman of the committee and has for his resistants John Willis, Charles Schuck, Daniel Guinee, John Powelson, Chrales Schuck, Rufus Larew and Joseph Gallagher.

It is proposed to have a contest in which the person securing the largest number of new members will receive a suitable award. The campaign will be conducted from the present time until the forty-fifth anniversary of the establishment of the organization, in May, 1917. Posters, advocating temperance and telling of the benefits derived from such an organization as the Tabs, will be placed in conspicuous spots about the city. It is expected that the present membership of the societl will be divided into seven units, each unit to be under the leadership of a member of the committee.

The "try-outs" for the second annual minstrel show of the T. A. B. S. will be held in the hall on West Fourth street this evening. As this show will be a "mixed" affair, it is expected that a large number of young women as well as men will be on hand for the first rehearsal. Charles Barrett, of North Plainfield, who so successfully coached the show last year will again have charge of the affair. Mr. Barrett has already outlined his plans to the executive committee of the T. A. B. organization and his methods have met with their hearty approval. A large chorus of both male and female voices is desired by Mr. Barrett and he anticiates seeing these at the rehearsal this evening.

The Social Club, and auxiliary of the Total Abstinence Benevolent Society, will hold a birthday social tomorrow evening. A "Solomon Grundy" party will compose the evening's entertainment. Ordinarily a bowling tourney would take place but inasmuch as the alleys are being repaired, it is impossible to hold the usual event.

Those who will have charge of the affair tomorrow evening are the Misses Mary MacDonnell, chairman; Mary Murray, Teresa Mahoney, May McAfee, Nora Regan and Julia Regan.

TAIL LIGHT MISSING.

Emil Gerero, driver of a jitney bus that runs between Dunellen and Plainfield, was fined $5 when in the city court this morning charged with driving his car on West Front street Saturday night without a license.

SCOTS AS FIGHTERS.

They Won Fame In Former Days Under Many Different Flags.

It would be difficult to find an army in Europe which did not contain descendants of the Scottish soldier of fortune. In Sweden Gustavus Adolphus had four lieutenant generals, twenty-two colonels and many other inferior officers, all Scotsmen, in his service. He owned that his conquests in Germany were due to the valor of these gallant soldiers.

In Muscovy the Bruces, the Gordons and the Douglases were famous.

Even in Germany the ubiquitous Scot was to be found, and a General Ogilvy, whose grandfather was a Scotsman, was at one time field marshal of the empire.

It was in France, however, that the Scot was rated most highly, and the old saying ran, "Fidele comme un Escossais." Louis had such a respect for these soldiers that he ordained that his body should be guarded night and day by twenty-four Scotsmen. This Scots bodyguard was continued under the reign of nine kings without intermission for 150 years.

King Charles VII. raised another company of Scots, called "Gens d'Arms d'Escosse," consisting of 100 horses and 200 archers. This force had precedence of all the French troops.—London Chronicle.

HEADS OF ODD SHAPE.

The Kilon, Lafton and Maqbon as Described In the Talmud.

It is a matter familiar to every student of the Bible that the Hebrew priests were required to be physically as well as morally perfect—without a bodily defect or blemish—in order to be eligible to service in the temple. The Talmud, in the tractate Bechoroth, says a writer in the Medical Record, enumerates several defects which disqualify a priest from ministering in his holy office. Among these are the kilon, the lafton and the maqbon.

The condition of kilon is ascribed as a person having a peculiarly shaped head, which is pointed at the top and broad at the bottom. The lafton was a man with a head shaped exactly the opposite of the preceding. To use the expression of the Talmud, he had a head very broad at the top and narrow at the bottom, like a lefes—i. e., a pumpkin.

The expression maqbon, derived from the word hammer, refers to a hammer shaped head or, as the Talmud describes it, one with a prominent and projecting forehead and occiput.

The terse descriptions of the kilon head and lafton head given by the Talmud could not be improved on by any modern textbook in medicine.

J. S. AMERMAN WILL SPEAK IN THE BORO TONIGHT

John S. Amerman, of Neshanic, one of the two aspirants for the Assembly nomination on the Republican ticket in Somerset county, will be in North Plainfield this afternoon and tonight he will address a public meeting at Debele's Hall on Chatham street, the borough. Friends of Mr. Amerman are predicting a successful campaign for him, believing that he will not only be nominated but elected to the Assembly in opposition to Assemblyman Ogden Hammond.

Mr. Amerman is an advocate of Local Option and is being supported by the Home Rule League of Somerset county. He says that if elected he will vote for the Gaunt Local Option or home rule bill ,believing that it would give the people just what they want. Mr. Amerman, with the exception of two years, has been a life-l— Republican, serving on the Somerset county committee. During 1912-13 he was a Progressive, subsequently returning to the Republican party.

that I may see."

Mr. Harris spoke as a business man and he discussed the question from a business standpoint, showing by statistics that a community was commercially better and stronger when the saloons were gotten rid of. He said he would feel that the movement to make Plainfield "dry" were a hopeless task if it were not for the high type of citizenship here, and the high type of officials in the local government.

This is the day of efficiency, said Mr. Harris, who is a member of the firm of Harris, Forbes & Company, bankers, of New York city, and his business everywhere is fighting the saloon. Mr. Harris read from official publications of the brewers, distillers and retail liquor dealers to show that each class would not trust the other. The retail dealers said the brewers were a menace to society, the wholesale liquor dealers said the retailers were bums and beggars and not fit to associate with yellow dogs. He also read an extract from an address made at an Ohio dealers' convention when the speaker urged liquor men to create an appetite among boys as the only hope for their business of the near future. He told of the finding of twenty kindergarten saloons in Chicago where tiny tots were fed sweetened wine to create an appetite for whiskey.

There is no such things as a "respectable saloon," declared Mr. Harris. "You might as well talk of an honest thief or a virtuous prostitute as a respectable saloon." Whiskey causes insanity, poverty and crime, he said, and the sober citibens must be taxed today for this. He quoted Connie Mack, Ban Johnson, Samuel Gompers and many other leaders in all walks of life as saying that the saloon is the greatest menace to the prosperity and happiness of the average citizen.

There is no such thing as personal liberty, said Mr. Harris. The individual must always consider society, and he can never be given rights that interfere with the rights of others.

Mr. Harris said that New Jersey was known as the "wettest" State in the Union, and yet it has more unlicensed places than Maine and Kansas combined, thus answering forever the contention that prohibition breds "speakeasies.'

NOT THE "LATE A. W. RAND."

In an obituary recently published in the Plainfield Daily Press the death of R. C. Rand a former resident of Plainfield mention was made at the time that he was the son of the "late A. W. Rand." The notice was erronious in that A. W. Rand is at present living and residing in New York city.

"MAEBY BAUERS WENT TO GERMANY," SAYS SHIPKINS

The Queen City Market was opened again this morning by Samuel Shipkin, the owner of the place, for the first time since John Bauers, who had been conducting the business, disappeared from town last Tuesday. When seen this morning Mr. Shipkins said that he had nothing to do with the claims filed in the District Court, they being against Bauers, and as the latter broke the lease in going away he had a right to step in and take over his property again.

When asked if he had any idea where Bauers had gone to, Shipkins said: "Maybe he went to Germany. They need good men there." Bauers has no relatives in this city and nothing has been learned so far as to his whereabouts.

BEER AT SEWER LABORERS' CAMP CAUSES TROUBLE

John Potts, colored, and two colored women were up in the city court this morning, charged with being drunk and disorderly at the camp on DeKalk avenue, where the laborers at work on the sewer live. The men at the camp obtain beer from the commissiary department on an order, and several fines have resulted following quarrels at the camp.

The case was laid over by Judge DeMeza until Wednesday morning, when several other people will be in court.

LIKED BLACK VILLAINS.

Audiences In Shakespeare's Time Wanted No Neutral Knaves.

There has been a dreadful amount of lese majesty talked about "Richard III." recently. "It is to be feared" says the London Times, "that 'Richard III.' has seen his best days," and the Manchester Guardian says boldly that the play, with all its paraphernalia of villains and victims and ghosts and weeping queens, "is perhaps best enjoyed nowadays with laughter."

Not so did playgoers think in Shakespeare's time or for centuries later. For at least fifty years after it was written "Richard III." was probably the most popular of the Shakespearean plays. It was printed ten times in thirty-seven years—oftener than any other of the plays during a similar period of the early century.

Critics have wrangled long and loud over the problem, but there seems no getting away from the conclusion that the audience of King James' time preferred its villains black and thoroughly bad and entirely free from those ambiguous and neutral tints which are so perplexing in, say, "Macbeth."—London Observer.

URGES EVERYONE TO QUICKLY GET ON WATER WAGON

To see the tinge of healthy bloom in your face, to see your skin get clearer and clearer, to wake up without a headache, backache, coated tongue or a nasty breath, in fact to feel your best, day in and day out, just try inside-bathing every morning for one week. Before breakfast each day, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it as a harmless means of washing from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast.

A quarter pound limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to demonstrate that just as soap and hot water cleanses, sweetens and freshens the skin, so hot water and limestone phosphate act on the blood and internal organs. Those who are subject to constipation, bilious attacks, acid stomach, rheumatic twinges, also those whose skin is sallow and complexion pallid, are assured that one week of inside bathing will have them both looking and feeling better in every way.—Adv.

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

SURVEYS FARM DEVELOPMENT

Present Educational Movement Never Equaled, Says Ex-Secretary Wilson.

James Wilson, secretary of agriculture in the cabinets of Presidents McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft, has just completed for the National Agricultural society, of which he is president, a survey of the most important development in American farming at the present time.

This is the agricultural extension work now being carried on by the agricultural colleges of the country, the department of agriculture at Washington and other allied agencies to reach the farmers directly.

The National Agricultural society sent Mr. Wilson through the country to carry out its objects of mobilizing American agriculture and establishing a unity of purpose among farmers. Subscribing to this as organizers of the society are some of the best known men in the country, among whom are Theodore N. Vail, John A. Spoor, Governor Henry C. Stuart, Senator James W. Wadsworth, Robert A. Fairbairn, Fairfax Harrison, Charles A. Otis and G. Howard Davison.

Former Secretary Wilson, in reporting the result of his investigation in the current issue of the Agricultural Digest under the title of "The College Goes to the Farmer," says:

"The world has never seen the like of this present educational movement. Every properly equipped educational agency in the country has been set in motion at actual first hand work among the farmers. In every one of the forty-eight states the campaign is being pushed vigorously, and I believe that at the present time at least half of the active farming element of the country is either in direct or indirect contact with the movement.

"This year there was spent in farm demonstration alone approximately $5,000,000, and every one of the states shared in its benefits. In Texas, for instance, the expenditures in this work for the present fiscal year will come to a quarter of a million dollars, in New York state to $220,000 and in Iowa to approximately the same amount. In each of some nine or ten other states the expenditure will average not less than $150,000.

"Much of this money was made available through the operations of the Smith-Lever agricultural extension act, and the department of agriculture at Washington appropriated from its own funds almost a million dollars. The remainder of the money came from the states themselves.

"This fund of $5,000,000 was spent in actual field work—that is, in sending the farmer to 'college,' or, rather, in taking the college to the farmer. When one recalls that in addition to the above the yearly activities of the department of agriculture at Washington average about $30,000,000, it will be seen that the country has gone about the education of the farmer in a most surprising way. Account should also be taken of the regular work of the agricultural colleges of the country, which are turning out thousands of young men every year, 80 per cent of whom engage in some form of agriculture.

"Extension work during the past year covered a wide range of activities. Domestic science was taught to the wives of the farmers in their own kitchens; scientific farm management was demonstrated on thousands of farms; boys and girls were encouraged to form pig, poultry and other clubs; agricultural engineering was taught at many places; better dairying was demonstrated—in a word, direct and practical instruction in scientific agriculture was given to the American farmer in every direction.

"Perhaps the most striking feature of this extension work was that the past year saw the first organized attempt in a large way to teach the American farmer the benefits of co-operative activity. Last year in many of the states the extension workers set about the organization of co-operative selling agencies and other forms of rural organization."

Two Pictures

An old farmhouse, with meadows wide,
And sweet with clover on each side;
A bright eyed boy who looks from out
The door with woodbine wreathed about
And wishes his one thought all day—
"Oh, if I could but fly away
From this dull spot the world to see,
How happy, happy, happy,
How happy I should be!"

Amid the city's constant din
A man who round the world has been;
Who, mid the tumult and the throng
Is thinking, thinking all day long—
"Oh, could I only tread once more
The field path to the farmhouse door,
The old green meadows could I see,
How happy, happy, happy,
How happy I should be!"

At Aeolian Hall

The September AEOLIAN SALE of PIANOS & PIANOLAS

Hundreds of Fine Instruments at 25% to 50% Reductions

Player-Pianos as low as $265
Pianos as low as $75

On Easy Monthly Payments

WE WISH we could give you in this advertisement more than a mere impression of the wonderful values that are making this September Sale the most important we have ever held.

But you really must see the warerooms here at Aeolian Hall—see for yourself the scores of beautiful, sweet-toned instruments that crowd every aisle—to comprehend what we have accomplished in this event—in making easier than ever before (or again for many months) the purchase of a fine and satisfactory piano or player.

AEOLIAN SALES ARE AWAITED AND PATRONIZED BY THE ENTIRE PUBLIC

This is a sale of Pianos, Pianolas and Player-Pianos of the very finest types. Scores of the pianos are new. In some detail of design or construction these latter instruments differ from those we are making today.

Yet their value to you is in no wise decreased and at sale prices they constitute bargains of the most extraordinary character. For they are standard quality instruments made and guaranteed by this Company, the leading house in the music industries.

The used instruments also are quite different from those generally sold at special sale.

All come from the better class of homes in exchange for the very fine grades of instruments which constitute such an important part of our sales. In most cases they have been little used—that is the reason they have been exchanged.

That is the reason so many are like instruments straight from the maker.

That again is the secret of the astonishing values which every Aeolian sale presents—this high average quality of the pianos and players taken in exchange at Aeolian Hall, plus the thorough care in refitting and overhauling.

Every piano is overhauled, repolished, rebuilt where necessary, by our own skilled workmen until it is indeed like new. All players have had the advantage of remodeling in our factories—the greatest plants for the construction of player-pianos in the world.

No instrument of any type is sent to our warerooms until it is in such condition that we can give with it our unqualified guarantee.

Aeolian sales have won prestige through their wonderful instruments at equally wonderful prices. And the present event upholds and surpasses Aeolian traditions for values.

WONDERFUL BARGAINS TOMORROW

in Pianos of many famous makes, genuine Pianolas and Aeolian-built Player-Pianos.

PIANOS

Prices from $75

A Large Selection Below $250

Whatever your choice in pianos it is surely here. Many such names as Steinway, Weber, Steck, Mason & Hamlin, Knabe, Wheelock, Stuyvesant, Stroud, Kranich & Bach, Chickering, Sohmer, Hardman, etc., indicate the character of these instruments—every well-known make of piano is represented. They are exceptional instruments. Those that are new are discontinued case styles or demonstration or artist-used. And all that are not brand new have been expertly renewed in every worn part. Not one but will give years of service. At the present prices, they are simply tremendous bargains.

Monthly Payments as Low as $4

EVERY INSTRUMENT GUARANTEED

PLAYER-PIANOS

Prices from $265

Wide Assortment Below $350

Many Aeolian-built player-pianos with late improvements in expression control. All play 88-note music. Those used appreciably have been overhauled in our factories and all traces of wear removed. $600 is often asked for instruments of equal musical value.

Genuine Pianolas—Steinway, Weber, Steck and Wheelock models. Every one is of a musical quality unequaled by any other player in the market. You cannot fail to find among them an instrument that you will be proud to have in your home. Remember our own factory experts are responsible for the perfect condition of these Pianolas and we guarantee them just as absolutely as new instruments.

SAMUEL SHEPHERD DENNIS ELECTED "PRU" DIRECTOR

Samuel Sherman Dennis, president of the Howard Savings Institution of Newark and officer and director in a large number of railway and fiduciary institutions, has been elected a director of the Prudential Insurance Company of America. Mr. Dennis takes the place made vacant by the death of Theodore C. E. Blanchard, who has been a director of the Prudential for more than thirty years.

In addition to his two connections cited above, Mr. Dennis is also a director of the United Railways of New Jersey, a subsidiary of the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Chicago Junctions Railways, the Union Stockyards Company, the P. C. C. & St. L. Railroad, the Morris & Essex Railroad, a subsidiary of the Delaware & Lackawanna, the Pennsylvania Tunnel and Terminal Company, the American Insurance Company and the National Newark Banking Company.

GOSPEL TENT MEETINGS.

The Gospel tent meetings of the Christian and Missionary Alliance will close tomorrow evening, with a message on the "Second Coming of Christ." All are cordially invited to attend this closing service. The regular services for the winter will be announced later.

OFF FOR COLGATE.

CHANGED HIS MIND AGAIN?

Where does Franklin Murphy stand on the direct primary law? As Governor he urged its adoption, later as a candidate for United States Senator, in announcing his political creed, he said, "I believe in the immediate repeal of the present direct primary law," now for the second time a Senatorial candidate he seems to be again in favor of the law.

No other reasonable construction can be placed upon an advertisement now appearing in the State papers, paid for by Mr. Murphy's agent, and urging his nomination. It asks the voters to "judge him by the record of his services," and then proceeds to enumerate some of the measures the passage of which he secured as Governor. In the list appears "First Direct Primary Law," and then follows the statement "and many other statutes which have been of direct benefit to the people of the State."

Now the only essential difference between the first primary law and the present one is that the latter takes in a larger list of candidates, and no argument can be advanced in favor of the one that does not apply to the other.

Unless the English language is at fault or Mr. Murphy's agent failed to consult him before giving out the advertisement for publication, it would appear that the former Governor now deems the law which in 1909 he declared should be immediately repealed as "of direct benefit to the people of the State."

A LANGUOROUS CANDIDATE.

The address of Attorney General John W. Wescott in the interests of his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator at Columbus Hall tonight will be an event of interest to every Democrat in this community. Mr. Wescott is in the peculiar position of coming to the home of Senator Martine in the role of a vote-seeker without any valid claims upon the voters. So far he has not raised a question as to Senator Martine's fitness to succeed himself. He does not even question the loyalty of the Plainfielder to his party, although this is being done for him by others who have allowed their enthusiasm for Wilson to blind them to the excellent record of their fellow townsman. It is not customary for Democrats, or Republicans either, to refuse public indorsement of political service except that it be proven this service was not honestly and efficiently performed. Mr. Wescott says he is making no fight on Senator Martine. He is a languorous candidate. If he should be elected we fear he would prove a languorous Senator, and he would probably go down in the history of New Jersey and in the Congressional Record merely as the man who succeeded the Hon. James E. Martine to a seat in the highest legislative body in the land.

SENATOR EDGE AND SUNDAY CLOSING.

In his address at the men's mass meeting yesterday the Rev. Birney S. Hudson related incidents of a recent fight on a liquor traffic in Atlantic City. He told of saloon domination there and of the numerous obstacles that were put in the way of the element that sought not prohibition, but decent and conservative regulation. "We finally closed the saloons on Sunday," declared Dr. Hudson, "notwithstanding that Senator Edge fought it as hard as he could." Senator Edge has sought to persuade the local optimists that he is their friend, or his friends have made such overtures in his name. Perhaps the Senator, or his friend Senator Reed, can explain his attitude toward Sunday closing in Atlantic City so that the temperance people will be satisfied, but we hardly think so.

MORE DEMOCRATIC EXTRAVAGANCE.

The Daily Press wishes to thank the United States Department of the Interior for a handsomely printed and costly booklet "franked" to this office on "Indian Babies—How to Keep Them Well." The booklet is highly interesting, but we have no use for it, thank you.

Joseph S. Frelinghuysen's candidacy for the United States Senatorship has gained such an impetus throughout the State that impartial observers are predicting an easy victory for him next Tuesday over former Governor Franklin Murphy. Mr. Frelinghuysen's chances were improved about 200 per cent. by the withdrawal of former Governor Stokes from the race, as a large part of the latter's support, especially in South Jersey, has been turned to the Somerset county man. Outside of Essex, Hudson, Camden and Morris counties there is apparently little or no interest in the Murphy candidacy, and in all those counties Frelinghuysen is being backed by a strong element in the Republican party. Here in Plainfield, if the sentiments expressed on the street can be taken as any criterion, the Somerset man will get a vote of about ten to one over the former Governor.

Not in many years has a local paper been privileged to print so interesting a series of articles of Plainfield interest as those which James J. McNamee is writing for the Daily Press from Douglas, Arizona, at the present time. Mr. McNamee, ever since he left the local High School, has been connected with this newspaper. That he is making good in his assignment at the border is a source of keen gratification, not only to the publishers of the Press, but to his hundreds of friends in this city, who are following his stories with much interest. The manner in which the series is being received fully demonstrates that his trip to the border is well worth while.

The city hall matter will probably come up for a final vote tonight. After the expeditious and business-like way in which it has been handled thus far it is sincerely to be hoped that the members of the Council will not be unwise enough to delay the work now because a few people think the total cost is more than the city should spend. No one wants to see a building that will not be a credit to the city now, and for twenty-five or fifty years in the future.

• • • • • •

The heavy registration in this city means but one thing. The liquor question is attracting intense interest, and there will be a heavy vote at the primaries next Tuesday. It is sincerely to be hoped that it will not become so paramount that issues involved in the primary contest for other offices will be forgotten.

• • • • • •

Judging from the lack of interest on the part of the Democrats the members of that party realize that Mayor Calkins is unbeatable for re-election. With prominent men in that party advocating his retention in office, it is foolish to take the trouble to run a candidate against him. He is as good as re-elected now.

A Newark bank reports that a check was received the other day calling for the payment of $89, only the writer spelled it "Eidenin." A man who spells like that with a bank account, and yet some people argue that this is not a free country.

James F. Fielder is bringing to a close a four-year term of office. While many disagree with him politically, all must admit that he has made an excellent chief executive of the State.

• • • • • •

If Austen Colgate is made the Republican nominee for Governor there will be nothing about his past record that will need defense when the members of the party unite against the Democratic foe. Can as much be said of others who seek the nomination?

UNCLE ABNER

News are quite scarce this week, as everybody in town has been waitind down at the railroad depot since last Monday morning to see the 8:17 train come in, which is late at this writing.

Hi Bibbins has got a new invention, which is photographing ham on sandwiches so it looks like a real article. He ought to make his fortune around at camp meetings and county fairs.

It Happened.

"I don't believe I can invest any money in the motion picture business," said the local banker, when importuned for a loan, "the business is too ephemeral."

"Well," replied the would-be movie owner, "we have got to cater to the women a good deal, you know."

The B. V. D. Boys.

If a sane citizen would walk down the avenue in his B. V. D.'s what would the police do to him? We lower the curtain, leaving the audience in suspenders.

Yet, almost any fair evening now one may observe a lot of Mr. September Morns panting up and down the main streets clad in something less than B. V. D.'s. They are exercising. They are running to keep themselves in fine physical condition.

It is a fine exhibition of the human form divine and nobody blames them for wanting to run around in their gym suits in hot weather.

But why draw the line?

We can't even sit on our front lawn attired in our B. V. D.'s and enjoy the breeze. It looks like rank discrimination.

Next Thursday evening at 8 o'clock we are going to run downtown and back in a suit of B. V. D.'s and if we are not arrested before we get to the lumber yard we will be much surprised.

It's all wrong, Ab, it's all wrong.

The Old Straw Hats.

We have already mentioned the fact that the discarded straws hats can be fed to the cows. If you don't keep a cow, as every thrifty citizen should, unless he lives in a flat, place the old straw hat carefullly in the garbage can.

We have already mentioned the fact that an inverted straw hat trimmed with baby ribbon makes an excellent hanging backet for flowers and would be an ornament to any parlor.

An old straw hat run through the meat grinder makes an excellent breakfast food. There is enough in one hat for a family of seven. With a little cream and sugar added it will tast just as good as Ty-a-Bita, Eata-a-chunka or Tan Bark Flake.

This Is the Life.

I shot an arrow in the air, it fell in the distance, I knew notw here, till a neighbor said it killed his calf, and I had to pay him six and a half ($6.50.) I bought some poison to slay more rats, and a neighbor swore it killed his cats, and rather than argue across the fence I paid him four dollars and fifty cents ($4.50). One night I set sailing a toy balloon and I hoped it would soar till it reached the moon, but the candle fell out on a farmer's straw and he said I must settle or go to law. And that is the way with a random shot, it never hits the proper spot; and a joke you spring that you think so smart may leave a wound in some fellow's heart.

Columbus.

Columbus though the world was round,
He had good cause, we'll swear:
You see, he travelled some and knew
It wasn't on the square.

ANITA STEWART
in "The Daring of Diana."

At Proctor's Today.

Two Vitagraph blue ribbon photoplay productions form the main part of the photoplay entertainment provided at Proctor's today. "The Daring of Diane" is a vivid tale of newspaper life, Diana being a reporter on one of the biggest sheets in New York city. Thrills are many as Anita Stewart in the title role, receives her assignments which gradually lead into the plot itself. Miss Stewart has won the title of one of the most popular stars of filmdom through the masterful interpretations which she has given to the motion picture public ever since her debut several years ago. In this feature Miss Stewart is shown to splendid advantage in her role of a newspaper reporter. Instead of abrusque, officious and agressive character with a huge notebook and pencil, this artist who works under the Vitagraph eagle has made the part a real one. A capable cast assisits Miss Stewart in her efforts and includes Charles Wellesley, Francis Morgan, Julia Swayne Gordon and Anders Randolf. The Vitagraph production in entitled "The Redemption of Dave Darcey," in which James Merriman is entrusted with the leading role. The scenes of this photolay are laid in various parts of New York city and draw with striking fidelity a picture of the life of two entirely different classes of people in the metropolis—one of class who live by their wits in the streets and byways inhabited by the "submerged tenth," the other who live on Riverside drive and the other broad avenues, where are to be seen the motors of those who own the wealth of the great city. "The Redemption of Dave Darcey" contains some human interest point of great merit. Director Paul Scardon, who is responsible for the production, is a student of psychology and has worked his knowledge of human nature well into the picture. The program today is completed by the addition of the third episode of "Beatrice Fairfax."

Tomorrow Wilfred Lucas and Bessiee Love appear in "Hell to Pay Austin," and the beginning of "The Grip of Evil," and the ending of "The Secret of the Submarine" are added features. Starting Wednesday and continuing threee days the great patriotic pictur, "The Fall of a Nation," will be presented at Proctor's.

A FANTASTIC FRIGATE.

Its Captain Did the Best He Could With the Paint He Had.

Before the days of steel ships the allowance of paint in the British navy was very small, and sometimes the officers had to pay large sums in order that their ships might maintain a decent appearance.

Sir John Phillimore resorted to a curious expedient either to soften the heart of the navy board or, if that proved impossible, to express his opinion of the situation. He painted one side of his yellow frigate black and white and used the rest of the black paint in printing on the other side in large letters "No More Paint!"

The navy board wrote to call his attention to the impropriety of his conduct and signed themselves, as they always did officially, "Your affectionate friends." Sir John made reply that he could not obliterate the objectionable letters unless he were given more paint, and signed himself in turn, "Your affectionate friend, John Phillimore."

The naval authorities then called his attention to the impropriety of the signature, to which Sir John responded in acknowledging the letter that he regretted that the paint had not been sent and ending, "I am no longer your affectionate friend, John Phillimore."

His frigate was permitted to retain her original yellow, and thus the navy board punished Sir John's impertinence.

THE NARROWING PATH
By Brinkerhoff.

Plainfield Theatre.

Max Spiegel's "Merry Rounders," featuring Abe Reynolds Hebrew character comedian and Geo. F. Hayes, rube comedian, comes to the Plainfield Theatre, this afternoon and night, and local theatregoers who do not see this show will miss an opportunity of witnessing what is without a doubt one of the best burlesque productions ever staged.

Spiegel productions in the past have always held front rank from every angle of the show game, but in "The Merry Rounders" the high water mark has been reached by this master showman, and his endeavor to give followers of burlesque entertainment the best that can be had in that line.

He has a specially selected cast of principals to assist Reynolds and Hayes, and they are all stars in their respective lines.

Eugene McGregor is a newcomer to burlesque having been previously featured in musical comedy while Frank Ward in the juvenile role is a former vaudeville headliner. May Latham heads the female principals, assisted by Elizabeth Jane and Ruth Wesley.

Plainfield Theatre patrons will have an entirely new vaudeville and photoplay entertainment provided for their amusement beginning tomorrow afternoon and running until Wednesday night. Thursday afternoon the bill will be again changed for the remainder of the week. The program tomorrow promises to be of a diversified character and one that is sure to please both youth and old age. The show will open up with Harry Nestler's thrilling railroad drama, "The Operator." This act contains realistic train effects which combined with the carload of scenery and wonderful cast, will make it a production long to be remembered by Plainfield audiences.

Maximillian and Wills Company present a sketch classified as "a little bit of everything;" Dick Sheppard, as comedian, has a laugh to offer in every line; W[illegible] David, also comediane, ad[illegible] more spice to the bill, and [illegible] Bruces round out the vaudeville program with a selection of popular and classical piano and vocal selections.

Beside the musical overtures rendered by the popular orchestra at the theatre, several Pathe comedies and dramas lengthen the program. A feature of the photoplay portion of the program includes the Pathe Animated Newspaper of current topics in our own land as well as the foreign field. Popular prices reign at all performances.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How Heinel Lost His Enchanted Ring.

He Drew His Enchanted Sword.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

THIS is what daddy told the children after supper: "Once a king, Heinel, took his queen to walk. He became tired and slept under a tree. While he slept the queen took from his finger an enchanted ring and wished herself and her son far from Heinel.

"When Heinel awoke he was very sad, for he knew he must walk back to his own kingdom. He was visiting his father, you see, when his queen left him.

"So he traveled till he came to a hill where three giants were sharing their father's goods. They cried, 'Let the little man part our goods for us!'

"Now, there was a sword that cut off heads whenever any one cried 'Heads off!' Also a cloak that made the wearer invisible and a pair of boots that carried the wearer anywhere he wished to go.

"Heinel said he could not value these things unless he might try them on.

"'Now, give me the sword!' said he after they gave him the cloak.

"'We are all dead men if you use it on us. Try it on a tree,' begged the giants. Next he got the boots, and as soon as he had the cloak, the sword and the boots in his power he at once wished himself in his own kingdom, the Golden mountain.

"As Heinel came near his palace he heard the sound of merry music. The people around him told him that the queen was going to marry somebody.

"Then he threw his enchanted cloak around his shoulders and passed into the castle. Since the cloak had the power to make its wearer invisible, he took his place beside the queen without being seen by her. Whenever a servant put something to eat on her plate Heinel took it away and ate it himself. When they gave her wine to drink he took the cup and drank the wine himself. Her cup and plate were always empty at her own feast.

"Then fear and sorrow came over her, and she left the feast. Going to her own room, she wept bitterly. Heinel followed her and heard her say: 'Alas, will this horrid spell never end? Once I was set free by a young man.'

"'Fickle one!' Heinel then cried. 'The one who set you free once is now here beside you. But how have you treated him?'

"Then Heinel went back to the feast and sent all the company away. He told them the queen's marriage to a man not her own husband was at an end. But the princes and peers there mocked him. Heinel told them again to clear out, and when they turned upon him to harm him he drew his enchanted sword and cried, 'Heads off!'

"At these words the traitors' heads fell off, and Heinel became king."

Training a Husband

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

Morris Urges Marian to Follow a Schedule and Che Does It to His Later Inconvenience.

"What is that?"

Marian looked up in surprise from the silver pitcher she was polishin It had belonged to Morris' mother and it was one of the chronic complaints that it was not properly taken care of. From his expression Marian realized that he was feigning not to know the pitcher because it was so bright.

"The Ladies of the Aid Society are going to serve refreshments tonight at the social and they wanted to borrow some pitchers for the lemonade, so I offered them this."

"H-m." Morris walked about the kitchen with his hands in his pockets. "I wish they would borrow some more things that need attention, that range, for instance." It certainly was innocent of stove polish.

"Suppose you black it. It needs it and I cannot work more hours than there are in the day." Marian gave a few final rubs on the pitcher. Morris did not reply to this thrust. Of course Marian did not for one moment think he could black a stove. He had to keep his finger nails in order. It was necessary in his position.

"It is not a question of how many hours you work, but of how well you organize it that tells in getting things done." Marian had listened to this line of argument so many times that all freshness was worn off it.

"So I have heard you say," she replied with a toss of her head, "but you have never made it clear just how a woman, subject to all the interruption I am, can follow a plan."

"You must not allow interruptions to break in on your schedule of work," announced Morris with the air of one stating an axiom.

"When the baby cries, for instance, and I am washing dishes, I suppose I should finish the dishes according to schedule." Marian looked up with a smile.

"Of course, you know I do not mean any such thing," was the testy answer. "But this I do say: You could have your baby running on a schedule so that you would know just about how much time you would have between naps, and how long each nap would be." Morris' air was full of wisdom.

"I have read of such babies but never had one, though I have fed them all on a schedule and brought them up by the clock, or tried to, anyway." There was asperity in Marian's voice. This was a tender point with her.

"That is just the trouble. You mean to keep to a schedule, but everything interferes and you allow it to do so."

"What a loss it was to the world that you were not a woman and could bring your methodical mind to bear on this very practical problem," was Marian's sarcastic answer.

"That's it; get angry when I am tryin to show you how you could make your work easier." Morris' tone was aggrieved.

"If you really do want to make my work easier, please fill the water pail." Marian handed the bucket to him. He took it and silently left the room.

"Thank you. It would be a big help if you would get in the habit of looking in the bucket and seeing if water is needed whenever you come through the kitchen. That pump strains my back." This suggestion was not met with enthusiasm. Morris silently left the room.

"Marian," called Morris half an hour later. "I wish you would come and find my long black tie. I seem to have mislaid it."

"I think you can find it, dear," cheerfully called his wife. "I am trying your suggestion of not allowing anything to interrupt my schedule of work. It took a man's head to think of it; I think I shall like it." Marian smiled, for there was no further remark from the bedroom.

DANCING SLIPPERS OF GORGEOUS BROCADES.

By Mary Glynn.

A really elegant evening slipper should be either in metal cloth or metal brocade. General adoption of the colored kid slipper for street wear during the summer, puts it somewhat into another class, and thus satin, brocade, metal cloths and metal being correct for evening footwear. Shoes are just as important as millinery, in fact, the well dressed woman gives just as much time and thought to the selection of her shoes and slippers as she does to her hats and dresses. Shoemakers themselves now say that they are like the milliners and dress-makers. This is indeed true, because the shoe man must choose his fabrics just as carefully as does the milliner. He must have his shoes cut with a view of becomingness, and when it comes to the ornamentation of the same, buckles, and other dainty garnitures for footwear must be in no less good taste than the best of real jewelry. As the high novelty for the season comes, a slipper which is made of both brocade and plain metal cloth will be very good.

FOR TRAVELERS.

How to Journey the Easiest, Pleasantest Way.

A common purse for traveling companions does away with much confusion and wearisome settling up after a day of sightseeing. Every morning let each member of the party put a specified amount into a common purse, from which equal expenses, such as car fares, fees, luncheons, etc., are to be paid. Personal expenditures or extras should be taken from individual purses.

A nice way to keep neckwear, ribbons and such things smooth when packing in a suitcase is to put them between the different leaves of a magazine. This takes up less room than a box in a suit case and is very convenient when removed to the dresser drawer, as it keeps these small articles smooth and nice.

A stiff hatbox cut to equal the depth of the hat and placed over the hat will be found to be a most effectual way of preserving its freshness during travels. Underwear and other little accessories can be packed neatly on either side to prevent the box and hat from swaying.

There is a nightgown designed especially for travelers who must spend the night on the cars. It has a pocket in which toilet articles may be tucked and a big hood which may be slipped over disheveled hair for the trip from the berth to the dressing room.

A bag of white oilcloth such as is used for shelves, with a drawstring at the top, is a highly prized possession when one travels. The soiled clothing is snugly and securely packed in it, thus preventing the contents of the trunk from being affected by it.

Sometimes when traveling or visiting there is pressing need of a laundry bag and none at hand. If one can procure any sort of common towel, a bag may easily be made. Fold the towel in halves and sew up the sides to within six inches of the top. Fold the tops over outside and stitch across leaving an inch space for the draw strings, which may be of tape, ribbon or anything that happens to be at hand. Such a bag will serve its purpose and can readily be converted back to a towel when the need is over.

FOR MATINEES.

Velvet Leads the Luxurious Fabrics For Autumn.

This fetching costume is featured in purple velvet and georgette crape. The richly embroidered effect is self colored, and a collar of ecru lace gives a smart dash. The crape affords a skirt yoke under the peplum of the blousy jacket, and maidens will delight in the ensemble.

QUAINT LINES.

HER DANCE FROCK.

A Simple Model For Maidens In Pink Satin.

This party gown has a drop skirt of silver lace over which falls a graceful drape of pink satin. The bodice has a girdle of silver lace, but by far the most interesting feature are the angel wings of pink tulle on the shoulders.

THE BELLE

SUIT FABRICS.

A Chat About What New Suitings Are Like.

Do not gather the impression that broadcloth is the one and only material for suits. Broadcloth will be used extensively, for it lends itself pleasingly to the mode both as regards design and decoration. Both fur and embroidery are perfect on a background of broadcloth.

There are wonderful velours for coat suits, and there is no question but that gaberdine and serge will be used. Paris is putting out some suits of alpaca, but it is hard to prophesy that this material will be used here for autumn suits.

The feeling is that if we are to use alpaca for suits this will not occur until early spring, but we are quite likely to use alpaca for dresses through the winter. For suits you must not forget that rich satins of extra weight have been provided for dressy wear. The novelty suitings of fine checks and stripes, of which you have already been told, are not to be overlooked, and you may expect to see suits of velvet as well.

Tassels of silk trim many of the suits, and these are to be seen as well on dresses, blouses and even on neckwear.

There will surely be a big variety of fabrics and trimmings to choose from and many other smart types of suits besides the Russian styles presented today.

Colored Bead Belts.

Belts have come back with a glitter and sparkle that will make them irresistible even to the girl who ordinarily does not care to cultivate a distinct break at the waist line by means of a separate belt.

Some of these belts, which have come from Paris, are made entirely of beads in various colors. The beads are so arranged that there is a distinct design, in some instances introducing figures. Quite unique is a belt of black patent leather with a design done in black and white beads. Another is shown in a checkerboard effect done in bugle beads. There are others of suede in bright colors liberally sprinkled with beads of a strongly contrasting tone.

Because of the fancy for narrow strap effects some of the belts have been made of several narrow strips of suede and are joined with bead motifs of various designs.

A Plaster Hint.

The wife of a physician who has occasion to run to the roll of adhesive plaster to cure less than mortal ills finds it a durable as well as neat way of marking china when she lends a particularly good dish to an invalid, a party or a fair. She writes her name and address with indelible pencil on the plaster and sticks it on the bottom of her dish, where it makes an inconspicuous identification and cannot be removed without at least several washings.

Drawstring Bags.

Drawstring bags made of silk or of satin continue strongly in the lead. Some very effective numbers in other fabrics, such as worsteds, have been brought out. The new designs and fabrics show great variety. The ruffled skirt effect is still prominently featured, as also are the draped effects of the lamp shade type.

Terms Used In Crocheting.

Ch means chain; ch st, chain stitch; s c, single crochet; d c, double crochet (thread over once); tr c, treble crochet (thread over twice); d tr, double treble crochet (thread over three times); l c, long crochet; p, picot; r p, roll picot; s st, slip stitch; l, loop; k st, knot stitch; *, stars mean that the directions given between them should be repeated as indicated before proceeding.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room or rooms to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

Raking 'Em Over

STALLINGS HAS BRAINS.

Fred Lieb, a writer on the New York Sun, says that he still believes that George Stallings is the "Miracle Man" of baseball; and Mr. Lieb knows what he is talking about. In an article, the New York writer says:

"Stallings has few persons outside of Boston pulling for him this year owing to the rowdy tactics employed by the Braves in recent seasons. It will take the team a long time to live down some of the rough stuff it has pulled, but nevertheless it is but fair to give Satan his due, as the old saying goes.

"To the writer Stallings never deserved the title of the Miracle Man more than this season. He has kept a job lot team in the running largely through his personality and drivin power. On paper his team is outclassed by most every other one in the league. As a paper team the Reds have it all over him. He has a sorry crowd of batters, and outside of Rudolph his pitchers are nothing to brag about, yet he has kept in the race all season. The club deserves as much praise for gameness as its leader for genuine managerial ability. The Braves are game and have the fighting spirit. They are the gamest team in baseball. You may call them anything else you like, but you can't take that from them."

BUFFALO WINS PENNANT.

The International League season concluded yesterday, with Buffalo claiming the pennant by a comfortable margin. Though the Bisons clinched the pennant several days ago it was not until today's games were completed that it became known which team would be found in second place.

Had Providence lost and Montreal won the Canadians would have tied with the Grays for second place.

Providence won its game against Newark, however, and though Montreal took two from Rochester, the Providence team remains secure in second place by one game, with Montreal third, and the other teams in the following order:

Baltimore, Toronto, Richmond, Rochester and Newark.

BROWN FOR PRINCETON.

"After a three-year struggle with an entrance condition at Princeton, Allan Brown enters his senior year with a solid standing in scholastic work. For three years Brown has played scrub football just on account of one condition, and now he may don variety togs. It should not be necessary to aid that "if he makes good on the gridiron." Brown, for two years as a second-team player, distinctly outclassed other backfield men at Princeton. He has been a better man than Glick, Tibbott, Law, Driggs and others who have gained some fame against big teams. College football elevens generally start the season with hard luck tales, and the collegiate atmosphere is a dark, dull blue. But here the bright light lines. It is an agreeable change for the general reader of football yarns, not to mention those who follow closely the doings of the Orange and Black."—Newark News.

THE UMPIRE DECIDES.

When the Royal Giants and the Dunellens got together on Saturday few fans were of the opinion that the game would be a forfeited one. But such was the case. Refusal to abide by the decision of the umpire caused that gentleman to forfeit the game to Dunellen. In so doing, the umpire was perfectly right. Whether or not, in the opinion of the Royals or the fans, the "ump's" decision was correct had nothing to do with the affair. The man was either safe or out at the plate. The umpire called him safe. And that was all there was to it.

On the GRIDIRON

Princeton.

With John Rush, head coach, in the van, the Princeton football players at Lake Minnewaska took a hike of ten miles at a fairly fast clip over the mountains. Several veterans from last year's eleven put in an appearance over the week end, so that with few exceptions the squad is nearly complete.

Several of the players are unable to get up to the camp. Gowan, a substitute centre, is driving an ambulance in France, while Parisette, a varsity tackle last year, will not be able to get away from the Mexican border for some time.

Included among the new arrivals at the camp are Snake Ames, a quarter, and Bob Nourse, a guard. Highley and Eberstadt are expected to report tomorrow.

Revised Rules.

Judging from the general discussion at the interpretation meeting of the Football Rules Committee on Saturday, it would seem that many coaches sit up nights trying to work out schemes whereby they can find loopholes in the code. Some of the officials also seem to give much topsy-turvy thought to the placing of some peculiar, intricate construction on a rule and providing for situations extremely unlikely ever to arise on the gridiron.

The best of the officials do not have any trouble during the progress of a game. If a knotty point arises, a football official with common sense will make no mistake. The game doesn't want officials who have to lean constantly on a rule book in their right hand all the time. The officials should know the general spirit of the rules thoroughly and make their decisions without delay.

It is a healthy sign that some of the coaches are intent upon making the game as attractive as possible for the spectators. The first good move in this direction was made last year, when some of the teams consented to wear numbers so that onlookers could know what men were engaged in each play. While this custom has not become general, it is believed that it will be practiced in all the big games before many seasons have passed.

BROOKLYN OUTFIT MAY PERFORM HERE

Wilbert Robinson's Cohorts Would Play Dunellen Here.

The Brooklyn Nationals may play the Dunellen baseball team in this city. At least, it is reported that negotiations are now under way whereby the "big leaguers" may pastime here before many moons. According to our informant, Manager Tommy Apgar has received a letter from the Brooklyn headquarters. The game would have to be played in Plainfield, according to the letter. Quite a large pecuniary clause is attached to the challenge and something should be done towards helping defray the expense of bringing the Nationals to this city.

The same person who informed us of the possible visit of the Dodgers to this city stated that a Brooklyn scout has been sojourning in Dunellen for some time. This gentleman is reported as having classed Lou Brown as one of the best players he has seen in some time. The scout thought exceedingly well of Trust, too.

ROYAL GIANTS AND DUNELLEN TEAMS CONTEST IN NINE INNING TIE BASEBALL GAME

Was Trust Safe or Was He Out?—Umpire Britt Martin Called Him Safe—Royals Refused to Abide by Decision—Hence Martin Forfeited Game to Apgarites—Big Crowd Sees Fast Encounter.

By Joe Gallagher.

Fortunately, we witnessed a real baseball game on Saturday. Unfortunately, neither team actually registered victory, the score being six to six when an argument began. Refusal, on the part of the Royals to abide by an umpire's decision led to a forfeiture to the Dunellens.

Presenting a most formidable line-up with Payne, an out of town hurler, on the mound, it is needless to say that the Simmons men felt sure of victory. Undoubtedly, Tommy Apgar felt the same way. At any rate, Tommy started Johnny Dixon on the mound. And Johnny was in fine trim.

The Dunellen team was the first to do any scoring. George Trust, who was easly the hero of the day in more ways than one, celebrated his first trip to the plate by clouting out a double. Eddie Gunzelman, who had obtained a life by virtue of a free pass, scored on the clout. Jack Wilson accomplished a little when he singled scoring the fleet Southerner. Unfortunately for the Apgarites, Wilson was out at the plate, Culver to Stewart, "the sunshine route." The colored players remained idle during the first session but got busy in the second frame. Griffen was an easy out, Jack Garretson doing the trick unassisted. But Culver—he sure is going to be famous—jumped on one of Johnny Dixon's fast "ones" and circled the bags in a manner that made even the fleet Trust take notice. Nothing else of note happened in that frame.

The battle continued with the score five to three in favor of the Apgar men at the beginning of the seventh. The fans, as is the custom, began to "stretch." The Royal artillery began to get busy. Cooper filled out to Jim Emery and Borden lifted an easy one to Gunzelman. Fiall hit a grounder to Jim Emery and was safe when James allowed the ball to migrate to right field. Hatchett singled; Pannier and Stewart did likewise. Three runs were ushered in and the Royal rooters began shouting for fair. The score was 6 to 5 in favor of the Royals and excitement reigned supreme. We are just recovering our voice.

The ninth frame rolled around—all ninth frames do. The colored players, aided by generous applause from Third street fans, could do nothing, although Borden contributed a single. He remained on the bags, however. George Trust opened the Dunellen half of the ninth by singling. George took second of his own free will and a desperate throw to stop him went through to the outer works. Trust made for home and executed a typical "Ty Cobb" slide. The ball was relayed to Stewart and Umpire Britt Martin was forced to decide whether or not Trust was safe. He decided that the Southern lad was safe and the argument began. After waiting patiently for the Royals to resume play, Martin forfeited the game to Dunellen.

Wilherton, the Mobile lad, played third for Dunellen and did well. His hitting ability featured, but his fielding was no better than that daily executed by Eddie Coughlan.

COACH PATCH ISSUES CALL FOR PRACTICE

Candidates for Red and Blue Squad to Be on Hand September 25.

Announcement was made today to the effect that the Plainfield High School football team will start practice on Monday, September 25. Coach Ralph S. Patch will be in this city by that time and will notify all candidates. Those who intend to try out for berths on the eleven are requested to be on hand for the first practice.

Coach Patch believes that he will have a formidable team and counts on considerable assistance from several of last year's stars who will return to school. Bill Daniels will undoubtedly be out for first practice.

"Hub" Stine, the North Plainfield lad, who is coaching the Westfield squad has not, as yet, had an opportunity to look over his material. It is understood that he will have some valuable material with which to work. According to the Elizabeth newspapers Battin High School will have a good eleven this year, although several of last year's men have been lost by graduation. Rahway has engaged Coach Carl G. Eliason, of the Ohio Wesleyan University, and formerly coach at Montclair Military Academy.

Two Packages.

FORTIFIED SAINTS TRIM DUNELLEN

Second String Aggregation Goes Down to Defeat on Hyde Field.

The St. Joseph baseball team, greatly fortified by the addition of several City League players, had little or not trouble with the Dunellen A. C. players on Hyde Oval on Saturday afternoon. The local lads won the contest, which was a farce in some sections, by the score of nine runs to one. Dealaman was the only player who was able to score.

LOCAL AIREDALE IS SECOND PRIZE WINNER

J. J. O'Donohue's "Kenwyn Pennant" Captures Prize in Long Island Event.

At the first annual bench show of the Queensboro Kennel Club held Saturday at Link's Casino, Astoria, L. I., J. J. O'Donohue's "Kenwyn Pennant" captured second prize in the Airedale class. This is the first of the Queensboro club's shows to be given under American Kennel Club rules. About 400 dogs were entered. The quality of the dogs was high, as many of the recent show winners were there to gather specials and other honors.

The interest centred on the judging of the special for the best dog in the show. This coveted honor was won for the first time by an American bred dog, a wire haired fox-terrier owned by Mrs. C. Ehlermann. "Croydon Radium," only a puppy, faced noted collection of winning fox terriers in his classes and won not only as best wire haired but also as best of either variety, smooth or wire haired fox terriers. He later gained the special for the best dog of any variety.

CLIFF RANDOLPH AND ABSTAINER BATS PRONOUNCE DEEAT FOR ROYAL GIANTS

"Mickey" McFadden Exhibits Considerable Ability — Tabs Clout Edwards at Will—Tommy Mullin Obtains Four Hits and a Base on Balls in Five Trips to Plate—Fully Two Thousand Fans Witness Game.

By Joe Gallagher.

"We have met the enemy and we are theirs." Pete Simmons will have to make use of this septence when he telegraphs to the world the fact that his Royal Giants were defeated on Avon Oval yesterday afternoon by an 8 to 6 score. Fully two thousand fans witnessed the spectacle, which was one of the most exciting games of ball every played anywhere.

The fans knew the Royals were coming out in full regalia and that "padding up" was in order. Edwards, a metropolitan hurler, was on the mound for the Royals, and was clouted to all corners of the lot. "Mickey" McFadden started for the Abstainers and was in fine fettle. He permitted but 6 hits in the 7 innings he pitched. The fact that he was relieved by Cliff Randolph in the seventh frame cannot be taken to indicate that the Bound Brook lad was not effective. When Cliff came to bat for the first time he was given an ovation of which Mary Pickford might feel proud. A single was Clifford's response to the plaudits of the fans.

Realizing that in Randolph they had a clever and efficient hurler, the Royals determined to do their best. But Cliff made them look like "bush leaguers." Culver, one of the best shortstops there is, was the only Royal to get a hit in the three innings in which Randolph twirled. And Culver's clout was "some" smash. Five out of the nine men who faced the Tab hurler fanned in the easiest fashion.

The colored lads started off with a rush. Griffen, a Philly Giant, was an easy out, Teeling gathering in his "pop" fly. Culver singled and Cooper, a left handed batter, was given a free ticket to the first station. "Lil" Panier, a Cuban, was called out on strikes. There followed a tap by Tom Fiall. It was a very light tap and was called fair by Umpire Britt Martin. Three men scored on the general excitement that followed. Naturally, Mr. Martin had to listen to arguments, but his decision was accepted by both parties. The battle raged once more.

When the "stretch" session rolled around things looked very unfavorable for the "Teetotalers." The Royals had gathered in three more runs in the sixth session, although they got but one hit in that frame. But Manager Jim Scott did not give up the ship. "It's never too late to mend" is now a pet phrase with the Tab manager. As we have previously stated, Clifford Randolph, of this city, was called upon to hurl. But Cliff had to have assistance in one way or another. And this is how he received such aid as was necessary to win the game.

Before Cliff really ascended the mound, he earned praise by clouting out a single. Tommy Mullin followed with his third hit of the day, doubling to left. Randolph scored. Eddie Coughlan followed with a smashing double, scoring Thomas. Teeling was on the bag by virture of a pass and he also scored. Therefore, the score was six to three when Cliff essayed the pitcher's burden. The eighth session was the "big" inning for the Tabs. Cliff Randolph fanned, but Tommy Mullin responded with his fourth hit, a single. Eddie Coughlan was safe on an error by Cooper. "Benny" Rosenson followed with a single, scoring diminutive Thomas. It was then that Eddie Hannon clouted out the double that will go down as "Freddy" Kline might say—in Ridpath's history. The ball soared high, but ground rules permitted Edward but two bases. Rosenson went to third while Eddie Coughlan dented the pan. Wall thought he might as well do a little batting. Hence, he singled and scored Rosenson and Hannon. Trust flied out. The Royals were dangerous in the ninth session but Cliff Randolh saved the day. A nifty catch by George Trust, whose work by the way deserves mention, ended the game.

Tommy Mullin's efforts consisted of scoring two runs, making four hits, extinguishing seven Royals and assisiting in the extermination of three other Giant players. All of which might be called a day's work.

Antiquity of the Senate.

The senate is historically much older than the lower house, or house of representatives, as it is called in our country and time. In the remote time, while as yet there was no such thing as a science of government, the tribe was wont to look to its old men, on account of their wisdom and experience, for advice in all matters pertaining to the tribe, and those old men were the first senators. The word senator comes from "senes," meaning old. As civilization advanced and seated government became a fact the senate continued to be composed of the old men, and when by and by the second chamber, or council, was added the senate continued to receive the larger measure of reverence and respect.

A Taste For Soap.

Surely one of the queerest of tastes was that of the historian Prescott, of whose life in Rome Mrs. Hugh Fraser tells in "A Diplomatist's Wife In Many Lands." She says that he used to keep a cake of soap on his writing table and nibble at it constantly, "saying, when he was remonstrated with, that people should be clean inside as well as out."

A Proof.

"His teacher says Georgie has a wonderful memory. He can run off, without a mistake, even the most unimportant details."

"Yes, I heard him the other day tell the names of all the vice presidents."—Baltimore American.

COUNCIL ACCEPTS CITY HALL BIDS

After Modification of Plans Contracts Are Awarded —Work Will Start Soon.

TOTAL COST $146,499

By Making Various Changes in Specifications Construction Is to Cost $107,999 — Councilman Cose Opposes Improvement

Bids were accepted and contracts awarded for the erection of Plainfield's new municipal building at an adjourned meeting of the Council last night, and it is expected that the actual work of erecting the building on the Watchung avenue site will be started soon. The contracts were not awarded until after the plans and specifications were modified so as to reduce the total cost. This was done with the consent of the successful bidders.

The bidders and the original figures are as follows: General contract, P. F. Kenney Company, New York, $102,000; heating, Miller & Brady, New York, $4,097; plumbing, Den. J. Galbraith, Plainfield, $3,165; electrical work, Manhattan engineering Company, New York, $1,446.

The cut in the general contract totals $2,035, and the various other cuts are as follows: Heating, $304; plumbing, $30; electrical, $40; work on stairways, $150; steel arrangement in collector's vaults, $80; plastering, etc., $775; making the total $2,709, or the net contract figures, $110,708. This with the cost of land, $31,500; $6,000 for architect's fees and $1,000 which goes to the successful architect, makes a grand total of $146,499, leaving a balance of $3,501 for furnishings, grading of land, laying of sidewalks and other incidentals.

All of the Councilmen were present last night except Mr. Cox and Mr. Booth, and Mr. Cose was the only one of the nine members who voted against the resolutions offered by Councilman T. F. Hylan, accepting bids and awarding contracts. His opposition was based on the fact that he says that he understood that the total amount was not to exceed $100,000, while he believes it now will be $175,000 before the work is completed.

Mr. Cose made this statement after the meeting, but was taken up on it by Mr. Hylan, who did not believe that Mr. Cose's assertion was correct. However, Mr. Cose said that he made the statement without fear of contradiction, being convinced that the $175,000 would be reached eventually. After the vote was taken on Mr. Hylan's resolution in the meeting, Mr. Hamilton stated that Councilman Booth had expressed his regret in not being able to be present, but wanted him to say that he was in favor of the action to be taken by the Council.

Mr. Hylan filed plans and specifications for the installation of separate storm sewers and drains in various parts of the city, and through a resolution offered by him, October 9 was fixed as the time when bids will be received for this work.

Through a resolution offered by Mr. Bird one 32-candle power electric light will be placed on Terrill road, near Fanwood, it being understood that Fanwood is to locate two additional lights in that vicinity, which is in need of additional light.

The American Motor Corporation was given permission to install a 500-gallon gasolene tank on its property on West Front street, near Grant avenue, through a motion offered by Mr. Cose.

The Mackenzie Company, of North avenue, protested to the Council against the order to lay concrete walks on its property between Hill and Berckman street, on the ground that there is no storm sewer there.

The Franklin Construction Company, which has been rebuilding a certain portion of the Springfield road, in a communication requested the street commissioner to make an inspection of the pavement.

REMOVE 1 CENT TAX ON TELEPHONE CALLS

Public telephone agents have been notified by the New York Telephone Company to remove the notices at pay stations announcing the war tax of one cent on telephone messages for which there is a charge of 15 cents or more. The collection of this tax was discontinued at midnight September 8, when the new revenue law abolishing the tax went into effect. Under the provisions of the former law which went into effect on December 1, 1914, the telephone company was required to collect the tax from persons paying for the messages and turn the money over to the Collector of Internal Revenue.

NOON-DAY MEETING.

MAYOR HOPES TO END CAR STRIKE

Confers With Business Men On Plan—Violence is Increasing.

New York, Sept. 19.—Mayor Mitchel this morning conferred with a citizens' committee of the Chamber of Commerce and Merchants Association, to formulate a plan of action looking toward an amicable settlement of the car strike controversy.

With the spread of the strike to Queens county, where 400 motormen and conductors went out early today, violence is increasing all over the city.

The most serious case was an attack on a northbound Ninth avenue train at Fifty-sixth street, which resulted in the painful injury of John Claffy, of 505 West Twenty-seventh street, station master of the Third Avenue line at Fordham.

Claffy was on his way to work when a milk bottle, hurled from a roof, crashed throught the window of the car in which he was riding and struck him on the head. His scalp was badly lacerated and he was taken to Roosevelt Hospital, where his wounds were attended to and he returned to his home.

An unidentified man riding on a Third Avenue train was hit by a bottle at Sixty-ninth street and started for a hospital, accompanied by a policeman. On the way he decided he would rather be treated by his private physician and he left without making his identity known.

ANNUAL INSPECTION OF TRINITY COMMANDERY HELD

The annual inspection of Trinity Commandery, No. 17, Knights Templar, was held last night in Masonic Hall with about sixty present. Eminent Grand Commander Robert H. Ingersoll, of Atlantic City, was present with his staff and commented very favorably on the work of the local knights.

Following the inspection and business session everyone adjourned to the banquet room, where a dinner was enjoyed. Speech making and addresses by Mr. Ingersoll and other officers were enjoyed.

DONALD M'GEE RECEIVES DISCHARGE FROM TROOP

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 18.—Sergeant Donald McGee yesterday received his discharge from Troop D. He was released under the dependency clause, and will leave for home at once. McGee's application was filed with those of the other non-commissioned officers of the troop, but was held up for some reason. Sergeant McGee will be mustered out here today, and will leave for Plainfield tonight. He will not be required to report at Fort DuPont, Delaware, before going to Plainfield. He is married and lives at 103 Sycamore avenue.

COLGATE MEETINGS WILL BE HELD TOMORROW NIGHT

John F. Murray, of Newark, formerly a member of the election board in that city, and with Arthur S. Warner, of Elizabeth, secretary of the Union County Colgate committee, will be the principal speakers at two meetings to be held in Plainfield tomorrow night. The first meeting will be held at 8 o'clock at Plainfield avenue and West Third street, and the second one will be held at 9 o'clock at Madison avenue and West Front street near the Babcock building.

Arrangements have been made for a Colgate mass meeting of colored voters to be held at Reform Hall Monday night. There will be addresses by Mr. Warner, Allen Trimble, secretary of the Senate judiciary committee, and J. T. Cheshire, a prominent colored speaker of Newark. Rev. E. W. Roberts will preside.

"CHRISTIAN GUMPTION."

The mid-week services at the First Baptist church, always large and interesting, show signs of special interest just now. The pastor, Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, is planning a series of somewhat unusual topics which it is believed will prove both attractive and instructive and generally helpful in the Christian life. "Christian Gumpton." There will be other special feature.

THE TEMPERATURE.

The temperature recorded by The State Trust Company today was as follows: 9 a. m., 58 degrees; 11 a. m., 65 degrees; 1 p. m., 70 degrees.

BOROUGH COUPLE FIFTY YEARS WED

Rev. Dr. and J. C. Buchanan Celebrate Happy Event at Home of Son.

RECEPTION IS HELD

Couple Was Married at Cherryville and Have Resided Here Ten Years —Both Enjoy Good Health— Many Congratulatory Messages.

Rev. Dr. and Mrs. J. C. Buchanan, of Duer street, the borough, completed the fiftieth anniversary of their married life yesterday, and in celebration of the event, an informal reception was held in their honor during the day at the residence of their son, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan, with whom they make their home. Throughout the day scores of friends visited the aged couple to wish them many happy returns of the day and each mail brought many congratulatory messages.

Dr. and Mrs. Buchanan were married on September 18, 1866, at Cherryville, the wedding being the culmination of a school day romance. Mrs. Buchanan was the former Miss Hannah Rae, daughter of Alexander Rae, a prominent farmer of that day. The couple have only one child, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan.

Rev. Dr. Buchanan was graduated from Colgate University at Hamilton, N. Y., and his first charge was the Scotch Plains Baptist church, of which he became the pastor in 1867, a year after his marriage. He continued there until 1878 when he assumed the pulpit of the Baptist church at Pemberton. He remained at the latter church until 1906 when he retired. For the last ten years he has resided in the borough. Dr. Buchanan was the pastor of the Scotch Plains church when the present handsome edifice was erected and it was largely due to his planning and efforts that the new building became a reality. He was pastor of the church for four years before the new structure was erected.

During his various pastorates, Mrs. Buchanan was helpful in more ways than one. She took active interest in the various church affairs and was loved by the several congregations.

Last March, Dr. Buchanan celebrated the seventy-fifth anniversary of his natal day and the occasion was celebrated at the time. Although he and his wife are well on in years, both take a lively interest in the affairs of the day, and can discuss present-day topics as well as one half their years. The couple were recipients of many handsome floral bouquets and other gifts in remembrance of the occasion.

FIRE CHIEF DOANE TRUSTEE OF TUBERCULOSIS LEAGUE

At a meeting of the Plainfield branch of the Tuberculosis League held in the rooms of the Charity Organization Society last night Fire Chief T. O. Doane was elected a trustee to fill the vacancy caused by the death of his brother, J. Hervey Doane, some months ago.

The various committee heads made their regular reports at the meeting. The open air school, conducted in conjunction with the department of health, would be reopened, it was reported, on October 2, after being closed through the summer owing to infantile paralysis. The work of the free clinic was reported as progressing very favorably and fifteen cases of tuberculosis were discovered since the first of the present year.

GOING TO CONVENTION.

Chief E. T. Canning, of the North Plainfield township fire department, accompanied by W. E. Pattie, Mayor William D LeR. Anderson and Melvin E. Cleaves, will leave Thursday morning for Atlantic City, where they will attend the State Firemen's convention. The convention will be in session until Monday.

HAMMOND IN BOROUGH.

Assemblyman Ogden H. Hammond, of Somerset county, Republican candidate for the Assembly to succeed himself this fall, visited the borough this morning in the interest of his campaign. He was accompanied by Howard Woolston and Julius Stahl.

MR. KENNEY'S COUNT DIFFERENT.

Chairman David T. Kenney is authority for the statement that there were 136 at the meeting of last night. He counted them, he says. The Press reporter counted but sixty-six. There were fourteen in the hall at the hour set for the opening of the meeting—8:15. When Mr. Kenney finally called it to order a few minutes after 9 p. m. there were 59. This count did not include members of the drum corps who were hired to attend. A reporter for the Elizabeth Journal counted the same as the Press reporter, and a leading Democrat here also with them agreed as to the count.

JEFFERSON CLUB INDORSES TREACY

Members Unanimously Pledge Support to Democratic Candidate.

HE CRITICIZES HUGHES

Says Republicans Are 100% Efficient in Dodging—They Would Precipitate Country Into War—Roosevelt Would Be Real President.

Hugh Treacy, Democratic candidate for the nomination as member of the General Assembly, was present at a rousing meeting of the Jefferson Democratic Club last evening, and notwithstanding the downpour of rain, there was a large attendance of the members and their friends, all of whom were enthusiastic in the reception accorded to the candidate. Mr. Treacy addressed the meeting, after which members of the club voted unanimously to endorse his candidacy and also promised him their full support.

Mr. Treacy said in part:

"If I was called upon to appraise the Republican candidate, Mr. Hughes, I should say that instead of being 100 per cent. efficient, he is rather 100 per cent. in dodging.

"It is impossible to ascertain from any of Mr. Hughes' speeches, what he would, or would not do. He criticises the President for everything that he does, but he either does not know, or

CORDIAL RECEPTION FOR J. S. AMERMAN

Home Rule Candidate for Assembly Addresses Republicans of the Borough.

John S. Ammerman, Republican candidate for Assembly from Somerset county, was greeted by a small gathering of North Plainfielders at a meeting in Debele's Hall, last night. Legislative questions were discussed by the candidate and he pointed out the necessity for improved methods of repairing and constructing roads, a change in the taxing system and the value of the American principle of majority home rule for the municipality. At the conclusion of his address, Mr. Ammerman was warmly applauded and promised the hearty support of all who were present.

Former Assemblyman, William de LaRoche Anderson, of North Plainfield Township, acting as Mr. Ammerman's campaign manager, reported to the meeting that he had through various sources of information throughout the county received full assurance that Mr. Ammerman would be nominated at the primaries to be held next Tuesday. He also urged upon the Republicans present not to neglect their duty in coming to the polls on that day as the only place votes would count would be in the ballot boxes.

He stated that at the recent convention of the League of Municipalities which was held in Newark last week, that there was not one single municipal executive from Canada to New Orleans and from Maine to California that did not favor municipal home rule. He quoted Mayor Behrman, of New Orleans, as saying in his address on "Home Rule" "that the person or interest which fought majority rule fought a fundamental principle and fought a losing fight."

The meeting last evening was presided over by D. N. VanVliet, of the borough.

SAYS GOD PICKED WILSON TO RULE

Attorney General Wescott Believes Ruler Has Saved Nation.

GRAVE CRISIS FACED

Urges Re-election of President as Only Means of Saving Country—Small Crowd at Meeting—Senatorial Race Not Mentioned.

"When Woodrow Wilson was elected Governor of New Jersey and the politician started out to have some fun out of the 'schoolmaster' they didn't know they were fooling with a Divinity," said Attorney-General John W. Wescott, in an address to Democratic voters here last night, "but they were.

"They didn't know that God Almighty put him there," declared the orator. "The same was true when he went to Washington. The big politicians of the country thought he was an amateur and they tried to make a fool of him, but again God was on the side of this Man of Destiny and he drove the lobby out of the Capitol as Christ lashed the money-changers out of the temple." Mr. Wescott offered an eloquent plea that the people of Plainfield join with God in the work of sending Mr. Wilson back for another four years.

Mr. Wescott, who is a candidate for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator, spoke to a crowd of exactly sixty-six men in this, the home town of his opponent, Senator James E. Martine. While the speaker did not even mention his own candidacy and devoted his full time to a defense of the Wilson administration, it was a Wescott meeting, and not a Democratic rally. Senator Martine was not invited. He even suggested that he be permitted to join in the praise of the Wilson administration or to debate with Mr. Wescott the issues between them as rivals for the Senatorial nomination, but his suggestion was not accepted.

Mr. Wescott admitted that he was not a religionist, not even a member of any church, but he said he believed in religion. "I believe that there is a purpose in the universe," he said, "else everything is meaningless. And if there is such a purpose, hasn't it been manifested in history? Six years ago Woodrow Wilson was unknown. He was an unknown modest schoolmaster. His rise has been without parallel in the history of this country, or any country. He was provided by Providence, by God Almighty, to guide this nation through the great crisis.

"The struggle in this campaign is one between selfish, organized wealth on one side," he said, "and the happiness and prosperity of 100,000,000 human beings on the other, with Hughes the candidate of the reactionary influences standing for the condition of things which permits the control of the surplus wealth by a few men and a few institutions and Wilson standing between the return to power of 'predatory wealth' and the happiness of millions.

"This is the crisis of our national life," Mr. Wescott declared. "Put Hughes in office and we'll go backwards fifty, nay perhaps 100 years. It may be that the free American institutions would survive, but they would have a fierce struggle for existence.

Mr. Wescott admitted that he had been warned not to discuss the tariff and the railroad strike, but he defended the Democratic attitude toward both briefly. He found comfort in the Maine election. His opinion was that the result in that State made the election of Woodrow Wilson a moral certainty, and this is how he explained it. The Democrats polled 5,000 or 6,000 more votes than ever before in the history of the State. The Republicans polled only a few more than their high vote in the past, therefore the Democratic vote was a gain, while the Republican was not. In every city the Democratic candidates defeated the Republicans, indicating, he pointed out, that where there was a higher grade of intelligence the Democrats outvoted the Republicans. Republicans won in the rural communities, he said, because there the voters were so ignorant they stuck to the old opinion that potatoes would not sprout except under a high tariff.

The address of Mr. Wescott was an "effective and crushing answer to the campaign arguments of Hughes," admitted the speaker. He said that the United States is today facing a grave danger, because the tendency is away from real democracy. Wealth he defined as anything which man needs and is obliged to have. If every human being in the world had just food enough to nourish his body, just clothing enough to clothe himself and shelter enough to protect himself, there would be a perfect democracy of wealth, but the instant there is a surplus over actual necessities it becomes capital. When a surplus is acquired, he said, men begin to play games of deception and to take advantage of their fellow man to acquire more.

"In 1912 the wealth of the United States was $187,000,000,000, while that of England was only $87,000,000,000, of Germany only $80,000,000,000, and of France only $50,000,000,000. In the past four years the

COMPLETES 36 YEARS OF SERVICE AS AGENT

Peter Kohler Has Had Long and Successful Career With New Jersey Central.

Peter Kohler, general agent for the New Jersey Central at its Plainfield office at North avenue and Richmond street, yesterday completed his thirty-sixth year of service with the railroad company, the last nine years of which have been spent in this city. Before coming to Plainfield Mr. Kohler was stationed at Bound Brook. Millions of dollars of property are handled under his direct management and thousands of dollars in revenue pass to the treasury of the company for the paying of dividends and wages.

As agent, Mr. Kohler, is responsible for the five ticket offices located at the two stations in Plainfield, two at North avenue, one at Grant avenue, one at Netherwood and one at Clinton avenue. He can be found frequently at all of these points looking after the duties of his office personally. One of the reasons for the splendid management of the N. J. Central advanced by the popular agent and a powerful asset to his many duties is the fact that he has at his command a force of efficient and willing assistants.

ASKS THAT U. S. COURT DISSOLVE COAL TRUST

Washington, Sept. 19.—Contending that through the medium of the Reading Company, an alleged holding company, having holdings of more than $500,000,000, exercises a monopoly on coal, the Department of Justice today filed a brief in the United States Supreme Court asking for the dissolution of the monopoly into competitive units.

STILL HAVE HOPE THAT BREMEN WILL REACH HERE

New London, Sept. 19.—Several German officials of the Eastern Forwarding Company are out again today on the tug T. A. Scott, Jr., to meet the undersea merchantman, the Bremen.

After an all-night unsuccessful search for the submarine, the tug returned to her pier and then steamed out to sea again with the foreign official.

Members of the Eastern Company say that they expect the Bremen to dock here within the next few days. They declare that the Bremen is beating the Deutschland's record.

SIDNEY WILLIAMS, AGED 9, STRUCK BY AN AUTO

Sidney Williams, a 9-year-old boy, of East Third street, was cut and bruised about the head and shoulders at Third and Richmond streets shortly before noon today when he was struck by an automobile owned and driven by Nathan McGatharn, of Lebanon. Williams was taken to the hospital, and when it was found he was not serriously injured, was returned to his home.

McCatharn was not blamed for the accident as he did not have time to stop when the boy stepped from behind an automobile standing at the curb directly in front of his machine, although he was going slow at the time.

FRANK MARTIN FOUND GUILTY OF CAUSING AUTO ACCIDENT

Frank Martin, of 183 Somerset street, was fined $10 by Judge DeMeza in the city court this morning after a two-hour hearing, Martin being found guilty of negligence when he ran into an automobile driven by Frank Weeks, of 827 West Seventh street, at Central avenue and Seventh street Sunday night. John Owens, attorney for Martin, filed notice of an appeal of the case as soon as Judge DeMeza had rendered his decision.

Weeks, with his wife, daughter and a friend, was going west on Seventh street shortly after dark when Martin started to cross that street on Central avenue at a high rate of speed. It was the contention of the court that if Martin had been going at a slow rate of speed he could have stopped or swerved in time to avoid a collision. A dozen witnesses were called to testify and the evidence seemed to be against Martin, who, however, claimed he was going at approximately twelve miles an hour.

PATRIOTIC SERVICE.

Following a prayer service of one half hour tomorrow evening at Bethel chapel, there will be a patriotic service at 8:30 u. m., at which time Douglas Camp, No. 11, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, of this city, will be presented with a flag. There will be a silver offering at the door. All are most cordially invited to attend.

BULGARS FORCED OUT OF FLORINA

Franco-Russian Army Sweeps Forward on Western Front.

SERBS ALSO ADVANCE

French Forces Drive Way to Within 200 Yards of Combles—British Enabled to Strengthen Their Part of Steel Ring.

London, Sept. 19.—Sweeping westward across the Serbian frontier toward Monastir, the Franco-Russian army on the left wing of the Balkan front has won the town of Florina and advanced north of that point.

The Serbs also continued their advance and in a single charge captured the strongly defended Bulgarian first line, along the crest of Kalmacan, southeast of Monastir. Further to the west Serbian infantry crossed the Broda River and flung the enemy back.

The road to Monastir is now open. The further the Allied troops drive north the weaker the Bulgarian resistance grows.

Mackensen Pushes On.

Meanwhile, in the Dobrudja the Bulgar-German forces continue to penetrate deeper into Rumanian territory. The Russian and Rumanian armies have retreated to a line running from the Danube at Rasova through Copadinu to the Black Sea at Tuzla. Here they evidently intend to make a stand to protect Constanza and the railway running west from that port to Bucharest. Russian troops from the north have already reinforced this line.

Draw Nearer to Combles.

Paris, Sept. 19.—Advancing in furious attacks, the French forces on the Somme are today within 200 yards of Combles, according to the latest announcement of the War Office.

South of the Somme the latest fighting has resulted in the complete capture of Deniecourt, with its defenders, and is driving the German lines well to the south of that village. French gains are reported all along the line on the northern flank of the German position around the important town of Chaulnes.

The British in the meantime have not been idle. They have taken an extremely strong work between Ginchy and the Boleaux Wood. This fort, known as the "quadrilateral," blocked the road to a further advances north of Combles, and prevented the envelopment of the town by cutting it off in the east.

By this success the British were enabled to move forward for a thousand yards along a front of more than a mile. Combles, far outflanked from both the north and south, now is threatened with complete encirclement.

PROGRESSIVES INDORSE COLGATE FOR GOVERNOR

At a meeting of the Progressive County Committee held in Elizabeth, September 7, it was unanimously resolved to urge all Progressives to vote in Republican primary on the 26th for the purpose of aiding the following candidates to get the nomination for the office to which they aspire:

For governor, Col. Austen Colgate, of Essex county; for United States Senate, Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerset county; for Congress, Charles N. Fowler, of Union county; for county clerk, Col. W. B. Martin, of Elizabeth.

An appeal to the Progressive voters of the county urging support of these candidates is being mailed out by a committee composed of the following: Harwood Fish, Edgar A. Knapp, Theo. F. Van Dyke, John S. Dahl, Edward A. Leach.

The Progressive dinner will be held in Elizabeth Thursday. H. W. Herrmann, of Plainfield, is to be one of the speakers.

DEMOCRATIC MEETING.

A meeting of the Plainfield Democratic Club will be held tonight at 8 o'clock in the club rooms in the Depew building at North and Park avenues. A general discussion of the fall campaign will be held, and it is expected that the local Democratic candidates will make addresses.

PREPARATORY SERVICE.

The first fall mid-week service at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will be held tomorrow night, which will also be preparatory for the communion service on Sunday next. A large attendance of the congregation is hoped for tomorrow night.

FIRST FALL MEETING.

The executive committee of the West End Civic Association will meet at the residence of W. J. Boyd on West Sixth street, Friday evening, September 22. All members are requested to be present.

$2 FOR FIGHTING.

Lena Kline and Lena Lurib, two Hebrew women of the West End, were fined $2 in city court by Judge DeMeza today for fighting on the street yesterday. They both paid.

DEFENDANT RELEASED, COMPLAINANT FINED

Augustus Roderigue in Pressing Action Against Employe, Gets Into Trouble.

Although Augustus Roderique, a resident of the Willow Grove section of the township, appeared before Recorder Philip Jahn last night, to substantiate his charge of assault and battery against Lee Young, until yesterday an employe on his farm, he had the pleasure instead of seeing the case dismissed and fined $10 himself for contempt of court.

The affair grew out of the discharge yesterday morning of Young. Saying that he could not work until he had had some breakfast, Young was told that he was discharged. He went to Fanwood to get an expressman to cart his trunk to the station. When Young got back to the house again he asked an Italian working on the place to help him downstairs with the trunks, because Peter Ritter, the taximan, was unable to do so, but Roderique refused to let the man help him. In trying to get the trunks out of the house alone Young broke the stairs and when Roderique saw the damage that was done he started to thrash Young. Because he got the beating himself he ran into the house and returned with a revolver, but it was taken away from him by Ritter before he could use it. Ritter drove Young, his wife and baby to Westfield, but Roderique had telephoned ahead and had them arrested at the station.

In court last night the testimony of Young and Ritter put a different aspect on the affair and the Recorder dismissed the charge. When Roderique, however, started to tell what he thought of the court in general and the recorder in particular, he got two separate fines of $5 each for contempt of court and came near getting locked up in the bargain, his aged mother being the one that saved him. After saying that he would appeal the fines to the "highest court if necessary," Roderique said he was going to make a charge of larceny against Young, but he would not take it into a Scotch Plains court.

Roderique has been in the Fanwood, Scotch Plains and Westfield courts on a number of occasions to make charges against employes.

BOROUGH COUNCIL DISCUSSES SEWERS

Report Shows That Seven Miles of Pipe Have Been Found All Right.

At the adjourned session of the Mayor and Common Council last night, Borough Engineer L. T. Churchill informed the governing body that seven of the fourteen miles of sewer pipe had been inspected thus far and had been found to be all right. The question of completing the Sanford avenue line was discussed at length, and it was decided to hold this in abeyance until the rest of the system had been inspected. The reason for this is that the Council wants to have an idea as to how much of the sewerage funds on hand will have to be expended in rectifying construction mistakes for which the borough may be responsible.

It was decided that Mr. McClintock, representative of the Fuller firm, the engineers in charge of the sewer work for the borough, be notified that before he gives the contractor authority to proceed with extra work, that a requisition be filed with the Council for its consideration.

A petition was received from Louis Boudois asking for permission to erect a frame barn in back of his home on North avenue. It was decided that this petition be denied unless the specification be changed so as to provide for corrugated iron roof and sides.

A communication was received from the Public Utilities Commission calling the attention of the Council to a hearing October 3 in which the commission propose to take up the matter of standardizing all meter regulation of Public Service Water companies. This letter will be turned over to President Cockburn, of the Board of Trade.

Charles Lentz, the contractor in charge of repairing North avenue, was present and asked the Council if it would be all right if he used a horse roller in repairing the south side of North avenue instead of the ten-ton steam roller. The borough, however, refused to accept responsibility, the contractor being informed that he must proceed with the work of placing that portion of North avenue back in shape according to contract.

Arthur Shaw, of North avenue, has taken a position at Saurer's.

BICYCLE RIDER FINED $1 AND APOLOGIZES TO COURT

Everett Cleveland Stevenson, 18 years old, of Bound Brook, was fined $1 when arraigned before Recorder Campbell yesterday for riding his bicycle on the sidewalk. He was arrested by Marshal Harry Shugars on North avenue, near Madison avenue. The lad didn't have the dollar, so his wheel was held for security. When he returned last evening with the dollar for the wheel he was obliged to apologize to the Recorder for what he said as he was leaving the court after his hearing. He had questioned the statement of the Recorder when the latter took occasion to inform the boy that he had once taught school in Bound Brook and had also asked who was going to get the dollar that he had been fined.

BIRTHDAY PARTY GIVEN TO MRS. ERNEST LINNER

A birthday party was tendered Mrs. Ernest Linner at her home, Riseman Heights inn, Friday evening. Guests were present from Newark, Elizabeth, Plainfield, Dunellen and Bound Brook. The evening was pleasantly spent, the program of entertainment including singing, dancing and games. Refreshments were served, after which the guests departed, wishing Mrs. Linner many more happy birthdays.

Miss Stella Reynolds, of Grove street, is spending several days in Bayonne, the guest of her uncle, Captain Edward Russell.

James O'Keefe, of Prospect avenue, has purchased a six-room house with all improvements, located on Dunellen avenue, near Schwartz place, from Samuel Schwartz.

PURCHASES PROPERTY.

The National Land and Building Company has sold its new six-room house on Front street, near Sanford avenue, to the manager of the Bound Brook store of the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company.

Edward Maurer, of Madison avenue, has returned after commuting to the city for the summer from Lake Hopatcong.

Miss Jeanette Neighbour, of Mountainview Terrace, is spending the week at Scranton.

Mrs. John Herbert, of First street, leaves Saturday for Lake George, where she will spend a month.

RETURNS FROM POCONOS.

Mrs. Paul Carpenter, of Prospect avenue, who has been sojourning in the Pocono Mountains for the benefit of her health for some weeks past, is expected home next week.

Miss Elmira Ratti, daughter of Paul Ratti, who submitted to three serious operations, one of which was for appendicitis, in the Somerset Hospital the latter part of last week, continues to improve.

South Plainfield.

Officer William Everhardt successfully raided a big crap game which was in progress just a few yards over the Union county line on Saturday. The local authorities "got wind" that large games were being held there every Saturday and Sunday. When the game was raided there were eight young men from Plainfield playing and they were taken before Judge Kaine, of this place, for a hearing. Judge Kaine was very lenient with the young men as this was their first offense and imposed only a small fine. He then gave them a severe reprimand and impressed on them that all future "crap shooters" that were caught would receive the full extent of the law.

Andrew L. McDonough, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter McDonough, of Plainfield, but formerly of this place, left yesterday for Notre Dame University at South Bend, Indiana. He expects to finish his course at that institution this term.

Mrs. Thomas Bohl and daughter, Loretta, formerly of this place, but now of Newark, are spending a few days with the former's daughter, Mrs. Albert Randolph.

Mrs. Charles Ruth, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., is spending a few days with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. William Everhardt have been entertaining Mrs. Everhardt's sister, Miss Esther Van Reed, of Elizabeth, for a few days.

Watchung.

J. LeRoy Hermann and Frank R. Fetherston left yesterday for Pittsburgh, Pa., where they are enrolled as students of Carnegie Institute of Technology. Mr. Hermann is a member of the graduating class of 1913, of the North Plainfield High School. Mr. Fetherston entered Carnegie Institute last year.

Kenneth Rendall, of New Brunswick, spent the week-end at "Camp Rendall."

Miss Marie Texier entertained friends from New York over the week-end.

Miss Martha Perry, of New York, is spending several days as the guest of Miss Edna Fawcett.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Perrett, Sr., have been visiting friends in Somerville.

All the teachers in the local schools reported for duty, and during the present week a conference is being held pointly between the teachers of the Westfield and local schools. A number of valuable suggestions have been made at the daily sessions held for the past ten days and they will probably be taken advantage of when the fall term begins on October 2.

Miss Rose Thomae, of North avenue, has returned from spending several weeks with the Misses Thompson, who have been stopping at Lake Hopatcong.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Beeken of North avnue, are entertaining the former's sister and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Tiblots, of Los Angeles, Cal.

A. GOODENOUGH RECOVERING FROM RECENT OPERATION

Arthur Goodenough, of West Front street, who was recently granted his release from Troop D on the Texas border, is in Muhlenberg Hospital, where he is recovering from an operation for appendicitis. Mr. Goodenough was ill when he came home, but it was hoped an operation would not be necessary until last week, when he became worse and the operation had to be performed on Friday.

MT. SAINT MARY ACADEMY WILL OPEN TOMORROW

Announcement was made at Mt. St. Mary's Academy today that, following the approval of the State Board of Health, the school will open for the fall term today, and the college will open on September 27.

There will be but few changes in the teaching staff of either the academic or college departments for the coming year, but a number of improvements have been made in both the courses of study and buildings.

MISS SALLY CARY DIES AFTER A LONG ILLNESS

The funeral of Miss Sally Cary will take place tomorrow afternoon at two o'clock in the Calvary Baptist church. The interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

Miss Carey died at her home on Plainfield avenue Sunday afternoon, following a lingering illness. She was a native of Virgina, but had made her home in Plainfield for a great many years. Up to the time of her illness she was a faithful member and worker of Calvary Baptist church. She is survived by the following sisters: Misses Sophia and Mary Cary, of Plainfield avenue; Mrs. James Turner, of Esmont, Va.; Mrs. Jane Jones, of Pittsburgh, Pa.; Mrs. Isaac Johnson, of East Orange; Mrs. William Jones, of Philadelphia, and one brother, James Cary, of Westfield.

GOD PICKED WILSON TO RULE

wealth of this country has increased, he said, $38,000,000, an unprecedented amount. This gigantic increase has a tremendous significance," he said, "as wealth is the cause of war, and therefore the United States is rapidly acquiring a position which will arouse the envy and the opposition of a powerful combination of other nations. The greatest menace lies in the concentration of this surplus wealth in the hands of a few men who prevent an equitable distribution. These few men and institutions are represented by Hughes," he charged, "and to elect the Republican nominee would be to surrender the country to their influences.

"If anyone in America knows the meaning of history, if there is any man in America who has read it correctly and who is able to look into the future, it is Woodrow Wilson," continued Mr. Wescott. He pointed out that Mr. Wilson had broken the power of organized wealth through the bank act, which gives the small business man and the laborer a triumph over capital. "The dinner pail is overrunning," he said, "although Hughes has called the present state of prosperity a fool's paradise."

Among the achievements of the Wilson administration that he called attention to was the bill calling for a powerful army and navy. "This country must have the moral power of organized force," he said, "if it is to preserve the wealth that is being accumulated. With such power its opinion will soon control the world."

In answer to the declaration that the present prosperity of this country is due to the European war, Mr. Wescott admitted that the munition trade did stimulate business in America, but said that this was only a little more than two per cent. of the commerce of this country. "As the belligerent nations suspended wholly or partially, trade with other countries there were offered opportunities for America to extend its commerce," he said, "but even then nothing could have been done without the legislation which sent money to every corner of the land where it was legitimately needed and gave credit to every man who needed it. As an indication of the prosperity of the country he declared that labor last year received $3,447,000,000 more than ever before.

"The scare that Europe would deluge this country with cheap products after the war was foolish," he said. "The belligerent countries there are fighting for a very existence and have no time to be storing away a surplus of goods for trade after the war. They will need themselves all they can produce, and it will be years before any one of them will have an ounce of stuff to turn loose in America." Mr. Wescott was willing to bet that Europe would be sending to this country for labor long before it ever competed with American manufacturers. "The death or disabling of 15,000,000 men there will cause a scarcity of labor," he said, "which will result in higher wages and an increase in the cost of production. This will mean high-priced goods instead of cheap goods, and anyway none of the countries will be able to produce enough for its own use."

Most of the criticism of Mr. Wilson was merely for campaign purposes, Mr. Wescott believed, and the men who are fighting him will not put their cards on the table as honest people ought to. He said that abuse was the most damnable stuff this side of perdition, and that when Roosevelt accused the Democrats of "moral treason" he was unmanly. He objected to being called an unpatriotic American. "I'll shed my blood for the grand old flag just as quickly as Mr. Hughes will," declared the speaker.

He argued that Mr. Wilson should be sent back to the White House to complete his scheme of progressive legislation and to preserve prosperity. "If this is done Wall street and organized wealth will no longer say how much money a community shall have or how much credit this or that man shall have," he insisted.

An enormous amount of money is going to be turned loose soon to bring about the defeat of Wilson, according to Mr. Wescott. He said he had heard this and knew it to be true. "But Wilson will be elected," he concluded, "because there are enough sensible people in the country to appreciate him."

Mr. Wescott spoke in Columbus Hall. The meeting was scheduled for 8:15, but was not called to order until after 9. A drum corps paraded the streets in an effort to attract the voters, but without success. David T. Kenney acted as chairman of the meeting and introduced the speaker.

A. E. Kenney announced that through W. L. Saunders President Wilson had extended an invitation to the business men of Plainfield to be present at Shadow Lawn on Saturday afternoon when he would make an address to the business men of New Jersey.

INDORSES TREACY

has not the temerity to state what he would do under like circumstances. Criticism is very frequently the weapon of a man with a poor case, and reminds me of the young lawyer, who went to a retired jurist for some advice on the method of trying cases. The judge said, "Young man, when you have the law on your side of the case, address yourself to the court. When you have only the facts, address yourself only to the jury. But when you have neither the law or the facts, abuse the other side.'

"It is very evident that Mr. Hughes has no case in this campaign, and consequently resorts to the abuse of this administration.

"Mr. Hughes is going about the country talking about the timidity and vacillation of Mr. Wilson, but no other candidate for President was ever so timid and vacillating, as Mr. Hughes himself.

"There is not a voter, who does not know where Mr. Wilson stands on every issue of the campaign, but there is not a voter who can tell you where Mr. Hughes stands on any issue.

"In my judgment no man has a moral right to aspire to the office of President in times like these who is afraid to say frankly and openly where he stands on every issue of the campaign; to dodge or evade is unjust to his own party, as well as seeking the office by false pretences.

"A candidate who fears to have policies of his own, practically admits that the people would not elect him if they knew his true political opinions.

"He is opposed to everything that Congress or the Administration may do. He has no constructive policies of his own to offer, except that an experiment be made with him in the White House on a purely negative basis.

"On the part of Mr. Wilson there is no pussy-footing or hedging; he is willing to stand or fall on his record of the last three and a half years and his position on the hyphen or any other question affecting the interest of this country cannot be misunderstood by fair-minded people. He speaks out and tells you exactly where he stands on any question, affecting the interest of this republic and its people. He is first of all 100 per cent. pure American, while the other man is purely and simply 100 per cent. candidate, without anything to back it up, except froth, and this country in the crisis, through which it is passing, needs something more substantial than just mere wind.

"It requires a man who knows what to do, how to do it, and one who will see that it will be done, and as we already have that kind of a man in charge of the affairs of this country, we should follow Lincoln's dictum and not swap horses in the middle of a stream.

"It is my opinion that with Hughes nominally President, and Roosevelt actually so, and dictating the policies of this country with reference to its international relations, the country would be precipitated into war and the day of sane diplomacy in the conduct of the affairs of this country in the erratic hands of these two men would be resolved into a turbulent stream of bloodshed.

"The people of this country while seeking a desirable peace, above all things, are still alive to the fact that unbearable insult from outside will be resented to the hilt with all the force and energy that every patriot of this country possesses.

"Neither the people of this country or any other country wants war with all that it involves, and the man or men able to vindicate the country's honor without it is the man the people want, and such a man they have in Woodrow Wilson. In my humble opinion, the greatest President this country has had in its history."

G. O. P. CANDIDATES ARE GIVEN OVATION

Newark, Sept. 19.—Former Governer Franklin Murphy, candidate for the Republican nomination of United States Senator, and former State Senator Austen Colgate, candidate for the nomination for Governor on the Republican ticket, received notable ovations last night at a mass meeting held under the auspices of the Republican County Committee at the formal opening of the primary campaign in Essex county.

Colonel Colgate was introduced as "the man with the same ability to lead the Republicans to victory in the State as Hughes has to lead the Republicans to victory in the Nation."

"As a candidate for the nomination for Governor," said the Colonel, "I pride myself not so much upon the numerous laws which I have been instrumental in passing during my eight years as Assemblyman and Senator, as upon preventing the enactment of measures that would be detrimental to the interests of the State and its citizens.

"New Jersey's possibilities for industrial and commercial development are greater than those of any other State in the Union, because it is situated as no other State is situated. I have traveled it from end to end and have been filled with the desire to see its development measure up to its opportunities. If elected Governor, I shall try to arouse public sentiment to such an extent that the Legislature will be compelled to enact laws which will make such developments possible."

Colonel Colgate declared that, as an aspirant for the high office of Governor, he was not actuated by a desire for glory but by a sincere ambition to be of real service to the State and its citizens.

THE FORUM

Editor Daily Press:

Edward Bauer, of Elizabeth, who is conducting an agressive campaign for the county clerkship nomination on the Republican ticket, requests the publication of the following letter received by him from C. Addison Swift.

Edward Bauer, Esq.,
33 Princton road, City.

My dear Bauer:

Replying to your letter of the 21st inst., asking for my active assistance in your candidacy for county clerk, I beg to say that, having signed your petition, I naturally want to see you nominated, and will do all I can to promote your nomination, and I trust election.

I signed your petition for the reason that, having known you from boyhood, and having had an opportunity to judge your character and your qualifications for the office, I believed, and therefore have no hesitancy in saying, that I think you have had the experience and training which better fits you for the performance of the duties of county clerk than either of your competitors.

As former Judge of the distric court of Elizabeth, of which court you were clerk, before and after I presided, I appreciated your clerical ability and efficient management of the details of the office, and your grasp of legal forms and procedure. The experience you there gained, fitted you for the duties of county clerk, which are quite of a similar character with respect to the county courts; and your efficient work in the discharge of your duties as deputy register of deeds, has met with the universal approval and appreciation of the members of the County Bar, most of whom, by signing your petition, endorsed you for the office of county clerk.

I feel sure that if nominated and elected, you will keep good your promise to so administer the duties of the office, as to bring credit to the public and yourself, and having no conflicting business interests, you will give the office your whole time and attention.

Wishing you success, I am,
C. ADDISON SWIFT.

Y. W. C. A.

If enough interest is shown to warrant conducting such a course during the winter, the association will again organize a public speaking class for members who wish to undertake this study. Members of the association who would be willing to enter are requested to call at the office of the secretary and give in their names.

Tennis will be played on Thursday and Friday afternoons of this week.

COLGATE IS FRIEND OF THE MOTORIST

He Has Done Much to Make Automobile Driving Safe for All.

Elizabeth, Sept. 19.—Union county presents an interesting phase of the contest between Senator Walter E. Edge, of Atlantic, and Colonel Austen Colgate, of Essex, for the Republican nomination for Governor.

A plea for Edge's candidacy was given in a statement issued today bythe Union county Republican legislators, past and present, who have served with Messrs. Edge and Colgate in the Legislature. The statement follows:

"In view of our service in the Legislature with Senator Walter E. Edge, and the many inquiries we have received as to how we regard his candidacy, we beg to say that we favor his nomination, and believe the State will act wisely to avail itself of the opportunity to make him governor.

"Senator Edge has exceptional ability—with initiative, firmness, and a natural aptitude shown throughout his seven years of service in Assembly and Senate, for putting things on a business basis and treating them in a business way—qualifications needed at Trenton.

"This is not a criticism of other candidates, but a preference for Edge, in which we find ourselves unanimous as the strongest man for the place."

GARFIELD DIED 35 YEARS AGO TODAY

Washington, D. C., Sept. 19.—Shortly before midnight tonight will mark the 35th anniversary of the death of James A. Garfield, the twentieth President of the United States and the second President to die at the hands of an assassin. Many of the older residents of Washington recall how Charles Guiteau, a disappointed office-seeker, shot Mr. Garfield in the railroad station here, on July 2, 1881, as the President was about to leave the city to meet friends at Williams College. With the President at the time he was shot was James G. Blaine. For eighty days the wounded President hovered between life and death, peacefully passing away late on the evening of Sept. 19 at Long Branch, N. J., where he had been taken shortly before Vice-President Chester A. Arthur succeeded Mr. Garfield as President, taking the oath of office just thirty-five years ago today.

PROBASCO BIBLE CLASS ENJOY FALL OUTING

The Probasco Bible class of the First Baptist church enjoyed its annual fall outing on Saturday afternoon at the home of John P. Terry near South Plainfield. The trip was made to and from the farm in large auto trucks. The afternoon was spent playing all sorts of games, including a sack race, tug-of-war between the married and single men and women, while a clay bird shoot among the men was a feature. This was won by Fred Dixon, who made a high score. Ernest Conover was second, and J. Henry Crane third. Ran Randolph won the sack race easily. After the games all enjoyed a "spread" which included an abundance of watermelon.

ARBOR DAY IN SPAIN.

A Custom That Was Copied From Our Tree Planting Festival.

You are prone to think, since America is the youngest of all the nations, that all our customs are derived from some older people, in whose national life a part of our population had its source. Did you ever hear of an old European country adopting a custom that originated in the United States? When you read of the Fiesta del Arbol in Madrid you are more than likely to assume that it was the tree planting day that gave a suggestion for our annual Arbor day.

Would you be astonished to learn that the Arbol fiesta was patterned directly after our American festival or holiday, when trees are planted by the children of the public schools? That it was copied after our custom is not difficult to establish, for the first festival of this kind was held in Madrid in 1896, having been inaugurated by the young king and his mother. At that time we had been celebrating Arbor day in the United States for more than twelve years.

In that country the event has come to be of real significance, since it is national, whereas in our country it is under the direction of the individual states. Every year the school children are not only commanded to plant young trees, but they are taken to inspect the planting of previous years and are impressed by their teachers with the importance of conserving the forests of their native land. In his first Fiesta del Arbol address King Alfonso announced that the idea was borrowed from the United States, and it was regarded as of so much value that not even the rancor of the Spanish-American war sufficed to interfere with its observation.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.

Telephones For the Rookies

Abundant as has been the comment, description and picturesque narrative which has centered around the Plattsburg Training Camp since its establishment, one phase of it which in a quiet way is making possible the participation of many men of affairs, has until recently not been spoken of. Now, however, The Telephone Review, N. Y., has described this phase of the camp accommodations, and in an article on the telephone facilities placed at the disposal of the business men who leave their affairs for a period of weeks in order to undergo the Plattsburg training, it is made apparent that the "Rookies" are never out of touch with their homes and business interests.

A few days before the camp opened, says The Telephone Review, all quarters were connected by a private branch exchange telephone system, consisting of a 50 line portable field switchboard and 45 extension stations, of the field type telephone. This system is connected to the central office of the telephone company by five trunk lines.

Regular army men operate the board and with their knowledge of army work excellent service is given. As many as 1,800 calls have been handled in one day, many of them to long distance points.

A Unique Problem.

The telephone system at the training camp is under the direct supervision of C. H. Dierksmier, Assistant Electrical Engineer of the Signal Service, U. S. A. Mr. Dierksmier's regular work consists of installing signal service systems at the different army posts throughout the country, but it is safe to assume that the Plattsburg camp presents a somewhat different problem. Seven thousand men—business men with multitudinous outside interests, not professional soldiers—finished the August camp and 2,500 followed them. The success of the telephone work is undisputed.

The telephone company has, aside from the private branch exchange connections, six sound proof booths, located in a large tent, with an attendant present, to look after the wants of the "Rookies." This tent is well patronized during the afternoons and evenings, when the "Rookies" call their homes and places of business.

The first camp of 1,400 men finished their work on July 7. They were rather unfortunate in having a great deal of rain during their stay, but this did not seem to dampen the enthusiasm. In fact a number re-enlisted for the July and August camps. The accessibility of the camp from the standpoint of communication made it possible for many business men who could not otherwise have remained away so long, to stay over for a second, and in some cases a third encampment. Their homes and offices were always within speaking distance, even when the regiments were off on their week-long hike into the country.

Telephone at Every Camp on Hike.

The telephone company sends a man ahead of the hikers to have service in readiness for the "Rookies" when they reach camp. It is a novel sight to see men seated on the ground talking over the telephone with their homes, offices, etc.

The fact that the telephone company is able to connect the camps at a different point each day without delay has been from the first a feature of marked importance in the success of the "Plattsburg Idea."

PORTABLE SWITCHBOARD IN OPERATION AT THE PLATTSBURG TRAINING CAMP.

The Virtue of Necessity

After waiting for three months for permission to go to the various fighting lines on the Russian fronts, Montgomery Schuyler, a correspondent of the New York Times, at last obtained the coveted document and visited extensively in the heart of the fighting districts, viewing at close range the life of the men and the operation of the aviation corps, the anti-aircraft guns, the heavy artillery—and the omnipresent telephone.

In his estimation, "the greatest single point of efficiency is undoubtedly the splendid system of telephones." This, after an unusually intimate acquaintance with conditions in the various parts of the Russian "positions," as the fighting front of the Russian army is called. He goes on to say that this effective system is found everywhere on the entire front, connecting every point with every other point and making every eye have instant communication with every other eye, and with the central brain in charge of the district or unit. These telephones are found everywhere, each trench has its own means of communication with others, and each officer has an instrument at his pillow ready for instant use in case of a night attack. The little compact portable cases are in use every minute of the day and night, giving timely notice of anything of interest or which might be of interest when brought to the attention of the 'man higher up.'"

Mr. Schuyler's description of the telephone as it is used thus on the Russian front is of intense interest to telephone people in particular, because it gives such vivid first hand witness to the vital part our American telephone is playing in the great war. ut the story carries the stamp of a greater truth than that. It is universal. It will bear translation into terms of peace.

It is the fate of humankind that they can distill the fullest value of their resources only under stress of greatest pressure. Under the gruelling strain of the war the nations of Europe are finding an efficiency and power in the constant use of the telephone which it was not theirs even to suspect before the conflict. Necessity has revealed powers that will not be surrendered when swords are laid down—powers of telephone service as truly essential to the well being and growth of a nation as those so-called more fundamental ones which are already seen to be growing out of the war.

For us in America, whose knowledge of telephone possibilities has been always much farther advanced than that of Europe, there is less to be revealed of what the telephone can do than there was for Europe, but even in America the depth of telephone possibilities has yet to be sounded. The truths about what the telephone can be made to do that are being wrung from the bitter experience of Europe may do much for an ever-observant and ever-active America, keeping her still in the van of telephone progress.—The Telephone Review, N. Y.

MAORI EMPEROR RUA IS CURBED

Former New Zealand Slave Seized For Moonshining.

PRETENDED HE WAS PROPHET

Had Huge Following Among Wild Men. Ruled For Ten Years Over Most Ignorant of His Race—Caught After Battle With Police—Trial Second Longest In British Jurisprudence.

Rua, Maori "prophet," polygamist and "moonshiner," sometimes called the "Maori emperor"—although unjustifiably, it appears—has just been convicted by a jury at Auckland, New Zealand, upon certain counts after a trial of extraordinary length. Rua, his pretensions to divine powers, his temple and stronghold at Maungapohatu, in the wild and almost inaccessible "King country" in northern New Zealand; his fight with policemen several months ago, in which several men were killed or wounded; his previous defiance of authority—all this constitutes one of the most interesting chapters in the history of New Zealand.

Proclaimed Himself Messiah.

Rua first attracted attention about ten years ago. He set himself up as a sort of Messiah in the Urewera district, which is near the bay of Plenty, on the North island of the Dominion. This region, sometimes called the "King country," from old Maori usage, is a sort of government reservation. It is inhabited by the most primitive of the aboriginals of New Zealand. Incidentally it adjoins the famous geysers and hot lake resort of the Dominion—Rotorua—which is quite the equal of the Yellowstone park. The Urewera district is very rugged, covered with forests and thick undergrowth and is well nigh trackless.

Aided by Cunning and Glibness.

Rua was slave born, but he broke Maori tradition by assuming the prerogatives of a chief, and in addition he mixed with native superstition a smattering of Christian belief. He was glib and cunning, and before long he had a strong hold upon the minds of the untutored members of his race whom a kindly government permitted to live considerably remote from the more enlightened Maoris in order that they might be protected from the evils of civilization.

At Maungapohatu, a native hamlet in the center of the "King country," he posed as a savior, and he was attended by a bodyguard. Here, although by birth a slave and therefore entitled to but one wife, he took unto himself spouses variously estimated at from nine to fourteen, and he built, or rather had built, a circular temple of considerable ingenuity of design and construction, for the Maoris are good architects. In a cupola of this structure he professed to communicate with the Almighty, and below him customarily sat a dozen Maoris, called after the twelve apostles.

Moonshining His Downfall.

It was "sly grog" selling, or "moonshining," which got the "prophet" into trouble. To make liquor on one's premises without permission and then to sell it to natives is against the law, and when Rua was convicted of having done this he had to serve a jail sentence. Several indictments upon the same score were hanging over his head when he was released and returned to Maunghapohatu, but upon his being summoned to Auckland to answer to them he defied the authorities.

Finally a strong force of police was sent to Maunghapohatu. Rua and his henchmen put up a desperate fight. Two Maoris—one of them one of Rua's numerous progeny—were killed, and a number were wounded in the rifle fire, and four policemen were wounded. Rua, after a resistance with teeth, fists and feet, was captured.

Rua's trial occupied forty-seven days, there being eighty-seven witnesses, many of whom were Maoris. Justice Chapman, who conducted it, remarked in summing up that it had been the longest trial in Australasia and possibly the longest in British jurisprudence next after the famous Tichborne case. Rua was convicted of resisting the police, but was acquitted of having used seditious language. On two other counts the jury disagreed.

TO BE GOOD, LOOK AT BLUE.

Every Color Has Effect Upon Human Beings, Says Rev. Grumbine.

If your little girl tells a "fib" or does naughty things buy her a pale blue pinafore. If your small boy disobeys and has to be taken out to the wood shed by his fond papa regularly have his bedroom papered a sky blue. If you want to do some hard mental concentration, hang a yellow curtain across the window. This is the advice of Rev. J. F. Grumbine of the Psycho-Science church at Cleveland, O.

"Clear red makes folks affectionate, and dark blue makes them emotional," Dr. Grumbine said. "White makes folks feel spiritual and pure. Every color has its effect on the human mind.

"Blue is the color that will help the child go the right road."

A Want Ad Is Often the First Link in a Chain of Consequences

It initiates something of far-reaching importance to you. You meet someone with whom you will do business for years—or you buy or sell property that changes the currents of your daily affairs. Many a want ad is of but transient importance of course. But others influence your life for years and years.

TROOP D NOTES

Troopers Day and Schultze were assigned to the task of piling up a load of wood yesterday morning, but spent so much time arguing over who was going to be boss that Top Sergean Roy Cox was compelled to furnish several assistants so that the work might be completed before sundown.

Reggi Ralli is the camp postman. That is, he is so punctual seeking that daily letter of his from back home somewhere that the rest of the troop always know the mail is in when it sees Reggie piking down the street in double quick time. He gives the signal but hasn't been trained to deliver any letters but his own.

Barnum and Bailey's circus is billed here for the fourth of October. Trooper Schultze is rehearsing at the expense of his tent mates each day with expectation of making application for a clown role to the mananger of the greatest show on earth. Incidentally every one hopes that Uncle Sam pays off before that date.

Reggie Rowland (lying on a cot in his tent not far away)—"Say, tie him, will you? I'm busy just now."

Ackerman—"What shall I tie him with? He broke his halter!"

Rowland—"Use his tail, you poor fish."

Sergeant "Jim" Fleming happened to have what he thought was a picture of a friend in the Arizona National Guard with him when he met another Arizona guardsmen the other afternoon and gave the picture to the latter, requesting him to look his friend up. When Jim got back to camp he discovered he had given the stranger the wrong photo and after a two-day search the Arizonian returned today with the conclusion that their ain't no such animal in our regiment.

Sergeant Righter—"The government has ordered nine trains dispatched to Douglas immediately. That means the Jersey boys go home within a week."

Corporal Rowland—"Who's willing to bet me two to one that we don't move from here by the fifteenth? I've got an inside tip from Washington and they simply can't make us stay here."

Trooper Calder—"Say, fellers didja hear the latest? Captain Borden has ordered Horseshoer Staats to take off the horses' hind shoes so we can ship them in the box cars. That means more going home because we can't use the shoes without horses."

Corporal Fiske—"I figure it out this way: The government knows we don't like Douglas and it isn't going to keep us here just to get homesick. I tell you fellows, we'll be back on Park avenue in a week."

Bugler Ackerman—"There's a captain in the battery betting $50 to $15 that we will be home by the fifteenth. Gee, he must have real dope."

And so on and so forth until along comes First Sergeant Cox with this dash of cold water—"This looks like the best tip yet. Secretary of War Baker declared this morning that absolutely no information regarding the moving of any troops has been given out as yet and rumors concerning homegoing were groundless. Guess that'll hold some of the dopesters.

Some of the troopers have even said their fond adios to the city of Douglas and refuse to go back downtown. Others have packed everything they don't need and are getting along with as little wearing apparel as possible in anticipation of an early departure.

Joe Gallagher has found a way to beat the sleepy hollow postal clerks we have around here. Joe snubs the local postoffice each morning and collects the troop mail and takes it to the mail train in person, seeing to it that none of the local clerks touch it.

Blunders in Quotation.

Errors of quotation are common in speech and writing. Byron quoted Shakespeare, "An eagle towering in his pride of place." But what Shakespeare wrote was, "A falcon towering in his pride of place." Milton wrote not "as thick as leaves in Vallombrosa," but "thick as autumnal leaves that strow the brooks in Vallombrosa;" not "fresh fields and pastures new," but "fresh woods." Nathaniel Lee did not write, "When Greek meets Greek then comes the tug of war," but "When Greek joins Greeks, then was the tug of war," a very different thing. Doubtless, however, the modification of phrases by popular usage is not wholly evil; it certainly is inevitable. The saying, "Let us eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die," is of curious origin. The preacher in Ecclesiastes says, "A man hath no better thing under the earth than to eat and to drink and be merry;" Isaiah, "Let us eat and drink, for tomorrow we shall die;" Luke, "Take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry."—Indianapolis News.

THE HASTINGS DIAMOND.

It Involved a King of England in a Bribery Scandal.

Nearly every great diamond has a history. These histories are always romantic, embodying numerous adventures, some of which are tragic.

In the history of the Hastings tragedy of England is a charge of bribery against a king, George III., which gave the gentle art of caricature an opportunity such as had never come to it before and showed the power that caricature could wield upon a people.

At a levee of the king held on June 14, 1786, a very valuable diamond of unusual size and brilliancy was presented to George III., ostensibly as a gift from the nizam or native ruler of Deccan, India.

At the period when this magnificent peace offering was given to the king the impeachment of Warren Hastings was advancing in parliament, and it was current rumor that this and several lesser diamonds were the purchase price of Hastings' acquittal.

Caricatures appeared in the windows of the printshops. One represented Hastings wheeling the king to market in a barrow and saying, "What a man buys he may sell again." In another the king was exhibited kneeling, with his mouth open and Hastings throwing diamonds into it.

An Italian juggler then in London pretending to eat paving stones placarded the walls with bills describing himself as "The Greatest Stone Eater." Improving upon this, the caricaturists represented the king in the character of the Greatest Stone Eater.—Indianapolis News.

SENTIMENT AGAINST MARTINE.

Those among us who have been arguing that sentiment in Plainfield was overwhelmingly against the nomination of Senator James E. Martine for re-election, or even that a goodly number of local people were opposing his candidacy, had concrete proof of the unfairness of such statements when they looked over the crowd that went to hear Attorney-General John W. Wescott last night. "So general is the demand that Senator Martine be defeated," we are quoting the official statement of those who arranged for the local Wescott meeting made only a short time ago, "that it has been found necessary to hire the biggest hall in Plainfield." Only sixty-six people attended the meeting and this count includes the political managers who accompanied the speaker, newspaper men, Democrats known to be friendly to Martine and the stragglers who were in the building and dropped in just to "kill time." True the weather discouraged attendance, but motion picture shows and a local theatre with an attraction of ordinary interest did not suffer. The true analysis is that Mr. Wescott is not a popular candidate in Plainfield. If his coming had been made a Democratic event he might have drawn a crowd. He did not make a personal appeal for votes, but urged the re-election of Woodrow Wilson. Mr. Martine would have been glad to have joined in such a meeting, he even made the suggestion, and all Democrats could have been invited, but those in charge of arrangements overestimated the Wescott strength.

PROGRESS FOR PLAINFIELD.

Plainfield is to have a new city hall—one worthy of its citizenship—and at once, thanks to the intelligent and courageous action of the Common Council which awarded contracts last night. If members of the Council had voted to postpone action on this important question, or had cut the appropriations, thereby preventing the construction of a building adequate to the needs of the municipal government, they would have acted against their own good judgment and, we believe, against the wishes of a vast majority of the clear-thinking and fair-minded citizens. The city has been handicapped long enough by having its officials crowded in quarters that did not allow room for efficient work. The amount of money that is to be spent in the important work is not excessive, and those who make up the Plainfield that is to come will be grateful. The Common Council is to be congratulated on its progressive achievement.

* * * * * *

But little interest has been manifested locally in the campaign up to this time, except on the liquor question. This week, however, the "common people" are being visited by the candidates seeking nomination in the two big parties, and until a week from today, the political situation will probably be discussed as much as is the war, the trolley strike in New York, and similar events which have been attracting more attention than politics. One of the most interesting fights is that for the county clerkship, a four-sided contest, with Colonel William B. Martin and Deputy County Register Edward Bauer apparently leading, if the talk on the street can be taken as a criterion. Bauer and Martin were both campaigning in Plainfield yesterday, and both were assured the support of many of the voters. Bauer has the backing of the county Republican organization—in fact is recognized as the organization candidate, while Colonel Martin is "bucking the machine" and he feels quite sanguine of the result. Colonel Martin would make a good county clerk, were he selected, and no one disputes that Mr. Bauer, with his training in the register's office would also be a capable official. Somehow or other the fellow who runs against a machine candidate gets the interest and support of the independent voter, and it has been the rule since the days of the direct primary that many men of that type have been nominated, and then successfully elected. Colonel Martin has a splendid record as a man. He has been a member of the Elizabeth excise board for some time, and in his work there has made an enviable reputation. In military affairs he has been one of the best trained men in the State, and has made a splendid record in every way. He has been one of the crack rifle shots of the nation for twenty years or more, and has given a great deal of his time to helping bring the Second Regiment, of which Company K, of Plainfield, is a part, to the present high state of efficiency. His effective work and training as a soldier makes sure that if the people select him he will bring an excellent training to the work of the office.

Reports that the widows of two patrolmen who served on the Plainfield police force will probably participate in the pension fund, as told in last night's Daily Press, are gratifying. For many years only the men have benefitted from this fund, when they retired, but under an amendment of the act of 1911, passed at the last session of the Legislature, the widows are now provided for. One of the local patrolmen, Tobias Nolan, was chairman of the legislative committee which secured the passage of the amendment, and it is fitting that two Plainfield widows should benefit. In this age, when members of the Plainfield police force are working for pay which is smaller than they could get in other occupations, it is hard to save anything, especially if the men are taken away before they have lived as long as falls to the lot of the average man. With the cost of living mounting higher all the time, there are few who are able to save or carry much insurance, even when earning higher pay than a policeman. The police pension fund is largely raised by deductions from the salaries of the men, and when this money is given up to the fund, the families are as much the losers by the deductions made from their pay as are the men themselves. It is to be hoped that the local authorities will soon see that the two widows in question will get their pensions.

In an address at the meeting held at the Plainfield Theatre on Sunday, Rev. Birney S. Hudson intimated that were Colonel Austen Colgate in Atlantic City he would have taken the same attitude toward the open saloon on Sunday that Senator Edge took, one of opposing all efforts to close the saloons on the Sabbath day. Of course Mr. Hudson may have reason for thus attacking the Essex man, but we fear that he has overstepped the mark. Mr. Colgate has never, at any time in his career, been allied with liquor interests, and never publicly or privately favored disregard of the law. Colgate has never in all his long political or personal career done anything which would warrant Mr. Hudson's remark about him, and Dr. Hudson should set him right in a published statement. He is the only man, with any chance of nomination or election that the anti-liquor forces of the State can look to for aid in the gubernatorial chair. Mr. Hudson, perhaps unintentionally, has done Mr. Colgate a great injustice.

* * * * * *

Former Senator Ackerman and Assemblyman William N. Runyon must be proud of their endorsement of the Edge candidacy, in view of the statement made on Sunday afternoon by Rev. Birney S. Hudson. Mr. Edge's record on the liquor question seems to have been severely left alone in all literature setting forth his merits which has been sent out by his campaign managers.

Psychology of the Game.

When the zephyrs blow
And the posies grow,
And their fragrance perfumes the air.
When the future is bright,
And all nature's right,
And the weather is warm and fair;
When there's naught of strife
And pure joy is rife
And the whole works is to the good
When the birdies sing
And most everything
Is behaving just as it should;
When folks wear a smile
Of a happy style
And refuse to reduce the same
Even by an inch
It's a mortal cinch
That the home team has won a game.

How to Make a Problem Play.

One poor but honest husband.
One attractive and ambitious wife.
One millionaire who is "unhappily married."
One 80 h. p. automobile.
One gossiping housemaid.
One intercepted letter.
One police officer.
One revolver.

- Proctor's Theatre -

"Hell to Pay Austin" at Proctor's Today.

Billy Austin, the central figure of the new Triangle play, "Hell to Pay Austin," starring Wilfred Lucas and Bessie Love, which is show at Proctor's Theatre today, is the boss of a big lumber camp in the Northwest. He is known as "Hell to Pay" because, when his orders are not carried out, that is exactly what happens. He is a very bitter man, but just man withal, and when it comes time for someone to adopt the little daughter of the camp evangelist, who has lately died, Austin becomes the guardian by common consent. Mary H. O'Connor, author of "Hell to Pay Austin," has written a story of the real West that gets under the mere skin of its immortal romance. Austin as the hard and merciless boss of the lumber camp is an extraordinary character for a woman to create, but Austin's gentle little girl ward a part that gives Bessie Love her brightest chance yet—has the true feminine spirit and an appeal that is irresistible.

Tomorrow begins a three-day festival for local theatregoers, for it is then that "The Fall of a Nation," Thomas Dixon's mighty war spectacle, is presented for the first time in this vicinity. Coming direct from the Liberty Theatre, New York, wher the Liberty Theatre, New York, where it enjoyed a most successful run, this production will doubtless create a sensation in this vicinity. Not content with offering such a stupendous production, the management of Proctor's have taken one step further and provide three Fox productions in addition on the three different days. On Wednesday Theda Bara will return to greet her many friends in "East Lynne," one of her most successful pictures. On Thursday Bertha Kalish will be seen in "Ambition," which created a stir when presented here a short time ago, and on Friday William Farnum will appear in "The Man From Bitter Roots." Such a triumverate of colossal photoplay successes in addition to "The Fall of a Nation" fairly make one gasp for breath, but the Proctor people are doubtless used to doing big things in a big way to entertain their patrons. They deserve appreciation to the greatest degree and this can only be shown them by attending to see these pictures.

"The Fall of a Nation" is sure to stir patriotic enthusiasm when presented for the first time here at Proctor's Theatre on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. In New York and Chicago the great spectacle was the mecca of many thousands of patriotic Americans who cheered the big scenes to the echo. Thomas Dixon's play vibrates with genuine Americanism. The author describes it as "a bugle call to arms for the national defense." The story is of an imaginary invasion of the United States by a foreign power. After the defeat of our army and the subsequent usurpation of authority at Washington, the women of the country come to the rescue and by means of a secret, oath-bound conspiracy, contrive to expel the invaders.

THE SYMPATHY GAG

DOUGLAS MERCHANTS LONG FOR PAY DAY

They Now Admit That New Jersey Troops Brought Prosperity.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 13.—There are at least two classes of individuals hereabout who eagerly anticipate the arrival of government pay day—Uncle Sam's soldiers and Douglas merchants. Thh latter group enjoying sudden and unexpected prosperity that may be attributed solely to the circulation of soldier money by the Easterners, await with outstretched hands and greedy gaze the day on which the several thousand militia men will receive their $15 monthly allowance. The business men of this place were the first to discover that the guardsmen had gone "broke," but they were the last persons on earth to think of extending credit to even a soldier. Their business is cash in all cases and double cash where Jersey soldiers are concerned. They have one price on every article for a civilian and another price for the khaki garbed shopper, the latter generally being about fifty per cent. higher.

The government paymaster has been expected by the men since September 1, and they have been consoling themselves with the belief that his tardiness probably means that the War Department intended to send them back home before the middle of the month and would pay them off at Sea Girt. This theory is now shot to the winds and the soldiers are tired of playing with the emptiness of their pockets. They long to hear the jingle of hard earned coin which is being accumulated at the rate of fifty cents a day by the privates, and a full day at that.

The more fortunate and richly endowed guardsmen have in many cases gone "broke" in the role of loan merchants, and it is safe to conclude that twenty-five per cent. of the Jerseymen here will once more find themselves in the state of poverty after paying off their debts when the $15 does arrive.

Douglas merchants are now beginning to show their anxiety and for the first time really admit that the soldier trade does amount to something, after all. When it was previously suggested that the Jersey guardsmen had "made" the city of Douglas and raised it from a state of bankruptcy the townspeople scoffed at the thought and poked their noses high in the air—this meaning indignation in the Western language.

Believing that I was a fellow townsman, and in a tone of strict and mysterious confidence, one of the leading merchants of Douglas called me aside today and wanted to know if I had noticed the falling off in trade within the past two weeks. This business man reputed to be the controller of a majority of the city's stores and commercial enterprises, said that he had enjoyed an increase in gross receipts of $200 a day from the time the soldiers first landed here until they went "broke." Now he is taking in about $50 a day more than he did prior to the first week in July, but he has become so swelled with prosperity that he is ready to launch drastic action to get the soldiers the pay they are entitled to, and which he personally believes he is being done out of by Uncle Sam's delay.

One restaurant keeper told me today that he was paying his "leading merchant" $150 a month for the rent of a store with a 25-foot frontage, but even with this big item of overhead expense he was making triple what he could in the East—simply because the soldiers liked to spend their money for his food. And this enormous profit is coming into his hands in spite of the fact that three far better eating establishments have sprung up since the soldiers detrained here.

Hence, the profit that has heretofore kept the Douglas citizens from admitting that they profited by the presence of militiamen here has been broken. He admits that the permanent maintenance of the guard at this point would eventually make Douglas the metropolis of the West, and he is leaving no stone unturned in his campaign to frighten the administration into keeping the remaining Jersey units at the local camp. If he knew Villa's present address it is safe to conclude that he would even invite the bandit to make a raid on Douglas with a view to demonstrating to Uncle Sam that it is absolutely essential that the border guard be kept here. Which is going to be—are the soldiers to be given the chance to empty their pockets in Douglas or is the government paymaster going to safeguard the several hundred thousand dollar payroll until Sea Girt is reached?

PLAINFIELD TRUCK IS USEFUL TO TROOPERS

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Pirtleville, Ariz., Sept. 14.—One of the feature that distinguishes Troop D from other units in the New Jersey camp is the motor truck which was furnished the unit by thoughtful Plainfielders just before the soldiers left for the West. When not in use it is stationed at the head of the camp street and its lettered sides serve as a marker for those looking for this outfit.

However, it is generally in use and what the troop would do without it is hard to tell. It has been the most useful asset brought here from the East and is the envy of the other troops and companies. In the words of Captain Albert Borden, "we just simply can't get along without it." The machine eats up $17 or $18 worth of gasoline each month, which we have to pay for but the investment is a good one and we don't begrudge this item

The camp proper is located about one mile from the business centre of Douglas, and it is necessary to go to town sometimes a dozen times a day and haul provisions back; it may well be seen that the truck is both a labor and time saver.

Joseph Gallagher, of Dunellen, who has charge of the machine, gave it a thorough overhauling yesterday, and it is now in excellent running order. Since arrival here it has been put to hard use, th roads hereabouts being all bad, as will be found in any other section of Arizona. Comparatively little trouble has been experienced in keeping it in repairs, this fact being due largely to the work of Trooper Gallagher.

- Plainfield Theatre. -

The new vaudeville program which Manager Shannon has scheduled for today and tomorrow at the Plainfield Theatre, the first show of which was played this afternoon to a capacity audience, introduces a line of delectable and out of the ordinary line of entertainment. The show is one of the best balanced that has been booked for the West Second street playhouse in a long time. The bill opens with the headline attraction, "The Operator," a dramatic production directed by Harry Nestler. The sketch is intensely pathetic with a touch of humor at the right time. Thee act carries a carload of its own scenery.

"The Bruces," programmed as one of vaudeville's best singing and instrumental combinations, are heard in a mixture of songs and musical selections that won them much applause. Dick Sheppard, comedian extraordinary, has a line of laughs that are all his own.

Ward and Davis, comedians, offer a refreshing bit of novelty to the program with a series of popular songs and rapid-fire jokes. Maximillian and Wills Company, characterized as "a little bit of everything," round out the bill. The entertainment they offer is decidedly unique and one that is a sure cure for the blues.

Several Pathe comedies and a drama comprise the photoplay portion of the program and of course the Pathe Weekly pictorilize current happenings. Popular prices are the vogue at the West Second street playhouse. The daily show commences at two in the afternoon and the evening program commences at 7 p. m.

SEPTEMBER 19 IN HISTORY.

1850—Governor Stuyvesant of New Netherland arrived at Hartford and demanded of the English settlers a full surrender of the lands on the Connecticut River, which was refused.

1787—Gottingen University opened.

Glass of Hot Water Before Breakfast a Splendid Habit

Open sluices of the system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.
We should drink, before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.
The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make any one who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—Adv.

SALTS FINE FOR ACHING KIDNEYS

We Eat too Much Meat Which Clogs Kidneys, Then the Back Hurts.

Most folks forget that the kidneys, like the bowels, get sluggish and clogged and need a flushing occasionally, else we have backache and dull misery in the kidney region, severe headaches, rheumatic twinges, torpid liver, acid stomach, sleeplessness and all sorts of bladder disorders.
You simply must keep your kidneys active and clean, and the moment you feel an ache or pain in the kidney region, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good drug store here, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is harmless to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity. It also neutralizes the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.
Jad Salts is harmless; inexpensive; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everybody should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean, thus avoiding serious complications.
A well-known local druggist says he sells lots of Jad Salts to folks who believe in overcoming kidney trouble while it is only trouble.

CORPORATION NOTICE

Notice is hereby given that the following Ordinance has been introduced before the Common Council, read the second time and ordered engrossed preparatory to its third reading, and that it is the intention of the Council to adopt the same.
JOHN J. CARROLL, City Clerk.
Plainfield, N. J., Sept. 5, 1916.

AN ORDINANCE

to Provide Separate Sewers or Drains, to carry off the surface water, in portions of East Fourth Street, Washington Street, East Front Street and Watchung Avenue.

Whereas, the City finds it necessary, and the Common Council hereby so determines, to provide separate sewers or drains to carry off the surface water in the portions of streets enumerated in the title of this ordinance, hereinafter particularly specified, and the water flowing into Green Brook through said portions of streets, and the Common Council has determined, and doth hereby determine that the public good requires the construction of the sewers or drains hereinafter specified;
The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by the Common Council, do enact as follows:
Section 1. That under the provisions of the acts of the Legislature in such case made and provided, the Common Council doth hereby direct and order that separate sewers or drains to carry off the surface water in said portions of streets and the water flowing into Green Brook as aforesaid, be constructed in and for said City of Plainfield, in East Fourth Street, from Watchung Avenue to Washington Street; Washington Street, from East Fourth Street to East Front Street; East Front Street, from Washington Street to Watchung Avenue; Watchung Avenue, from East Front Street to Green Brook, as shown for said portions of streets on map on file with the City Clerk of the City of Plainfield, entitled, as follows:
"Map for Separate Sewers or Drains to carry off the Surface Water in portions of East Fourth Street, Washington Street, East Front Street and Watchung Avenue, City of Plainfield, N. J., August, 1916," "Sewerage System, City of Plainfield, N. J., Sheet 4, 1895, Plans of Castings, March, 1895" (to which maps reference is hereby made and the same are hereby made a part hereof) said separate sewers or drains to be constructed on said streets between the above-mentioned points, as shown on said maps, with the necessary inlets, manholes and appurtenances to complete the same, and to be of the dimensions and materials and to be laid along such lines and at such grades and in such manner as indicated and specified on said maps.
Sec. 2. That the costs and expenses of such improvement having been ascertained, an assessment for benefits thereof upon the owners of the land and real estate fronting on the improvements which are peculiarly benefited thereby in proportion, as nearly as may be, to the advantage each shall be deemed to acquire, shall be made according to law.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—Three Spinning Fairies Go to A Wedding.

In Walked Three Funny Old Fairies.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

JUST before bedtime daddy called Jack and Evelyn and told them: "Three fairies once offered to help a lazy girl spin a whole lot of flax that she might win a queen's son as her husband.
"'If you will begin to spin at once,' the girl told the three homely fairies, 'I will be very glad to invite you to my wedding and introduce you as my cousins.'
"So she let the three queer looking little old women come in through her window and set them to spinning. The first fairy drew out the thread and turned the wheel, the second moistened the thread, and the third twisted it. At the same time she struck with her fingers on the table, and every time she did this a beautiful skein of the finest spun yarn fell on the floor.
"Whenever the queen came to visit the girl she bid the three fairies and then showed her the beautiful yarn. The queen could not praise her enough.
"When all the flax was spun the three old women took leave of the girl. 'Don't forget your promise to invite us to your wedding. For we will bring you good luck,' they said in farewell.
"Then the queen saw the great piles of yarn she began at once to prepare for the wedding. The bridegroom was delighted to think he had such a clever wife and showered the girl with praises.
"'I have three cousins who have shown me much kindness in the past,' the girl said. 'I do not want to forget them now that I am happy and prosperous. Will you please give me permission to invite them to my wedding and let them sit at my table?'
"Both the queen and the bridegroom gladly gave their consent.
"The wedding feast was well under way when in walked the three funny little old fairies, garbed with most wonderful dresses. The bride arose and greeted them, 'Welcome, dear cousins.' But the bridegroom could not help exclaiming, 'How did you happen to have such ugly friends?'
"'What has given you such a broad foot?' he asked one of them.
"'Turning the wheel,' she answered.
"'What gave you such a large lip?' he asked the second.
"'Moistening the thread,' she replied.
"And when he asked the third why her thumb was so broad she said, 'Twisting the thread.'
"Horrified by these answers, the bridegroom cried, 'Then my beautiful wife shall never go near a spinning wheel as long as she lives!'
"And so the lazy girl was rid of the hated task of spinning," daddy ended.

Training a Husband

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Morris Southy Believes That His Own Pleasure Is Always to Be Considered First.

"I knew just how it would be when you got that blooming pup. Look at this." Morris Southy held up a boy's shirt with one sleeve hanging in ribbons. "He was jumping and catching it as it flapped in the wind."
"Did you punish him?" asked Marian.
"I certainly did."
"Good. He will not be likely to do it again. He is very quick to learn. A puppy is very destructive usually, but this is the first thing he has destroyed." Marian took the injured garment and examined it to ascertain the extent of the damage.
"I do not think we have any money to spend buying shirts for dogs to tear up," growled Morris.
"We certainly have not. We must teach the dog better manners," replied his wife.
"The best way to teach him is by making an end of him. I was opposed to keeping him in the first place, as you very well know, but you insisted on trying it——"
"And the pleasure the children have taken with him amply proves that I was right," interrupted Marian. "You yourself enjoyed seeing them play hide and seek together the other night. We can't get them many toys, nor spend much time amusing them. They must have some pleasure, and they are learning about the care of animals."
"When it comes to that, they could learn about the care of animals by taking care of something that would be of use to us," argued Morris.
"As for instance?"
"Why, chickens? There is a place to keep hens in the back yard and it would be a saving to have our own eggs."
"Good idea!" agreed Marian. "I think the boys would be delighted to take charge of them. Do you know where you can get some?"
"Well, that would not be hard to manage. You get the boys to fix up the coop——"
"You do that dear. It is such a good thing for children to work with their father, and my time is so full——"
"What about mine?" snapped Morris.
"You need outdoor exercise and I should think this would be just the thing. In your schedule you have a certain time for exercise, surely. Take that for a few days and get the boys interested." Morris was beginning to dislike the subject of schedules. He had harped for years on Marian's working methodically and now whatever he asked her to do for him was cheerfully refused because it was not in her schedule, and she could not break in on the sacred order of exercises that she had adopted on his advice. He tried to work back to the subject of the puppy.
"I want you to make those boys understand that if they can't watch that dog and keep it from destroying things I will not allow them to keep it."
"All right, dear, we will all try to keep watch," was the cheerful reply. "Meantime the children are storing up pleasant memories."
"I see you are determined to run things to suit yourself," growled the father.
"Run things?" questioned Marian in surprise.
"Yes, run things. I always said I would not have a dog on the place, but here he is. I said when he came that I would not stand him around if he made himself a nuisance and I am standing the biggest nuisance I ever heard of."
"Oh, you are a terrible martyr, Morris," laughed Marian.
"It is very certain that I am not much considered in my own home," continued the aggrieved husband.
"I never dreamed that you were posing as a domestic tyrant whose word was law," chaffed Marian. "I thought you wanted the good of the greatest number considered, and there are three children and only one of you." She laid her hand on his shoulder and put her cheek against his sleeve. "I guess you will live through it, dear."

ECCENTRIC STYLES IN MILLINERY.

By Mary Glynn.

So varied are the styles in millinery and so extreme are some of the designs, that one wonders from whence they come. One needs, however, only to study history and art in dress to see that there is nothing new under the sun; there is only a new way of presenting an idea. It thus it is that the head dress of church dignitaries often serve as a the idea today in millinery for a fashionably dressed woman. This model with its high peak trimming over the crown is taken from the Russian church head dress. It is developed in velvet and lined with satin, and has bands and tails of fur. This hat in its foundation, is little more than a skull cap, and it is the high pointed trimming which give it individuality and eccentricity. Made in a rich dark velvet with bands of skunk or mink, this shape proves most becoming to a youthful face, and adds considerable height to the figure.

NEWS AND VIEWS
Conducted by
THE W. C. T. U.

"Don't send him to jail. He's not a bad man. He beats me only once a week and that's on pay day. On the other days he is a good husband." This was the plea of a wife in a Buffalo city court to the judge who was about to sentence her spouse to the penitentiary for disorderly conduct. This pitiful appeal for leniency is in really one of the gravest charges against the liquor traffic. It shows that pay day is an objective point toward which the drink interests direct their attention. The man who has lost his job and is down and out financially ceases to interest the liquor dealer—he has no pay day. The fortunes of the brewers and distillers, if closely analyzed, would be found to be made up largely of the earnings of frugal, hard working laborers. Indeed, the liquor dealer would claim an exclusive right to intercept the man with the pay envelope on his way from the factory to his home and appropriate to himself the money which should rightfully be distributed for the upbuilding of society.
This barbaric "holdin up" of the man with the pay envelope is a serious matter not only to the individual victim and his family, but to the whole business and social world. Primarily it affects most directly the wife and family of the victim, for upon his wages they are dependent for sustenance. But by no means are they the only sufferers. The grocer with whom the working man has been accustomed to trade, has a right to expect a certain proportion of the weekly wage, for which in return he will give full value received. The dry goods merchant looks for his pro rata of profit from the same source, as does also the landlord who owns the house in which the men lives. The shoe merchant, who is prepared to keep the toiler's family well shod, and the coal merchant who anticipates providing them with fuel, must all necessarily have a grievance against the keeper of the corner saloon who lays hands on their prospective customer and empties his pockets before they have a chance to offer their commodities, which he and his family sorely need.
Nor does this injustice of the thing stop there. The churches and benevolent institutions of the city where the man lives are defrauded by this impoverishment of an individual who otherwise might give liberalite to help along good causes. The city that as well might confidently expect the man later to own a house and lot, and thus be a supporter of civic institutions, finds all its expectations smothered in the dram shop where are buried the few hard earned dollars of the future taxpayer.
In short the highway robbery, legalized by law, of the wages of the laboring man, before he has an opportunity to invest it in legitimate ways, is not only a sin against the individual, but a sin against society for the diversion of money which should be kept in circulation in a dozen worth, lines, is an economic crime against an economic world.

LEHIGH PLACES ORDER FOR NEW EQUIPMENT

The Lehigh Valley Railroad announced today that it had just placed an order for twenty-five new all-steel baggage and express cars. The cars, which will be constructed along the lines of a special design prepared by the railroad, will be sixty feet in length, have six-wheel trucks and all the latest improvements for this class of equipment. The cars will be constructed by the Pullman Company.

THE FORUM

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:
The anti-saloon meeting held Sunday afternoon was a great success. As I sat there I wondered how many of the men on the platform and in that audience knew of the history of that hall. First opened about 1891 as the Elkwood, which created quite a stir in our Christian community, so much so that when the "Big Six" Councilmen who granted that license came up for re-election some two years after, every minister in Plainfield protested the Sunday before the election against the election of that "Big Six," and they were snowed under on that memorable Tuesday. The Salavation Army then opened the hall under new management. We can do it again. We can have a respectable city and the salesmen who come here to sell goods can be assured that they will not be tempted to drink.
These men are sent out by their houses to sell goods and it is an insult to the travelling fraternity to assert they will not come to a dry town. The great majority of travelling men are respectable, law-abiding men who have families to support.
I know them. I have travelled with them for over thirty years. I belong to one society of nearly 100,000 memebers and another of over 50,000 and still another of 3,500, the latter the Gideons.

SPORT TOPICS

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

CLIFF RANDOLPH WORKS.

No more masterful exhibition of pitching ability than the one executed by Cliff Randolph on Sunday will ever be given in this city. Cliff has a "rep" and when he ascended the mound in the seventh frame he realized that he had to live up to that "rep." He was not going into the fray full of confidence. If anything, he was just a little bit afraid that he might fall down on the job. But he didn't. Had he possessed less ability than he did, he would have, undoubtedly, been forced to listen to the jeers of the fans. It is not that the fans do not like Cliff. But the fact remains that much is always expected of him. He is known as a good pitcher and he can pitch. There are, however, many fans who envy another's success. Had Cliff Randolph done poorly on Sunday he would have been given the laugh by a few. That's not the proper spirit. Fortunately, almost everyone was with Cliff. Had he lost he would have obtained some sympathy because McFadden started. But had he failed utterly, he would have been disgraced locally. He didn't lose and those Royal players who believed that they were easily "the class" of the game looked like two cents after Randolph finished with them.

• • • • • •

MICKEY DESERVES CREDIT.

We fail to see where "Mickey" McFadden was not fast enough for the Royals. A personal friend of ours, who is a Royal rooter, stated before the game that the Giants would end McFadden's career. Our friend meant that "Mickey" would be easy for the colored fellows. But, somehow, McFadden wasn't so easy. We failed to see where the Royals made him look disturbed. The fact that he was removed from the game has nothing to do with the matter. When a man allows a hard-hitting combination only five hits in six innings he is accomplishing something. Therefore, "Mickey" accomplished something. There is no getting away from the fact that Plainfield has talent that is the equal of any talent anywhere.

• • • • • •

A LOCAL VICTORY.

That Tab victory was a purely local victory; the Dunellen wins were purely "local" wins. The Royal defeats were "out of town" affairs. There was nothing "foreign" about the Plainfield victories and that's the beauty of it all. Cliff Randolph, Johnny Dixon and Mickey McFadden all hail from this vicinity—McFadden lives in Dunellen but has been playing here regularly. "Senor" Maiden lives on West Third street and can pitch baseball. We believe that "Senor" would have been more effective against the Tabs than Edwards was. By the way, is "Edwards" a name or a nom de plume?

• • • • • •

BRING BROOKLN ON.

The Dodgers want to come to Plainfield. They want to play the Dunellen team. And they want plenty of money, too. Therefore they have three wishes. The first two can be easily attended to. But, how about the third? We do not know that it is "some" figure. The merchants of Plainfield could assist in bringing them here—money is needed.

• • • • • •

"HOW ABOUT PLAINFIELD?"

"The rumor that there will be no Junior Elks' Bowling League this season is not a popular one at the quarters of Elizabeth Lodge, 289. The so-called "baby" loop may be dropped by the league moguls because some of the lodges will find it hard this year to dig up enough men to represent them in the senior circuit without figuring on a junior organization. Elizabeth won't be troubled that way, because she has a whole gang of stars. However, the 289 Bills are willing to stand by whatever the leaders do in the matter."—Elizabeth Times.

• • • • • •

HAD POOR SEASON.

"The 1916 season of the International League is now a thing of the past. The curtain was drawn yesterday and Newark fans find very little excuse to rave about the Indians. The Redskins finished a bad last, although they got off to a whirlwind start. Fred Tenney and Jim Price are not kicking. Things broke bad for the Redskins from the moment the team left on the first trip through the northern end of the circuit. Newark fans didn't warm up to the team, but the playing schedule was gone through with just the same and the owners never complained. Tenney and Price demonstrated that they were true sports. The work of building up a team for next season has already started. Players will be purchased and drafted during the winter. The owners of the team believe that Newark fans will return to the fold and the men behind the Indians, well knowing that it will be a hard job, intend to do their level best to put baseball back on the sporting map."—Newark News.

VAN DEVENTER BOYS FAVORITES IN FINALS

Elimination of Alrick Man, Jr. and Walter Merrill Hall Changes Opinion.

Contrary to all expectations Walter Merrill Hall and his sterling partner, Alrick H. Man, Jr., will not be contenders in the final match of the El Mora Country Club tennis tournament next Saturday afternoon. In their stead, the Van Deventer brothers, of Plainfield, will go into the match favorites for the top honors, although nobody is conceding them any great advantage over the sturdy veteran, Lindsay Dunham, of Rahway, and the brilliant youngster, George Throckmorton, of the Elizabeth Town and Country Club, whom they will oppose.

The greatest tennis play that has ever been witnessed on the El Mora court developed in the semi-final match, which saw the Plainfield boys win over the crack combination from the Hamilton Tennis Club. Both teams had found things pretty easy in their preliminary matches.

Moving out of the second round the Van Deventers defeated E. W. Donaldson and B. Clark, of Westfield, 6—0, 6—3, and were winners by default over the Pendergast-Whitney team, of the Elizabeth Town and Country Club, in the third round. Hall and Man, having completed their second round in the tiff last week took on the Brown brothers, of Staten Island, in the third bracket and although the latter played good tennis they never endangered their opponents. The scores were 6—3, 6—2.

Hall and Man won 6—1 over the Van Deventers in the first set of the "semi." The second set, however, found all serene in the Plainfield camp and the combination worked so smoothly that a 6—3 victory over the Gothamites resulted. Set No. 3 saw the favorites make a desperate effort to turn back the brothers, but the Van Deventers are not strangers to a gruelling pace and matching volley for volley and cut and slash with Hall and Man they were at length able to win 8—6.

PLANS COMPLETE FOR FIFTH ANNUAL SHOW OF PLAINFIELD KENNEL CLUB

Large Number of Local Entries Received—Forty-seven Fox Hounds to Be Exhibited Here—Percentage of Proceeds to Go Toward Volunteers' Auxiliary Fund—Special Trolleys Will Meet All Trains.

Through the energetic efforts of the officials and the members of the Plainfield Kennel Club, the fifth annual show will be the largest held in the metropolitan district for the season of 1916. Over six hundred and fifty dogs have been entered, and among these are some of the best canines in the country. Prizes, aggregating $1,500 in valuefi have been secured, there being 650 specials.

The show will be for the benefit of charity, the Volunteers' Auxiliary fund. Luncheon will be served on the grounds by a local caterer and everything will be done for the convenience of those who attend. The Arlington Avenue trolley car passes the rear gate and special cars will meet all trains.

Local people have responded loyally to the call for entries. Among the Plainfielders who have entered their prize dogs are: Francis Keenan, Mrs. Arthur Lane, A. G. Hpoley, William B. Nash, Mrs. John J. O'Donohue, John J. O'Donohue, R. L. Rosenthal, James K. Rossman, St. Helier's Kennels, Sidney R. Titsworth, Bts. J. G. Voorhees, John G. Zerega, Fred Bimble, Boreas Kennels, Mrs. T. Dean, John Conway, and Richard Harrigan.

Among the New Jersey entries are: John Amman, Jr., of Irvington Allstone Kennels, of Bound Brook; Joseph Adamson, of Kearny; M. P. Barnwell, of Elizabeth; Henry Bass, of Elizabeth; Thomas K. Bray, of Westfield; Charmion Kennels, of Newark; John Clark, of New Brunswick; John G. Bates, of Morristown; John Eager, of Morristown; Robert A. Fairbairn, of Westfield; Haley Fiske, of Bernardsville; Hayworth Kennels, of Hayworth; Hilterfar Kennels, of Morristown; Charles K. Lester, of Englewood, N. J.; Carwin Mabey, of Montclair; C. F. Nielson, of Middlebush; Mrs. M. V. Mackie, of Paterson; William G. Forteous, of Kearny; Clarence H. Reed, of New Brunswick; James Scott, of Kearny; Miss Maude Thompson, of Englewood; Ernest Truslow, of Short Hills; Henry Ungerer, of Westfield; Francis Lloyd, of Bernardsville; Miss Sarah Willowby, of Kearny; Mrs. C. Woehr, of Lakewood and many others. The complete list will be announced on Friday.

According to Wilbur Purcell, who is superintendent of the show, there will be 17 Great Danes entered in the show. The other breeds, with th number of entries received, follow: Foxhouds, 47; (this is the largest entry of foxhounds recorded since the National Show); Pointers, 15; English Setters, 23; Cocker Spaniels, 37; Beagles, 15; Collies, 27; Chow-Chows, 19; Bulldogs, 42; Airedale Terriers, 35; French Bulldogs, 28; Boston Terriers, 32; Fox Terriers, 38; Irish Terriers, 11; Pomeranians, 25; Janaese Spaniels, 12; Pekingese, 33; Members' Class, 15; and New Jersey Class, 18.

BROOKLYN LEADER WANTS A FORTUNE

According to Reports Five Hundred Dollars Will Induce Dodgers to Play.

The rumor that the Brooklyn Nationals want to play the Dunellen baseball team here seems to be a fact. That the Dodgers want plenty of cash for their efforts is more than a fact. It is a certainty.

From certain parties we learn that five hundred dollars or thereabouts will induce the Superbas to come to this city. It would seem that the Brooklyn team has to be "coaxed" considerably before any such trip is taken. There is no manager in this city who is willing to offer even half the amount of money asked by the Brooklyn authorities. If the Dodgers ever do come to this city, it certainly will be under different financial conditions.

There is not a doubt in the world but that the leaguers would prove a wonderful attraction here. The plan would receive the hearty support of every fan in Plainfield, but at the present time it is difficult to ascertain from what source the money is going to come.

CITY LEAGUE "FEED" MAY NOT BE HELD

Interest in Affair Seems to Have "Died Out," Say Officials.

A City League session was scheduled to be held in the Daily Press office last evening, but Old Jupiter Pluvius, President Walter C. Dobbins and Secretary Daniel Randolph were the only authorized persons on hand. One must consider Jupiter an official, owing to the fact that he has often made a practice of attending baseball attractions.

Unfortunately, nothing of importance was taken up at the meeting, inasmuch as there were but two parties present. But reports received from official sources state that the chances of holding the banquet and social on next Friday evening are not very bright. Interest in the matter is not running very highly and it is now considered improbable that the gathering will take place. The committee appreciates the generosity of the T. A. B. organization for so kindly offering the use of the hall.

Just why interest in the affair has reached such a low ebb is hard to tell. One league member stated that the pennant and trophies will, in all probability, be awarded at a special session to be held in the near future. Exit the City League for 1916.

WOULD ORGANIZE FRATERNAL LEAGUE

Local Parties Want Bowling League to Start in Near Future.

The bowling season is about to start in this city. Although no schedules have been given out as yet, it is understood that many are in preparation. A meeting of the Elks' bowling committee will be held on Sunday, when it will be definitely decided whether or not the local lodge will enter a team in the league. At the present time it does not look as though all the B. P. O. E. bowling will be done at home. According to a report appearing in an out of town newspaper, the secretary of the Elks is of the opinion that a local fraternal league would be just the thing. Others have been of that opinion for some time and some have even suggested that such an organization be established during the coming week.

The T. A. B. alleys are being repaired and the Knights of Columbus alleys are now in fine shape. Bowling has already begun on the Knights' alleys and has been in progress at the Tab club house for some time. Each of these organizations is willing to enter a team in the league. The Eagles have well located alleys, which they use to a great extent. It is considered highly probable that this organization would willingly enter a team in the fraternal league, were such a league organized. The Imperials, who use Gates' alleys could be easily induced to enter a team and should those who expect to promote the movement care to take outsiders, George Ortleb's Westfield boys might be admitted to the league.

If the parties who are interested in the movement will kindly express their views on the subject in written form, the Daily Press will gladly publish these statements.

VOLUNTARY BANKRUPTCY.

A voluntary petition in bankruptcy was filed yesterday by the Exposition Park Association, which controlled the Pittsburgh Federal League baseball team before it disbanded last autumn. According to the petition the indebtedness of the association amounts to $173,044. Included in this amount are $10,000, alleged to be due the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad for the use of Exposition Park, which the railroad owns; $82,316 for players' contracts, some portions of which have been liquidated, and $23,000 in contracts yet outstanding.

The petition states that the assets amount to $50,000, which was to have been paid by the clubs concerned in the peace agreement made with the American and National leagues, but which, is is alleged, has not been tendered. The Pittsburgh Trust Company was appointed a temporary receiver and a hearing was set for September 27.

EUROPEANS LEARN TO RESPECT LAWS

Birds Are Not to Be Killed Whenever Man Feels Hungry.

One of the first lessons a European alien has to learn when he comes to the United States is that the wild birds are not to be killed whenever his appetite demands bird potpie. Bird conservation, as we practice it, is unknown to Southern Europe and one result has been that the European farmer has found his crops more and more menaced by insects during recent years as their feathered protectors decreased.

Efforts were being made before the war to enact bird-protection laws in some parts of Southern France, Italy, Switzerland and Austria, but much difficulty was experienced in getting them enforced. The average peasant cannot appreciate that the bird which eats a thousand crop-destroying insects in a day has a greater economic value in the field than on the table. And he keeps right on killing larks, bullfinches, thrushes and other singing birds, whose tiny mouthful of flesh cannot begin to satisfy his hunger.

Thousands of immigrants bring this evil habit to America with them, so that today it creates a big problem for game protectors in many States. New Jersey game wardens in past years have made hundreds of arrests but they failed to halt the alien poachers. Then the Legislature solved the whole matter by making it illegal for an unnaturalized alien in this State to either use or have in his possession a firearm under any pretext. A single exception is made for the unnaturalized person who is the owner of real estate to the extent of $2,000 above all incumberances.

Under this stringent law, the mere possession of a rifle or shotgun by an unnaturalized person is proof of guilt. The law also allows wardens to procure search warrants admitting them to building or other places they may believe to be the hiding place for such fire arms. Confiscation of the weapon and $20 fine for each offence is the penalty carried by the act.

THOSE LEAGUE RACES.

The lead in the American League race changed hands again yesterday. The Detroits did not hold it long. They are back in second place, and because, while they were leading the Athletics—tailenders, yanked them down—the Red Sox were beaingt the White Sox. The Red Sox lead by two points, and today they and the Tigers come to gether in an all important series.

The Brooklyns are still first in the National League, but their margin over the Phillies was cut one game. They broke even with the Reds and the Phillies beat the Chicago Cubs. The result was a Brooklyn loss of half a game in the standing.

Harvard.

Under the glare of electric lights, Harvard football players engaged in signal drill and passing in the stadium last night. Eleven lights of from 50 to 1,500 watts, one quarter of the number that will eventually be used if night practice becomes a regular custom. No scrimmage work or kicking was attempted. A report on the result of further tests will be made to the Athletic Association within a week.

The first secret practice of the season was held by the squad yesterday in preparation for the opening game with Colby next Saturday Moseley Taylor, substitute tackle last year, and Richard Harte, varsity end, were newcomers on the squad. "Tom" Enright, one of the candidates for the backfield last year, returned to Cambridge yesterday to take examinations for readmission to college. He was dropped by the faculty just before the Yale game last year because of scholarship difficulties.

Princeton.

Failure of pads to arrive on time from Princeton prevented the Tigers from indulging in their first scrimmage work. Practice was held both in the morning and afternoon despite a thunder shower that put in an appearance in the afternoon.

From the way affairs stand the coaches will encounter difficulty in straightening out the back field. There is a struggle for the quarterback position between Haas, Ames and Eddy. Ames, who has played at quarterback for the Tiger varsity for two years, is the only man with experience, but he is so light that the coaches cannot use him regularly.

Eddy and Hass were both substitutes last year. Haas was used in the spring practice and has been receiving a great deal of attention from the coaches this autumn. Eddy does not fit in so well at quarter as he does at halfback.

CONNIE MACK'S DRAFTS.

Drafts on five of the twelve players the Philadelphia Americans obtained at the meeting of the National Baseball Commission here last Friday were cancelled, according to an announcement made late today by John E. Bruce, secretary of the commission. The Philadelphia Americans withdrew their drafts on Johns, infielder, of Columbus; McGaffigan, infielder, of Vernon; Jennings, shortstop, of Minneapolis; Bratchi, outfielder, of Muskegon, and Bassler, catcre, of Los Angeles. These withdrawals give the New York Americans first choice on Minneapolis and Cleveland first pick of the Vernon team.

SIRIUS AND THE DOG DAYS.

Time Has Worn Away the Link That Bound Them Together.

The dog days, when excessive heat is supposed to prevail, begin July 3, according to the ancient reckoning, and continue to Aug. 11. All sorts of traditions and superstitions are connected with this period, and various dates are also given.

In some sections the dog days are said to begin on July 24 and to end on Aug. 24, while still others attribute the malevolent influence of the dog star upon the earth to the period from Aug. 4 to Sept. 4, in accordance with the ancient Egyptian reckoning.

As a matter of fact, the rising of the dog star, Canis Majoris or Sirius, has nothing to do with the affair at all. The rising of that star has been so accelerated by the procession of the equinoxes during the passage of more than 2,000 years that the corresponding conditions for the ancient dog days no longer exist.

In ancient times in the latitudes of the Mediterranean the period of greatest heat nearly corresponded with that time in which the dog star rose at the same time with the sun. To this conjunction all antiquity and all the later followers of judicial astrology attributed a malignant influence.

Among the modern notions regarding the dog days is the absurd belief that it is during this period that dogs are most likely to go mad.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

GOOD FORM IN TENNIS.

Don't Copy a Bad Style Because Some Star Player Uses It.

Good form in tennis is hard to describe. It is not necessarily the ability to win matches, nor is it always the most graceful way of hitting the ball. It is rather the method of playing those strokes that have been shown by long experience to produce the best results with the majority of players.

One too often hears an ambitious young player declare that any stroke that wins is good enough for him. Because McLoughlin won international matches in spite of using a cramped backhand swing they are willing to copy his style in the hope of equaling his skill.

But success does not justify bad form. What a McLoughlin or a Brookes might do with a bad style of play is not always the best for others to attempt. Ten would fail with such methods where one would succeed, while with good form ten would succeed while one would fail.

A young player with a generous future before him might much better select as a model of good form strokes such as Johnston uses or those shown by Larned. With such a model any healthy, active boy should be able to play tennis well after steady practice.

The game does not require height or weight or any unusual physical qualification.—J. Parmly Paret in St. Nicholas.

The Elevator Boy Protests.

Did you ever stop to consider the feelings of an elevator boy in an office building? "How'd you like to spend your days in a cage, goin' up, comin' down, same bad air, same old shafts slippin' by, never nothin' to see? How d'ye like it on a sunny day when you were dyin' to play baseball?" says the elevator boy.

"I never thought about it at all," the passenger answered.

"Well, I have. I thought about it most of the time fer four years. Even the fellows in Sing Sing gets out sometimes, but we don't. When I get to feelin' I can't stand it, I think of block after block of office buildings in this town, every one of 'em with fifteen or twenty cages, and a fellow like me in every one of 'em, spendin' his life goin' up, comin' down, goin' up, comin' down—and outside the world goin' on."—American Magazine.

Made a Mess of It.

During a social evening a woman sang for the guests. One of the guests turned to a meek looking little man sitting at his side and said: "How awful! Who can she be?"

"That," replied the man addressed, "is my wife."

"Oh, I b-b-beg your pardon!" stuttered the other. "She's really a—I know she'd sing beautifully if she made a better selection of her music. Who do you suppose wrote that song?"

"I am the author of that song," replied the meek looking little man.—Argonaut.

A Strong Will.

"Rastus," said the judge, "you say that you entered the henhouse and then, deciding to resist temptation, left it. Is that right?"

"Dat's about it, judge."

"Well, how about the two hens that were missing?"

"Ah tells you, judge, Ah took dem. Ah reckoned dat Ah was 'titled to dat many for leavin' the rest."—New York Times.

One Good Reason.

"Why does the operation of hanging kill a man?" asked Dr. Whately. A physiologist replied:

"Because inspiration is checked, circulation stopped and blood suffuses and congests the brain."

"Bosh," replied his grace. "It is because the rope is not long enough to let his feet touch the ground."

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

WILL NOT AGREE TO REMOVE POLES

Telephone Company Notifies Mayor and Council in Borough.

BALKS AT THE EXPENSE

Public Service Representative Not Present—Mayor Smalley Would Allow Year in Which to Start Work—No Agreement Reached.

The New York Telephone Company will not remove its poles on Somerset street, a representative of the corporation told Mayor Smalley and members of the Common Council of North Plainfield last night. While declining the proposition made, the representative had no authority to accept a year's grace offered by Mayor Smalley. However, he will report back after a conference with those higher up and it may be that an agreement to begin this work within a year will be reached.

Lewis Fairlamb, of the plant department of the company, appeared before members of the Council last night. It was a specially called meeting and every member was present. Mr. Fairlamb said that prior to 1913 there were duplicate lines of poles on Somerset street and that his company, with the Public Service Corporation, removed these poles and joined lines. The work was done at considerable expense, he said, and plans for it were approved by borough officials at that time. The company would not be able to do the work in a year, even if it agreed, he said, because of failure to get materials. Mayor Smalley suggested that it would be fair to ask the company to agree to remove its poles on Somerset street, between Jackson avenue and Howard street, the work to start within a year. He explained that the Council would later ask that other poles be removed. Mr. Fairlamb said he would report back to his company and return with an answer at the next meeting.

The Somerset street line is a "feeder" for all parallel lines in the borough, the engineer explained, and therefore cannot be removed from the street. If the big cables come down they must be put in conduits. Several members of the Council thought it possible to use Duer street or Watchung avenue as a "feeder" for the borough, but the engineer would not agree that this would be satisfactory. It was explained that the Public Service engineer was unable to be present, but would attend the next meeting.

A resolution authorizing the Mayor and clerk to borrow $5,000 for current bills, was passed. Most of this money will go for interest on sewer bonds.

A complaint from C. D. Donahue that the street department had cut down two good trees in front of his house, put a telephone pole in his driveway and made a bad job of laying a new sidewalk, was received. Commissioner Barrett said that the trees were dead, the pole was fourteen inches from the driveway and that property owners on each side of Mr. Donahue were satisfied with their walks, which were the same as his. Mayor Smalley corroborated the street head. The complaint was referred to the Streets Committee.

A resolution from the Somerset County Board of Freeholders asking that the borough put Greenbrook road in good condition at a point between East End avenue and Rock avenue, where it was torn up by the laying of a sewer, was received. Councilman Mobus explained that the road was in bad condition. The clerk was instructed to notify the sewer contractor to make the improvement in ten days or authorize the Council to do the work and charge it against money due him.

A resolution indorsing the pension bill for letter carriers was passed.

MISS WALDO ATTENDANT AT NEW YORK WEDDING

Miss Ruth Waldo, of this city, was one of the attendants at the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Lewis Slee, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Noah Slee, of Park avenue, New York, to Walter Irving Willis, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce of Queens county. The marriage too place yesterday in St. Luke's Episcopal church at Beacon, N. Y., and was performed by Rev. Karl Reiland, of New York.

The bride wore French embroidered net over satin with a court train of satin and tulle and a veil of applique lace. Beside Miss Waldo, she was attended by Miss Mary Metcalf, of Wickford, R. I.; Miss Geordie P. Joline, of Philadelphia, Pa.; and the Misses Beatrice Gardner and Agnes L. Sheehy, of New York. The best man was F. Ray Howe, of New York. The ushers were Messrs. Lincoln Slee, J. Oakley Radway, Everett Hall and Richard C. Patterson, Jr. After the ceremony a reception was held at Hidden Brook, Mr. Slee's country place, at Beacon.

GERMANS ENJOY A SONG FESTIVAL

Singing Society Celebrate Winning of First Prize in Contest.

ADDRESSES A FEATURE

Major Carl Lentz Urges Election of Frelinghuysen and Condemns Franklin Murphy—Solos by Emil Munch.

Celebrating the winning of first prize in the second class at Carlstadt last summer, the singing section of the Gesang and Turn Verein provided a social evening with a "spread" at Saengerbund Hall last night when the singing societies of Somerville and Perth Amboy were entertained. During the evening there was music by Stuart's orchestra, and the singing societies also sang a number of popular selections which were well received. The silver cup won by the local singing society was presented by the Staats-Zeitung, of New York, and a representative of that newspaper was present to congratulate the members. Solo numbers by Emil Munch, of New York, were a feature of the evening.

After the festivities of the early part of the evening, Major Carl Lentz, of Newark, who was an honored guest, addressed those present, his remarks, which were in German, touching on the political situation. He urged the election of Joseph S. Frelinghuysen for United States Senator, and condemned Franklin Murphy, for his alleged statement in Trenton in 1909, when he is reported to have declared that he favored a law that would "allow no man to vote who was not born in this country and who could not read and write," and urged all voters present to oppose him at the primaries.

Otto Linter, president of the Somerville society, also made a congratulatory address. The excellent supper enjoyed during the evening was prepared by Adam Muff, the society's steward and served by the women's society.

WANT STEWART OR LAPSLEY FOR MAYOR

Democrats Have Not Yet Found Man to Oppose Calkins.

Former Mayor Percy H. Stewart and Howard G. Lapsley were suggested as candidates for Mayor at last night's meeting of the Plainfield Democratic Club. The names were not presented to the club formally, as the committee on candidates was not ready to report, but the voters expressed a willingness to get behind either man if one could be persuaded to make the race against Leighton Calkins. No definite action was taken, but it is possible that the Democratic party will agree on a candidate in time to have his name put on the general election ballot by petition. This must be done thirty days before the election.

Edward McGrath and Thomas Hueston, candidates for the Democratic nomination for the General Assembly, were present and made short talks. Gen. Dennis Collins, of Elizabeth, who is a member of the State committee, was also present. He reiterated his pledge of co-operation in the local campaign. President Claybrook presided, and the meeting was well attended.

POLICE ALLEGE COLORED WOMEN TOOK GOLD WATCH

Irene Dunham, of 402 West Third street, and Mamie Jackson, of 526 West Second street, were arrested this morning by Captain Charles Flynn, charged with the theft of a watch belonging to Edward Baliseia, of 902 West Third street. The girls, both colored, admit, it is said, that they took the timepiece and will be arraigned tomorrow morning.

Giving their ages as fourteen and sixteen, both girls say they went to Baliseia's house yesterday to apply for a position. It was then that they took the watch and hid it.

FOURTH WARD CLUB GETS READY FOR THE PRIMARY

About twenty enthusiastic voters attended last night's meeting of the Fourth Ward Republican Club and engaged in a discussion of plans for the coming campaign. This club has indorsed the candidacy of Francis J. Blatz for re-election to the Common Council. Its members will work for his nomination in the primaries and for the other candidates of the party.

TROOPERS LEAVE ON 8 DAY HIKE

Capt. Borden Leads Men on Long March Into Arizona Desert.

SOME LEFT IN CAMP

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 16.—After a series of rumors and postponements Captain Albert G. Borden finally led Troop D away from Pirtleville today on a hike scheduled to last eight days. To all intent and purpose the commanding officer seems to be headed for Fort Huachuca, sixty miles from here, the Plainfield troopers joining with the entire squadron in the long ride. So much has been rumored and so little completed during the past fortnight that the cavalrymen refused to believe that they were actually going to participate in the eight-day excursion until they got out of sight of Camp Funston. Every man was in fine fettle for the grind and all keenly anticipated the outing which will give them a chance to see the surrounding country in all its fall beauty.

Under the terms of the order providing for the hike Captain Borden was compelled to leave a detachment of soldiers behind to look after the camp, and these included: Sergeant Donald McGee, officer in charge; Corporal Groushauser, Privates Wells Cregar, Arthur Kirby, John Walsh James McElroy, George Hummel, William Smith, George Trub, Frank Fox and Leo Logan. Several of this number had counted considerably on this outing and were keenly disappointed when detailed to stay behind but took the blow like good soldiers. A similar number were left behind by Troops A, B and C, the other units making up the squadron. Today and until the troopers return the guard detachment will eat in the Troop D mess shack.

Yesterday afternoon the final examinations for the promotions to officers left vacant recently by dependency discharges were held and the following passed with credits high enough to receive their warrants:

Corporals—Gus Fiske, Ned Cary, Roger Mellick, Edward Cooke, Harris Rush and James Groushauser; first class privates—John H. Caulfield, Joseph Gallagher and Reginald Rowland. Sergeant Robert Cox succeeded Brown Rolston as first sergeant; Corporal Percey Ackerman succeeded Sergeant Austin W. Andrew; Corporal Ivins succeded Sergeant James Brewster; Private Joan Sachler succeeded Cox as supply sergeant; Corporal James Fleming succeeded Sergeant Donald McGee, the latter having an application in for dependency charges at the present time, which has not been acted upon.

A signal corps was organized yesterday afternoon in four squads and the members will report to Corporal Donald Fullerton every Tuesday and Thursday afternoon for an hour's drill. The squads include: First—Corporal Fullerton, Privates Ned Stevenson, Browne and Dawson; second—Corporal Roger Mellick, Privates Fred Stevenson, Cherry and Ralli, third—Corporal Edward Cooke, Privates Caulfield, Burr and James; fourth—Corporal Fiske, Privates Jackson, Black and Hibbard. The trumpeters of the corps will be Warren Ackerman and William Powers.

The first stop on the hike will be made tonight just outside of Warren, which is about five miles from here, and the troop will receive today's bag of mail and papers at that point. Captain Borden has arranged to have the mail sent from the camp each day to the hikers, and they will also be provided with facilities for sending mail to the local postoffice. The Plainfield motor truck was taken along for emergency sake in charge of First Class Private Joseph Gallagher.

WILL PRESENT A FLAG.

Following the mid-week prayer meeting at Bethel chapel tonight, the Douglas Camp No. 11, Uniformed Rank Knights of Pythias, will be presented with a flag. In this service the Biederwolf song books will be used and the Bethel chapel choir will lead the singing. A male quartette and a mixed quartette will render selections. Major S. H. Smith will be master of ceremonies and Col. W. J. Douglas will respond to the address of welcome to the Pythians by the pastor of the church.

RETURNED FROM CAPITAL.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Wheeler, of Mountain avenue, have just returned from a trip to Washington, where they were entertained by Mr. and Mrs. C. F. Windham, former residents of this city. While they were at the Capital Mr. and Mrs. Wheeler observed their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary and were given a postal shower by their friends.

CHIMNEY FIRE.

A still alarm was sent into fire headquarters last night for a chimney fire at the home of John Leal, 949 Central avenue. The blaze was extinguished without damage

ANTI-SALOON AUTO PARADE TO BE HELD

"Drys" Will Demonstrate Their Strength in Local Temperance Movement.

Those who were waging a fight in Plainfield for the election of no-license councilmen, have arranged for an "anti-saloon automobile parade" to be held in Plainfield on Saturday evening, as a demonstration in the interest of the movement. Allen B. Laing, who is taking charge of the details, reports that it is assuming good proportions. The parade will start from Watchung and Crescent avenue at 8 o'clock. All owners of cars who are in sympathy with the cause are invited to take part, and if possible to have their cars decorated.

There will be two meetings for the anti-saloon cause tomorrow night, one at the Nonpareil club house on Berckman street, near East Third, at 8 o'clock and the other will be at the same hour in Shiloh Baptist church, 517 West Fourth street. There will be good speakers at both meetings. Another meeting will be held in the Calvary Baptist church, Central avenue, near West Front street, on Friday night.

STATE CONVENTION OF PATROLMEN TOMORROW

Members of Local Patrolmen's Benevolent Association Going to Jersey City.

Twenty-seven members of the Plainfield branch of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, including delegations from this city, North Plainfield and Westfield, will attend the annual State convention at Jersey City tomorrow, leaving here in two large transit buses at 10 o'clock in the morning. The T. A. B. Fife and Drum Corps will go along, besides sixty invited guests and "Tuts" Van Ness as mascot.

Those going from Plainfield will be McGinley, Bader, Nolan, Martin, Saunders, Loerch, Lubeck, Russ, Hefty, Conway, Welesh, Birmingham, Dunlap, Wurth, Messener, Kriney and Muir, a total of eighteen out of the twenty-three men in the force. Nicholas Meyers, a former cop, but now retired, will be on hand, and North Plainfield will send Swody. Westfield will be represented by Deter, McNeely, Dobbs, Brazie, Burke, Lawrance and Howard. Marshal Logan may go from Fanwood. Sullivan from Scotch Plains, and Somerville will send at least one man.

Patrolmen McGinley and Bader are on the committee of arrangements. Through the courtesy of Hinchcliffe, the hatter, all the men will wear white felt hats with blue white ribbon and have pennants with the word "Plainfield" in blue on a white background.

The election of officers to head the State association for the ensuing year will be held and several of the local men are being prominently spoken of for one of the various offices. The officers of the local branch which includes the patrolmen from towns in this section of Union county, are Nolan, president; Birmingham, vice-president; Wich, secretary; Martin, financial secretary; Saunders, treasurer, and Herman, of Somerville, sergeant-at-arms.

FULL AEROPLANE EQUIPMENT FAVORED

Congressman Capstick Stands for Preparedness on Land, Sea and in the Air.

Congressman John H. Capstick, who is seeking a renomination, returned this week from Washington, and is now conducting an aggressive campaign throughout his district. He is much encouraged by the support that has been promised him and he feels quite confident that he will be renominated next Tuesday.

Mr. Capstick in his declaration as to what he stands for, goes further than some of the candidates who favor preparedness, in that he states that he is for "preparedness on land and sea and in the air," thereby meaning that he wants to see a well equipped aeroplane force that can cope with any conditions that might arise in the future. The Congressman is being ably assisted in his campaign work by his secretary, John E. Nichol, who from now until Primary day, will devote his entire time to the campaign.

THE WEATHER.

The temperature recorded by the State Trust Company today was as follows: 9 a. m., 65 degrees; 11 a. m., 67 degrees; 1 p. m., 73 degrees.

R. S. Campbell of Rockview avenue, has returned home after some time spent at West Hampton Beach.

SELECT REED TO CONDUCT PROBE

He Will Serve as Special Council for Board of Freeholders.

BLATZ IS ATTORNEY

Committee Decides to Invite Publicity in Its Investigation of Road Work in This County—Says State Engineers Acted as Inspectors.

Former Senator Charles A. Reed, of Plainfield, has been selected as special counsel to serve for the Union County Board of Freeholders in the investigation into the affairs of that board which has been started following a petition by Freeholder Elias F. Applegate, of Elizabeth, and forty-one other property owners. Mr. Reed will have charge of the direct examination of all witnesses brought before the Freeholder committee. Francis J. Blatz, of this city, will also serve in the investigation. Mr. Blatz is acting county attorney because of the illness of Judge W. R. Coddington.

At a meeting of the committee held yesterday afternoon the utmost publicity was allowed and reporters were invited to be present during the entire session. It is said that this plan will be followed during the entire investigation. It was brought out at the brief session of yesterday that all the road work which is under question was done under the supervision or inspection of engineers from the State, including Robert M. Meeker, State Supervisor of Roads, and E. M. Vail, of the road department.

At the meeting of the Freeholders held Monday afternoon the committee was directed to appear before Supreme Court Justice James J. Bergen on October 3, when the formal application for a summary court investigation is to be made, to aid the court in all ways possible in arriving at a conclusion as to the necessity for an investigation. Without modifying their contention that such an inquiry is needless and would result only in the incurring of an unnecessary expense, the freeholders declared by esolution yesterday that they will welcome an investigation to allay any suspicion which may have been aroused because of the allegations of Freeholder Applegate's privately engaged engineers.

The board met in special session at the call of Director Cady, "for the purpose of considering the matter of the application for a summary investigation into the financial affairs of the county of Union." Nothing came before the meeting except the report of the special committee, which was approved. The committee then held a brief meeting to decide upon its special counsel.

Freeholder Elias F. Applegate, who moved for the investigation of road contracts, and who resigned the chairmanship of the special committee, did not attend the meeting. County Engineer Jacob L. Bauer was present, but was not called before the committee. The committee meeting was held behind closed doors and news reporters were excluded from attending.

THOMAS C. JUDGE AND MISS MAY HUNT TO WED

The marriage of Miss Mary Marie Hunt, of this city, and Thomas Charles Judge, of Grove street, the borough, will take place at five o'clock this afternoon in St. Mary's church. The ceremony will be performed by the Rev. Walter A. Hennessey, curate of St. Mary's church, and will be witnessed by the immediate relatives and friends of the couple.

The couple will be attended by Miss Catherine Hunt, a sister of the bride, and Andrew Judge, Jr., a brother of the groom.

Following the wedding, Mr. and Mrs. Judge will leave on a honeymoon trip to be spent in Philadelphia. On their return they will reside on Linden avenue. Mr. Judge is employed by the Sauer Motor Company, of this city.

DEWITT HARRIS GOES TO EUROPE FOR WAR WORK

DeWitt Harris, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur M. Harris, of this city, sailed at noon today on the Kroonland for service in the Y. M. C. A. concentration camps of England. Mr. Harris is a Princeton student who is giving up his studies to engage in Y. M. C. A. work. He will be assigned to work among the German and Austrian prisoners held in England.

COLORED G. O. P. TO MEET.

CITY TAX RATE WILL BE $1.91

Union County Board Makes No Change Here for Coming Year.

SCHOOL TAX LOWERED

County Figures Raises Local Budget $14,135—Big Jump in Rates in Fanwood Boro and Township.

Plainfield's tax rate for the coming year will be the same as last year, $1.91, according to an announcement made today by Tax Collector William R. Townsend, who received the official figures from the county tax board at Elizabeth. The city's natural increase in valuation over last year is about $300,000 due to new buildings and factories. This does not include the new plant of the American Motor Corporation, which is now about completed.

The total valuation, including second class railroad property, is $31,514,582. The county tax is $116,499.52, an increase of $14,135, and the State school tax is $82,048.33, a decrease of $222. Plainfield will receive $4,299.25 on bank stock.

The new rate for both Fanwood borough and township take a big jump from $1.82 to $2.08 in the borough, while the township rate will be $1.92, an increase of thirty-seven points. The rates in both the township and borough has been gradually increased during the past few years, but this year is the biggest increase and is not well received by the taxpayers. The erection of a new school will also add to the burden of the taxpayers.

It has been the opinion of many persons, however, that the country districts have not paid enough toward the county expenses, and they view the present increase as only fair and reasonable.

WALTER H. GENNERICH TO WED MISS MANTZ

Ceremony Will Be Performed at Hotel Theresa, N. Y., This Afternoon.

Miss Pertha Mantz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Mantz, of Jackson avenue, the borough, will become the bride of Walter Henry Gennerich, son of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Gennerich, of New York city, at a ceremony to be performed at 5 o'clock this afternoon in the Hotel Theresa, 125th street, New York. The marriage will be performed by the pastor of the Lutheran church of West Forty-second street, New York, and will be witnessed only by the immediate relatives and a few invited friends of the couple.

Miss Mantz will wear a travelling suit of blue broadcloth with a hat to match. She will be attended by her sister, Miss Edith Mantz, as the bridesmaid. The latter will also wear a travelling suit. Wilfred Gennerich, a brother of the groom, will be the best man.

Following the wedding a reception will be held in the hotel, after which Mr. and Mrs. Gennerich will leave on a short honeymoon to be spent at Niagara Falls. On their return they will be at home to their friends in the newly furnished home which awaits them, at 217 Leland avenue this city. Mr. Gennerich is manager of the Singer Sewing Machine Company's office at Westfield.

FRANK NERO TO BE TRIED FOR LIQUOR SELLING

The case of the City of Plainfield against Frank Nero, charging him with the illegal selling of liquor, was postponed until Saturday morning, when it was brought before Judge De Meza in city court today on request of Judge W. A. Coddington, his attorney.

Nero is at the head of the commissary department at the laborers' camp at Rock avenue and has been letting the men have liquor when he had no license.

EPWORTH LEAGUE ENJOYS CORN ROAST ON MOUNTAINS

The Epworth League of the Grace M. E. church enjoyed a corn roast and social on the Neier estate on Johnston's Drive last night. The trip was made early in the evening, most of those present walking, and an enjoyable time was spent until midnight.

A program of singing and recitations was rendered by a number of those present as all were gathered about a huge fire, and roasted corn, sweet potatoes, and hot sausages were enjoyed.

TAX SALE ADJOURNED.

Announcement has been made to the effect that the borough tax sale has been adjourned for two weeks.

BULGARS CAPTURE FOUR VILLAGES

Fierce Fighting in Macedonia Develops Against the Allies.

FRENCH LOSE GROUND

Offensive of Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria on Somme Wenkens Menace of Peronne—Two Americans on Liner Torpedoed by Germans.

Paris, Sept. 20.—Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria yesterday launched a fierce offensive against the French troops in the region between Clery and the Somme River, who are menacing Peronne from the northwest. The assaults of the French positions in the northern part of this region were sharply checked, the War Office announced today. In the southern section the Germans succeeded in penetrating some advance trench elements, but were ejected by French counter attacks. In the region of Bouchavesnes, the statement says, a great artillery struggle is in progress.

Sofia, via Berlin, Sept. 20.—The War Office announced today that Bulgarian rtoops have captured four villages after fierce fighting on the Entente Allies' front in Macedonia. It is also stated that a great battle was developing to the advantage of the Bulgarians on the Roumanian front.

Roumanian Drive Halted.

Bucharest, via London, Sept. 20.—Teutonic forces in Transylvania have been heavily reinforced and have opened a strong offensive against the invading Roumanians to the west of Hermanstadt. A statement issued by the War Office today admitted that Roumanian troops gave way slightly in the Strell Valley before Teuton attack.

Serbs Take Two Towns.

Paris, Sept. 20.—Continuing their advance into their own country toward Monastir, Serbian troops have captured from the Bulgarians two important heights east of Cerna, the French War Office announced today.

Americans on Torpedoed Ships.

Washington, Sept. 20.—The British steamer Strathway was torpedoed by a German submarine in the English Channel Sept. 6, according to a despatch from W. W. Skinner, American Consul-General in London. There were two Americans aboard; W. W. Wooton, of Harrison, N. J., and T. Sweeney, of Bayonne, N. J. They were rescued and their affidavits are being forwarded to Washington. She was previously reported sunk, but a positive statement came to the State Department today that she had been torpedoed. It is expected that this case will reopen the submarine controversy with Germany.

PUBLIC SCHOOLS TO RE-OPEN OCTOBER 2

Dr. H. M. Maxson, Superintendent, Makes Statement Regarding Plans for Year.

Dr. Henry M. Maxson, superintendent of the Plainfield public schools, made the following statement today regarding school plans for the coming year:

"So many questions regarding quarantine of children returning to Plainfield from out of town have been asked me by parents that it seems wise to make a general statement regarding the matter.

"Schools are expected to open October 2. The Board of Education does not require health certificates from entering pupils. The Board of Health, however, has a regulation that all children under 16 returning to the city shall present a certificate form the local board of health or health inspector where they have been residing during the summer, stating that they have not been exposed to infantile paralysis.

"Children who present such certificates and all children over 16 will not be quarantined. All others are liable to quarantine by the Board of Health for two weeks after they return to Plainfield. There is no requirement regarding children in town, unless the are in quarantine at the time school opens."

MAYOR CALLS SHONTS FOR STRIKE CONFERENCE

New York, Sept. 20.—In a final effort to affect a settlement of the car strike, Mayor Mitchell arranged a conference with President Shonts for 4 o'clock this afternoon. Mr. Shonts stated that nothing could change the attitude of the company toward the union and that he expected his conference with the Mayor would be merely a matter of form.

EXEMPT FIREMEN HOLD THEIR ANNUAL MEETING

The annual meeting of the local branch of the Firemen's Relief Association was held last night in Excelsior Hall, when the election resulted in John Borman being chosen president; Ira Gage Walker, vice-president; William H. Lake, treasurer, and Philip Jahn, Recorder. Because no one could be found to go, the local association will not be represented at the annual convention at Atlantic City next week.

The business for this year was concluded had everything was found to be in excellent condition.

Miss Evelyn Buckley entertained a few of her friends at her home yesterday afternoon. Those present were the Misses Elizabeth Houston, Eleanor Walsh, Ruth Dunn, Evelyn Buckley, Mildred Elliot and Mrs. Sorenson.

Miss Emma Jahn has completed an embroidered counterpane which she expects to have on exhibition at the Trenton Fair.

The September meeting of the Fanwood Fire Company was held in the firehouse last night. The retirement of Charles Sheelen as chief was discussed, but no action on appointing a new one was taken, as his resignation does not become effective until the first of the year.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur O'Leary, of Brooklyn, who are stopping at the Homestead, have returned from spending a month's trip through the White Mountains.

William Beeken and Wright McAnneny are teamed up and entered in the tournament for the tennis doubles championship of the Westfield Golf Club. They survived the first round in last night's play and will now play the Van Deventer brothers.

The first meeting of the Ladie' Aid Society of the Methodist church since spring, will be held tomorrow afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Jespersen and son George, are stopping at Asbury Park.

South Plainfield.

John Dolan, of Jersey City, who has just returned from the Mexican border, has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Thornton, Sr., for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. William Wilson are entertaining the latter's sister, of Brooklyn.

Howard Colfax has been spending a few days with relatives in Newark.

Miss Laura Teeple has returned form a few days' visit to Perth Amboy.

Martin Rherig and family have moved into the home recently vacated by Michael Humphrey.

John Phillips has returned from Muhlenburg Hospital where he underwent an operation for appendicitis a few weeks ago.

COLLEGE GRIDIRON NOTES.

Milton P. Ghee, Jr., is heping to coach the Dartmouth squad. He is one of the Green's former star quarterbacks.

With a view to getting on the job early this season, Captain Welsh, of the Williams College eleven, remained at Williamstown all summer.

Coach Bob Folwell, of the Penn gridders, says the Quaker team is to indulge in no secret practice this year. The gates will be open at all times to the undergraduates and the public.

Cleo O'Donnell, the new football coach at Purdue, comes from the Everett (Mass.) High School, where he developed some of the greatest schoolboy teams the sport has ever known.

There will be no training camp for Foster Sanford's Rutgers' squad this year, but a house has been obtained for the team at New Brunswick where it will be possible to keep the players together and in strict training.

Sam Felton, who is coaching the punters at Harvard, is hard at it trying to develop a second Mahan. The old Crimson star believes he has promising material in McElwaine, Murray, Thatcher and Horween.

The Yale bowl, where the Eli gridiron battles are staged, has cost almost $738,000 to date, including the grounds, and another $150,000 will be required to complete the project as originally outlined.

Richard Cleveland, son of the late President Grover Cleveland, is trying out for the Princeton varsity eleven. He was a member of the freshman team last season.

Football warriors of the Western Conference are not permitted to start their workouts before Sept. 20, which is the date prescribed by the "Big Nine" rules for beginning the first practice.

T. H. Campbell, a former Harvard star, who has helped in coaching the Crimson squad for several years, has taken charge of the University of North Carolina football team.

Eddie Mahan, the all-American football star, is of the opinion that Princeton has the likeliest gridiron squad of any of the big Eastern colleges this year.

Several veterans of last year's Kansas University team are on the Mexican border and the coaches at Lawrence are anxiously hoping for their return at an early date.

Dr. H. L. Williams, the veteran Minnesota coach, is again at the helm of Gopher gridiron affairs.

The early work of Cornell's team will be watched closely by Eastern gridiron scouts. Should the Red and White show anything resembling the champion Cornell team of 1915, overtime work will immediately become the work of the prospective opponents of the Ithacans this fall.

"Live Bait" For Alligators.

The negroes of Jamaica, in the British West Indies, use "live bait" to catch alligators. They tie a puppy to a tree near the alligator's haunt and await developments with a gun. The puppy's yelp is exactly like the bark of the baby alligator. Naturally Mrs. Alligator comes out of her mudhole in the lagoon, thinking somebody is troubling her offspring. Then the negro gets to work with his gun, and Mrs. Alligator falls a victim to her maternal affection.

BORDER STAY CAUSE OF MUCH WORRY

Troopers Lose Good Jobs Because of Uncertainty of Orders.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 16.—Just what Uncle Sam intends to do with the New Jersey troops and how long they will be kept here is becoming a far more serious proposition than the folks back home realize. A majority of the officers and many enlisted men have business or family worries on their minds that are keeping them from showing their best brand of work and some of the soldiers declare they will be the next thing to paupers when they return home if the Government sees fit to force them to stay here another month.

One officer was notified this morning that a position to which he had been aspiring to for years would be filled by another man if he was not back on the job within two weeks and one of the captains owns one of the largest coal companies in the State, which he declares will be ruined if he is not given some authentic inkling of what the future here is going to produce. These are only two examples but they are typical of the plight that many of the guardsmen are in and while compelled to work under nervous strain caused by this uncertainty that can accomplish practically nothing. During the past week flood of notices have reached camp from big corporations and smaller concerns notifying various soldiers that their pay would either be sliced or they would be dropped from the payrolls after September 15. These firms agreed to provide for the enlisted men while they were at the border but the boastful pledges of two months ago have in many cases been broken since September 1.

The men can't help themselves. A big majority of them would a great deal rather be back at desks, in offices or behind counters than trudging around on these sun baked deserts carrying worries that are 2,700 miles distant from here. In plain English, they want to go home and are sore on the administration.

The local telegraph office is receiving scores of messages from back east each day for soldiers. Dependents want to know when father, brother or son is going to send home some money for even the paltry monthly wage of one of Uncle Sam's privates would be welcome in the present crisis. Guardsmen down here make no secret of the fact that they had little or nothing laid away for a "rainy day" and the more fortunate officers and enlisted men have loaned hundreds of dollars to soldier friends who relate pitiful tales of neglected families and pressure brought to bear on them by anxious creditors. The men don't know when they are going to be paid, no one seems to know. Life on the border is one constant round of worry and distress for those not blessed with an over-abundance of worldly goods.

If the Government would only give some definite information on the subject the men would be at least partially satisfied. If they were told that they will have to remain a year most of them would try to arrange their affairs accordingly and if Uncle Sam intends to send us home inside of a month he will win the everlasting gratitude of the soldier element by so saying.

Commanding officers are trying their best to solve the problem by furnishing the distracted militiamen with some line of work that will keep their minds occupied. Long hikes have been ordered for just this purpose but the strain is already beginning to tell on some of the more unfortunate and those close to them are fearful of the ultimate outcome. Something will have to come pretty quickly or conditions here are going to be demonstrated to people down east in a way that will cause them to sit up and take notice.

DEATH OF INFANT.

THE FORUM

Editor Plainfield Daily Press:—The principal criticism against the United States Senate is that it is not near enough, not responsive enough to the common people. This criticism amounts to a paradox when one considers the fight now being made against United States Senator James E. Martine. Here is a chance for the people to show that they appreciate disinterested, loyal and honest service.

By all the rules of the game Martine is entitled to a renomination by the Democratic party. The five years that he has served in the Senate I have been in the House and I have had an opportunity to watch his work. He has been a faithful, conscientious servant of the people and when Senator Kern, the majority leader said: "You have never failed in your championship of the cause of the people, and that's what you are, a genuine Democrat," he summed up Martine and his record.

There is not a man in either the Senate or the House whose every act has been entirely satisfactory to the leaders of his party. Martine, of course, is no exception to this rule but I would venture to say there is no other member whose record comes nearer being the real thing.

Martine himself will probably be surprised that I am such an earnest advocate of his nomination, but I find that I cannot stand idly by and without a word or an act permit this unfair attempt to defeat a Senator who has been so staunch in his Democracy, so earnest in his endeavors for the people, so upright and so conscientious.

When I thought of being a candidate for the Senate it was not because of any deficiency in Martine. It was to satisfy my personal ambitions.

I am for Martine and I hope he wins.

SPORTING

BOWLING SEASON AT COLUMBUS CLUB

"Mixed" Tournament Will Be Started on Friday Night.

At the Columbus Club, the bowling season is on. Although, as yet, no schedules have been completed in is understood that a "one-man" elimination tournament is now in progress and that one will be conducted on a larger scale throughout the rest of the season. Those who are in charge of bowling at the club are George Howe, Jack Duffy and Miles Wilson.

On Friday evening, a "mixed" tourney will be held. The evening will be known as "ladies' night," and bowling will be the chief attraction. It is highly probable that the local Knights of Columbus will enter a team in the State Bowling League. Also, it is very probable that, should a local fraternal league be organized, the Knights would be one of the first organizations to join.

SOUTHERN FELLOWS MAY PLAY FOOTBALL

It is Reported That Trust and Witherington Will Join Holy Cross.

Dunellen may have a representative football team. At least it is reported that Tommy Apgar, the manager of the Dunellen baseball team, is considering the idea. Plenty of material for such a team can be secured, according to those who are interested in the movement.

George Trust and Witherington, the Mobile lad, who played baseball with Dunellen last Saturday, will, in all probability join the Dunellen team as halfbacks. If Tommy Apgar does not organize a team, it is said that Witherington and Trust will join the Holy Cross football squad.

Both George and the Mobile lad have reputations as football players. Each played on the North Carolina "Addies" and each took care of the halfback work. On the same team with the two was Davy Robertson, who is now an outfielder with the New York Giants. Witherington is employed in this city at the present time and evidently likes the surrounding.

ABSTAINER COURTS WILL SOON BE BUSY

Rufus Larew Will Probably Hold "Tryouts" Within Fortnight.

Rufus Larew, who is the manager of the T. A. B. S. basketball team, expects to have a "crackerjack" combination, according to present indications. It is highly probable that Eugene Lidgate will again coach the squad.

Although no try-outs have been held as yet, it is understood that Art Kyle, Benny Rosenson, Frank Lee and several members of last year's team will be out again this year. Mr. Larew has not arranged his schedule, but it is understood that he is working it out.

By Peter F. Carney.

Three of the five trap shooting clubs organized during the month of August were formed in the State of Illinois. The other two were formed in Maryland and South Dakota. These five clubs make sixty-four new trap shooting organizations that have been brought to life this summer by the offer of the Interstate Association for the Encouragement of Trap Shooting to present a silver trophy to every newly organized club.

The new clubs are located at:

Roanoke Club, Roanoke, Ill.

Ocoya Gun Club, Ocoya, Ill.

Hinckley Trap Shooters Club, Hinckley, Ill.

Rome Gun Club, Rome, South Dakota.

These sixty-four clubs have been formed in twenty-five States, with Iowa leading with ten; and Illinois next with seven. Indiana has formed five and Kansas four. California, Delaware, West Virginia, Ohio, New York and Nebraska have formed three clubs each; Minnesota, Pennsylvania, Virgina, Michigan, South Dakota, Maryland, two; and Tennessee, Missouri, Colorado, Texas, District of Columbia, Connecticut, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Montana, one each.

WILL PHILLIES REPEAT?

A recent poll of the league managers showed a majority picking the Phillies to again romp home a winner in the National League pennant scramble.

Manager Pat Moran is given great credit for putting the Phils on the baseball map. Of the eleven managers who tried their hands at guiding the team since 1883, Pat is the only pilot who brought home a pennant.

The Philadelphia "Athletics," as the team was then known, poined the National League in 1876, the first year of the organization. They dropped out of the circuit at the close of the first season. In 1883 the Phillies rejoined the National and have been members of the league ever since.

In the past 33 years of pastiming the Phils have finished in the first division 23 times and 10 times in the second division. Only twice have they finished a season in last place.

Alexander the Great, the Phils' star pitcher, is nearly the 30 mark in games won for the season. This excellent heaver stands a good chance to better his last year's record of 31 games won and 10 games lost.

Outfielder George Whitted, who was traded by the Braves to the Phillies last year, has developed into a star pastimer. He is hitting in the .300 set and stands well up among the leading National League base-stealers.

Pat Moran's champs have been traveling in the second division in team batting, but are well up towards the top of team fielding.

Eppa Rixey shares with Alexander the credit due to giving the best air-tight pitching. The tall Virginia twirler is having the banner season of his career.

Stock is the leading hitter, Paskert the leading run-getter and Whitted the leading base-stealer performing with the Quakers.

Grover Alexander has fractured the National League's shutout record by pitching 14 shutout games this season. The old mark was 13, held by Christy Mathewson.

The average age of the Quaker players in 26 years. "Gavvy" Cravath, who confesses to 34 years, is the oldest member of the Moran regulars, and the youngest is Milton Stock, aged 23.

Whitted and Dugey, two young members of the Quakers, have already taken part in two world's series, and are hopeful of adding a third to their list. Both were members of the Braves in 1914 and of the Phils last season.

Pat Moran, the Phils' pilot, was born at Fitchburg, Mass., February 7, 1876, and began his baseball career as a catcher for the Lyons New York State League club in 1897. He joined the Boston Nationals in 1901 and during the next ten years he backstopped for Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia. An injured arm put him out of harness in 1911 and he was then appointed coach for the Phils. Four years later he became manager of the team.

VOTE FOR

CHARLES N. FOWLER

FOR CONGRESS

Because: This is the most important election since the Civil War.

Because: It is just as important to have a trained legislator in Congress at such a critical time as to have a man of military training lead an army into battle.

Because: Of Mr. Fowler's ability, equipment, long experience and conspicuous services during the sixteen years he was a Member of Congress.

Because: He is a recognized authority upon the Tariff, the Merchant Marine and Banking, the three most important questions to receive attention at the coming session of Congress.

If this were your own private business would you not vote for Mr. Fowler? Then this should be the test of your honor as a man, your party loyalty and your patriotism.

PROGRESSIVES APPRECIATE WORK OF CHAIRMAN HOPKINS

Members of the State Progressive committee who attended the meeting held at Morristown last week, when Chairman J. A. H. Hopkins was defeated in his purpose to have a full Progressive ticket placed in the field, feel that possibly an injustice was done Mr. Hopkins by some of the published reports. They all appreciate what Mr. Hopkins has done for the Progressive party, realizing that he has given much of his time and money, but they could not agree with him regarding a ticket. Mr. Hopkins let it be known that he intends to vote the Democratic ticket, in view of the fact that his party failed to decide on a ticket of its own.

INTER-STATE FAIR ONE BIG EVENT OF THE YEAR

Under the caption "Great Events Cast Shadows Before," the Trenton Sunday Times-Advertiser has the following to say regarding the Inter-State Fair to be held in that city this month:

"The advance sale of seats for the club house and grandstand which will begin this week, arouses public attention to the fact that the Inter-State Fair is only a week off. Not that the people for several score miles around Trenton are apt to overlook the bright spot in the autumn calendar which this spectacular occasion regularly fills. Mere mention of its coming brings pleasant visions of fruits and flowers and vegetables piled head high, of blooded stock, mammoth swine, well-groomed horses, fancy poultry, and the newest farm machinery in brisk action. Cider mills at work, glib fakirs parting you from your loose coin, dancing girls and sideshow freaks, "hot-dog" peddlers, bands blaring the popular airs and vaudeville performers doing daring feats, enter into the mental picture with kaleidoscopic effect. And the throng itself, fifty thousand strong, in which you are an atom, all with smiling faces and lazily moving from point to point, gives the finishing touch to a spectacle which cannot be duplicated hereabouts in the whole round of the year's interesting experiences.

Are you going? Well, we guess, and the whole family, too."

Expert Advice For the Automobile Owner

Queries and Replies Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car

Will you please explain to me the difference between a reversible and an irreversible steering gear?

With the reversible type steering gear it is possible to steer the front wheels by applying power direct to them, whereas in the irreversible type it is impossible to move the front wheels without applying power to the steering wheel.

Most heavy pleasure cars are equipped with irreversible steering gears, since they often travel over rough roads at a high rate of speed. The irreversibility tends to do away with the back lash in the wheel that would be felt in a car equipped with a reversible steering gear under the same conditions.

Most commercial vehicles, on the other hand, have a reversible steering gear. In making deliveries they often hit the curb at an angle unless driven very carefully. The reversible type often prevents the bending of the steering knuckle arms.

What is a brake equalizer and why is it used?

The brake equalizer is a device which, when the brakes are applied, equalizes the pressure so that there will be no more pressure on the brake operating on the right wheel than there is on the left.

It is obvious that when traveling on a slippery street one brake holding tighter than the other will cause the car to skid sideways. Most cars are equipped with brake equalizers, but it does not follow that the brakes will hold equally, because, even though perfectly equalized, one of the brake bands may be more greasy than the other and consequently will not hold as well.

Which should wear the longer, the right or left front tire under ordinary conditions?

There will be very little difference in the wear of the two front tires. The fact that the driver usually sits on the left side and frequently is the only extra weight in the car would tend to cause slightly more wear on the left tire. On the other hand, the fact that most of the turns are made to the left, when turning around, would cause the right tire to travel the greatest distance, and, on this basis, it would wear more quickly. Taken all in all, the wear is about equal in ordinary cases.

What is the temperature in the ordinary gas engine at the time of explosion?

The heat of explosion varies from 2,000 to 3,000 F., depending upon the temperature of the atmosphere, design, conditions, etc.

I have a 1914 four cylinder car with a two speed rear axle. From fifteen miles an hour and upward, with the spark retarded, whether on the level or uphill, the car has a peculiar thump or knock. All the motor bearings are tight, the crank shaft true, the motor is tight in the frame, the flywheel tight, the universal joint not worn, but still the car knocks. It is not as noticeable when running on advanced spark. Can you tell me what causes this?

From your information this seems to be merely a spark knock, due to having the spark either too far advanced for heavy pulling or too far retarded in relation to the engine speed. Possibly there is considerable carbon in the engine, accounting for the vibration and knocking. Have your car overhauled.

Is it good practice to put a lot of lubricating oil into gasoline so as to oil above the pistons, etc., of a new car?

On a new car in which the motor is particularly stiff the addition of a small quantity of oil in the gasoline would probably prove beneficial to guard against cylinder bearings. A continuation of this practice, however, is likely to result in undue trouble with sooted spark plugs and excessive carbon deposits.

In the case of an electrically equipped car in which the ammeter shows no charge or discharge and the lights will not burn nor the horn sound, but the starter works all right, will it do any harm if a wire is placed across the back of the ammeter from terminal to terminal?

Judging from your description, your trouble is caused by a loose connection in the ammeter, and to connect across the ammeter terminals, thus cutting it off, will not do any harm except that you are remedying the symptom rather than the possible cause of the trouble. It is suggested that when the opportunity offers you have the ammeter examined.

How are the rear axle halves held in the axle casing of a semifloating axle?

They are supported by one bearing adjoining the differential housing and another within the rear wheel hub, on each.

How large a rear axle shaft would be required for a car weighing from 600 to 700 pounds?

A three-quarter inch shaft of alloy steel stock should be heavy enough to carry the load you mention.

How can a switch be put on different makes of starting and lighting systems to keep from charging the battery when fully charged, or is it only necessary to place a switch so as to open one side of your generator line? Does it harm the generator?

With the majority of equipment a switch put on the open side of the generator line is all that is necessary. It cannot harm the generator in any way.

How can one tell platinum points from tungsten points, and what difference does it make with the running of the car when one uses tungsten magneto points or genuine platinum points?

The only way to make certain of a composition of sparking points is chemical analysis. Tungsten magneto points are claimed to give at least as good service as platinum points.

Is it possible to drive a chain driven car if one chain is broken?

It is possible only by fastening the free sprocket in some way so as to prevent it turning, and then it would not be advisable to drive for any great distance.

Due to the action of the differential, the sprocket on the side where the chain was broken, having no resistance or load to carry, would revolve just twice as fast as the differential frame itself. The sprocket on the other side, where the chain is intact, having a load to carry, would be motionless.

Why does running with a late spark tend to overheat a motor?

Overheating is due to a late spark because combustion takes place so late that the gases have not had opportunity to be cooled by expansion before the exhaust opens. The result is that the engine runs much hotter than it would if explosion occurred on upper dead center, as it is supposed to do.

What preparation do you recommend for cleaning the highly polished reflectors of electric headlights without scratching them?

Use a little jewelers' rough or whiting, applying with a moistened cloth and rubbing dry with another cloth.

While the engine of my car is cold there is a clicking noise somewhere, but after it is heated up a little the noise almost disappears. I just put in a new wristpin, set the valves and adjusted the bearings. Can you tell me the cause and remedy of this?

It is probably a piston slap, due to one or more of the pistons having become worn from long usage. It is impossible to diagnose a knock from the description you give.

What is the balance between piston displacement and crank shaft speed? By this I mean that a 275 cubic inch engine will permit of a higher crank shaft speed than a 450 or 600 cubic inch engine. The point I wish to know is, what is the best balance to make between piston displacement and crank shaft speed?

You can employ practically the same piston speed for any bore of automobile engine between two and one-half and four inches, which covers nearly all the sizes in use today. Crank shaft speed bears no relation to piston displacement, but simply to stroke. A good engine should deliver a little more than its formula rating at a piston speed of 1,000 feet per minute. It should be able to run at a piston speed of 2,000 feet per minute, and it is not unusual to find the peak of a horsepower curve just about coincident with a piston speed of 2,000 feet per minute. It is only when the stroke is six inches that this means a crank shaft speed of 2,000 revolutions per minute.

What should be the condition of the compression chamber in a motor when working to best advantage? Should the piston head and compression space be dry and sooty or in an oily condition?

The condition of the combustion chamber should be as clean as possible. An oily condition indicates too much oil and imperfect combustion. The cylinder will necessarily be sooty on account of the products of combustion. While there should be no carbon residue, nevertheless it is impossible to realize such ideal conditions.

In taking the valves out of my motor I notice that the exhaust valves are much spotted. One valve is slightly warped. Will you kindly advise me whether it is necessary to get all new valves or whether it is necessary to get the one new one only?

You have allowed the valves to go too long without grinding; hence the pitting of the valve seats. It will be necessary to grind the valves until these pits or spots disappear and a clean, smooth seat is obtained. In the case of a warped valve stem it is best to replace this with a new one. In replacing it will also be necessary to grind in order to obtain a proper seating of the valve. The exhaust valves especially should be ground frequently. In order to obtain the best results from a motor it is advisable to resurface all the valves every 2000 or 3000 miles. If this is done frequently there is less work, and much better results are obtained from the engine.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

FRANKLIN MURPHY

FOR

UNITED STATES SENATOR

His Record Is a Record of Service

As Governor of New Jersey he secured the enactment of the first enforcible Child Labor Law, the Department of Labor Act, the Tenement House Commission Act, first Direct Primary Act, Law Compelling Banks to Pay Interest on State Deposits and much other helpful legislation.

As an Employer he has practised what he preached. He never has had labor troubles with his employes. He has been sharing profits with his men since 1902. He inaugurated a pension system for employes in 1908. So well treated have his men been that 110 of them have been with him an average of 19 years each.

As a Citizen his time and his services always have been at the call of his city, his State or his country, for any civic duty.

Franklin Murphy began DOING service for his fellow men years before some other persons even began TALKING service.

He submits his candidacy for United States Senator and asks for support on his long record of achievements.

P. S. C. ADOPTS NEW FINANCIAL POLICY

Will Aid in Extension and Development of the Company's Property.

A new policy for the financing of Public Service extensions and developments was inaugurated by the directors of the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey at the monthly meeting in Newark yeterday afternoon when the board passed a resolution authorizing the issue of $5,000,000 new stock, part of the $25,000,000 additional capital stock authorized last summer.

This $5,000,000 issue is to be offered to stockholder of record October 2 at par on a basis of twenty per cent. of their present holdings. The stockholders will be privileged to pay for the new stock taken by them any time before January 1, 1917. Those who so desire can acquire the stock allotted to them on or before November 1, next, and in such cases the corporation will pay such persons five per cent. on their money until January 1, when all of the $5,000,000 will begin to earn dividends.

For the last few years the financing of the corporations needs was provided by bond issues and the $5,000,000 stock issue authorized yesterday represents what is required for the purposes stated during 1917. It is understood that the policy to be followed is to make such further issues at such times as needs require as will use up the $25,000,000 additional capital stock authorized.

The directors also ordered paid a quarterly dividend of two per cent., payable September 30 to stockholders of record September 25.

GREAT NEED FOR WORKHOUSE SHOWN

C. O. S. Presents Interesting Report of Activities During Summer.

People who are away for the summer, sometimes forget that for some of their fellow citizens, left at home, there is such a thing as a "vacation," for whom the matter of just living is a problem. For these the Charity Organization Society keeps open and stands ready to give such help as may be needed, financial aid or advice, or, what is more important for ultimate good, the working out of a plan for permanent betterment of the applicant.

The special contributions for the summer work amounted to $269, but the epidemic of infantile paralysis has been a serious handicap in carrying on the summer work in usual channels. There could be no day trips and excursions for the children and mothers with babies, and the sending of children and young people out to the country had to be greatly curtailed. Instead the society has given more orders for milk and groceries than usual, to substitute, in some degree, the benefits which the children would otherwise have received from outings. Another line which has been followed was the screening of doors and windows, the providing of mosquito netting for the beds of babies and children, to protect them as far as possible from flies and mosquitos. Whether for this or other reasons houses so screened did not have a single case of infantile paralysis.

The day nursery was also closed, which cut off from a number of women their usual sources of income laundry or day's work, as they had no place to leave their children. This is, of course, only temporary, and will be relieved when the nursery opens October 2.

During June, July and August an average of 151 families per month were given aid, and nearly half of this number under the head of "non-support." This does not mean that the male head of the family was out of work for, with the exception of the chronic cases, drunks and incapacitated there has been plenty of work for every one; in many cases the men have had money and spent it in other ways than on their families. This brings up again, the great need for a workhouse or its equivalent.

As has been said before "in Plainfield when a man refuses to support his family, he is sent to jail," which is for many men no punishment, at all. Many communities have a more economic and practical way of dealing with this form of delinquency in the shape of a workhouse, or statutes which compel a man to spend his nights in jail and work at some job during the day. In any case his pay is taken charge of by the proper authorities and goes in part or in whole to the support of his family. Some solution of this problem must be made for the ultimate benefit of this community

With the opening of the schools there will be a great demand for children's clothing, both for boys and girls, shoes are particularly desired Telephone 103 and packages will be called for.

Important Sale of Women's Smart, New Coats, Suits, Dresses

$19.75

Important in very many ways.

Mainly so because every coat, every suit, every dress in this sale is a special value, and but for this sale would rightfully cost you considerably more.

Then, too, the models are the newest possible to secure.

The trimmings are what fashion devotees are particular about.

The styles are typical of the new season.

And they are distinctively "wearable," which means that you are practically certain to find a suit, coat and dress becoming to you.

The combined buying power of a group of stores in New York, Newark, Baltimore, Buffalo, Louisville and Minneapolis made possible this purchase and this low price of $19.75. In these six mentioned cities fashionable women will select modish coats, suits and dresses at $19.75 and realize their wish—besides saving an appreciable amount.

These Garments Now Going Right Smartly

They are being picked right and left, and only naturally, for their good value is at once apparent—most unusual for $19.75.

A PREPAREDNESS THAT IS AMERICAN.

When leaders in uplift from all parts of the country meet in Grand Rapids, Michigan, next month at the Recreation Congress they will plan a "Preparedness" for America—the purpose of which is to bring about cleaner, better citizens, and every community should be represented at this gathering. Thomas Mott Osborne, of Sing Sing prison, will be there, and he will tell how he is reforming the most desperate, depraved men in New York through recreation work, which he calls "re-creation." William H. Wirt, superintendent of the public schools of Gary, and originator of the famous Gary system of sane instruction for children, will also be present and will discuss the vital importance of recreation activities and the play instinct in education. Next to teaching people how to pray, teaching them how to play is the most important work to be accomplished in the making of useful citizens. A child that learns the lesson of the playground cannot help but learn the lesson of the schoolroom, and because of the strength and vitality given in the few hours of recreation in youth the man or woman will be able to realize much more on his or her mentality. Vigor and efficiency must go with knowledge or knowledge cannot be made to serve humanity. Plainfield people have learned to know the value of recreation work because of the good results obtained through its own volunteer committee, and that appreciation is growing each day.

The Edge campaign bureau is sending broadcast to voters a statement that Mr. Edge will sign a local option bill if it is passed, and by inuendo making it appear that he is the only candidate who feels that way about it. The truth of the matter is that Colonel Austen Colgate has made the same declaration a number of times, and there has never been any doubt about his stand on the matter, if he is selected as governor. Colgate's personal record is of such character that the people know that he will do as he says he will, and Plainfielders should not be too nasty in accepting the statements made by supporters of his opponent. Colgate supporters are making no predictions as to the result of the primary vote, but they do know that their candidate is gaining strength every day. He will undoubtedly carry Essex and Hudson counties by a substantial majority, and there will be a lot of surprises in some of the South Jersey counties, where Edge is supposed to have great strength. The reassuring part of the campaign is that the Edge supporters are all old line, machine politicians, and that none of the Progressive element favor him. The great mass of the voters are tired of this domination, and they will not vote for Edge, either at the primaries or at the general election in November in case he is chosen. The nomination of Edge means the election of a Democratic governor, and the State has been under the rule of that party long enough. "Nominate Colgate to win" is a pretty good slogan.

Entries already received indicate that the fifth annual show of the Plainfield Kennel Club will be the largest dog exhibition that has been held by the organization. The members have worked hard and long to make the show, which is to be held on Saturday, a success from every standpoint, and it is now up to the public. In order to stimulate interest the proceeds will go to the Volunteers' Auxiliary which has been formed to aid families of men now at the border with Troop D. By attending the show Plainfielders will have opportunity to see some of the finest dogs in the country, and also to aid a worthy cause.

How these political parades dwindle! The Philadelphia morning papers said that at a celebration in honor of Senator Edge, held in Atlantic City, his home town, one night last week, there were 2,500 people in line. The Newark News gave the figures at 1,000. Incidentally Edge's advertising agency sends a lot of business to these newspapers. A well known Jerseyman, who happed to be in Atlantic City at the time took the trouble to count the marchers, and he declares that 158 started, 32 joined the line of march, and 153 were left in the crowd at the finish of the parade. That is surely some shrinkage.

Just about the time Wilson and Carranza agree on peace plans, up jumps Villa and they have to begin all over again. There can be no peace with him in sight. It looks as though the bandit will have to be made a partner in any settlement of the trouble between the two countries, preferably a silent partner.

Y. M. C. Association Talks

Mr. Business Man, have you ever thought that the Y. M. C. A. can be of service to you? Do you know that although the average length of life has been increased during the last twenty years, the death rate of men over forty years of age has increased in the same period of time? The cause is easy to see. Our medical men have been able to wage a most successful warfare on most communicable diseases and have been very successful in the conquest of children's diseases. On the other hand, diseases due to sedentary occupations, and to over-eating by persons so employed, have increased during the last twenty years. How about you, Mr. Business Man? Do you have reserve energy after a hard day in the office, or do you have that all-in tired feeling? Is your appetite good? Don't wait too long before you do something. All you need is an hour or two each week with men like yourself on the Y. M. C. A. gym floor. Corrective exercise, friendly competition in simple gym games, a plunge in the pool and brisk rub with a rough towel will make you feel like you did when you were twenty-five. Come in and see the secretary of physical director. We have a place for you.

THE ALLENTOWN FAIR IS IN FULL BLAST

The Allentown Fair, which is now in full blast and which will run all during this week and up until and inclusive of Friday is drawing great crowds. This year's fair in every respect surpasses previous fairs held in Allentown.

Hundreds of thousands of people have already visited the fair. Every one has come away more than satisfied, and in a great many instances are already looking forward to the fair next year.

The horses are breaking all records. The poultry and pigeon display is the finest collection ever gotten together under one roof in this whole United States.

Vaudeville acts, circus acts and comedy, which are too numerous to mention, attracted thousands of people. This year's fair from the present outlook will double last year's capacity, but is twice as interesting as any fair ever held in America.

The fair will be open morning and afternoon all this week until Friday, inclusive, and all automobiles will be parked free.

PROGRESSIVES APPRECIATE WORK OF CHAIRMAN HOPKINS

Prof. Livingston Barbour, of New Brunswick, who is the Prohibition candidate for United States Senator, will speak from an automobile at West Front street and Madison avenue tomorrow night at 8:30 o'clock. The talk will be illustrated by stereopticon views. Prof. Barbour has been most active during the campaign and it is said that he is receiving much encouragement from his friends in his candidacy.

Prof. Barbour will be accompanied here by a number of workers, who are making a tour thoughout the whole district.

The Man Behind.

We have heard the ringing praises
Of the man behind the gun;
How he's made our nation mighty
With an aim A No. 1.
We have heard in song and story
All the flattery that goes
With the job of fighting blazes
To the man behind the hose.

But there is another hero
Who is never lauded high,
Though he had a job of climbing
Ever upward toward the sky;
Both the other two we've mentioned
He has beaten by a rod;
In the building of the nation—
It's the man behind the hod.

One for the Typos.

A printer tells this: In the old days when a typo laid off he had to provide a substitute. A printer named Jenks, wanting to lay off, was compelled to persuade a man who was not a printer to take his place at the case, explaining to him that he could be taken suddenly sick and get away from the office before the fraud was discovered.

Shortly after the fake substitute lined up before the case with its curious little boxes of loose type, he was seized with fake pains.

"What's the matter with you?" asked the foreman, coming to his side.

"I don't know," said the fake printer. "I'm terribly sick. I can't work. You can see that. I'll have to close up for the night."

And he reached up and turned the upper case down over the lower one.

- Proctor's Theatre -

Thomas Dixon, the writer of "The Fall of a Nation," prophesied some time ago that the more loving theatre-goers would arise to a point in a short time when they would pay as high as one and two dollars admission to see an extraordinary specially prepared film production with original music. That day has already come, and the wide awake people of New York and other large cities and towns have come to the conclusion that they are now willing to go over the ordinary ten cents to see something substantial and extraordinarily entertaining. Therefore the patrons of Proctor's Theatre will have the chance to witness one of the most excellent film productions—"The Fall of a Nation,"—that has ever been shown in Plainfield. Although this is a high priced picture, the management has decided not to set the admission price at two dollars, as this theatre has a large seating capacity, and as there will be four shows daily (which will give every one a good chance to witness this spectacle). Seats should be secured in advance to avoid waiting in line on the day of the opening, as they have done in other cities where this picture has been played. "The Fall of a Nation" at Proctor's today, tomorrow and Friday.

.· Plainfield Theatre.·.

A pretentious list of vaudeville offerings will be introduced to amusement seekers at the Plainfield Theatre beginning tomorrow afternoon and continuing until the end of the week. Many of the acts have recently appeared on big time circuits and come here with a long list of successful engagements to their credits.

A miniature musical comedy, entitled "The Garden of Love," presenting a set of beautiful and winning girls, is the big feature of the program. The production is unique, original and pleasing, and carries a carload of its own scenery. The cast consists of ten pretty girls, who are trained singers and expert dancers. Beautiful lighting effects add to the brilliance of the spectacle.

Richards and Milano will entertain the audience with musical numbers in duet style and the Sherwood Trio are said to be past masters in the art of singing and dancing, and are said to be far above the ordinary run of the single acts variety. Vassar and Arkins, comedians, provide amusement in an inimitable manner popular songs and the latest dances being on their twenty-minute presentation.

In addition to the vaudeville show the recent photoplay, "It Can't Be Done," taken in Plainfield and in which Plainfield young men and women take part, will be shown at every performance. The picture portrays many beautiful scenes in our own city and the acting of the amateurs is said to be almost equal to many of the noted artists of filmdom. Don't miss seeing your friends in the movies. Pathe comedies and dramas also form a portion of the program, and the Pathe Weekly, a pictorial of current happenings, concludes the daily show. Matinee performances start at 2:15 and the evening performance at 7 p. m. Popular prices prevail at all shows.

No better show has ever graced the boards than the coming attraction at the Plainfield Theatre, Monday, September 25, afternoon and night, when Joe Hurtig presents Stone and Pillard, those most versatile and grotesque eccentrics on the American stage.

The show, which is titled "The Ragdoll in Ragland," is built on suggestions of George Stone. There is no one who has a better conception of how to keep the feet in constant motion than this eminent comedian, who claims that this is the dancing age, and there is no one who understands his ideas as well as Joe Hurtig. Stone is a great believer in eccentric dances, eccentric characters, eccentric comedy and grotesque scenes, and Joe Hurtig is a producer who absolutely believes in snappy, rapid fire exploitations of burlesque entertainments. So, the two great minds got together and created the fastest and swiftest hurricane of fun that ever swept through stageland. It's practically a volcanic eruption of all the elements which play havoc with the laughing muscles of spectators.

"The Ragdoll in Ragland" is not only a hurling whirlwind of merriments, but its unsurpassed splendor and color display is dazzling and bewildering. The plot is unique, and introduces Stone as Raggy, a ragdoll which has been the toy of Twinkle Tootsie (Etta Pillard). Raggy comes to life, and that he is very much so is displayed in two gigantic acts, which carry the spectator into the land of the Brownies, Doll-land, Ragland and every other land. The spectator also meets Red Riding Hood, Phoebe Snow, the Fairy Wolf, Tootsie's pet cow and so many other popular characters and quadrupeds that appear in stories from fairyland that there is a constant arrival and departure of new grotesques. And everybody dances over "The End of the World," "Off the Earth," "Into Heaven," "Out of Heaven," and there is really so much excitement going on that the spectators will be kept rather busy watching this three-ring circus of the burlesque stage. Scenic splendor and the gorgeousness of the costuming are unparalleled.

COLGATE SHOWN TO BE A HUMANITARIAN

His Record in Legislature One of Remarkable Service to People.

Trenton, Sept. 20.—"Colonel Austen Colgate is going to win handsomely the Republican nomination for Governor on Tuesday, September 26, entirely on his record of service to the whole people of the State," said Frank J. Bock, campaign manager for Colonel Colgate today.

"The idea is everywhere prevailing that Colonel Colgate is the strongest candidate the Republican party can name and that he will lead the party to a sure victory in November," continued Mr. Bock.

"Reports from all parts of the State indicate that the man is much bigger than any effort that has been put forth for him by his workers.

"Printing his record has been an important factor in this campaign, which has shown that the man running is ahead of others simply because his record of service of eight years as a legislator has been clean, upright and thoroughly constructive.

"A complete study of the records of eight legislatures of which Colonel Colgate has been a member discloses the fact that he stand first among legislators in the introduction and support of real reform bills looking to the complete emancipation of the people from undue control on their political affairs, and is the acknowledged leader in humanitarian bills and labor measures. It was Colonel Colgate who led the forces against child slavery in New Jersey.

"It has always been Austen Colgate who has led the forces and pointed the way to ameliorate the condition of workmen, of the consumptive, of the blind, and whose bills have shown the way to rob old age of its dependency terrors.

"Looking at the human side of the bills Colonel Colgate has introduced from 1906 to date, one is struck with the vast study the man has given to humanitarian measures. This employer of thousands of contented men and women has shown by his bills that he has given a great amount of study to the conditions of the toilers. His bills, if they had all been enacted into laws would have helped this State far on the road to the contented conditions which some of the countries had reached in Europe before the war.

"Perhaps no man in public life in New Jersey has given much thought to improving permanently the condition of all men as Austen Colgate, and therefore his friends and admirers say he is just the man to have at the head of the State Government. Austen Colgate's past works have shed a light on what his acts as Governor would be. His work for labor has been co-jointly with his acts of humane legislation, always with the man who labors and the woman who works, believing that the causes of capital is best served by a contented, well fed and housed citizenry.

"Colonel Colgate helped put on the statute books the present corrupt practices law, a measure drawn by Senator Prince, of Passaic, after the Democrats had confessed their inability to draft such an act. He voted for the reformatory for women, and was a factor in forcing through the limited franchise law, under which the future of the people is not absorbed and taxed by corporations.

"The civil service commission, extending now nearly all over the State municipalities, was fought for by Colonel Colgate, and he was a factor in putting through the mosquito extermination commissions, creating the department of charities and corrections, the reform riparian act, all of the reform labor legislation even being the pioneer in employers' liability legislation, the playgrounds measures, widow's pensions, for the commission to study and improve fishing and hunting, all automobile legislation, including reciprocity acts and pure food laws.

"Colonel Colgate led in the child labor legislation, the creation of the public utility commissions, free bridges across the Delaware acts, and trolley freights.

"The record of Legislator Colgate is in the minutes of the Legislature and in the laws of the State, and that is his platform on which he is running for the Republican nomination for Governor."

WHITE RIBBONERS TO MEET IN RAHWAY

The thirty-first annual convention of the Union County W. C. T. U., will be held in the Second Presbyterian church, Rahway, tomorrow, with morning, afternoon and evening sessions. Mrs. M. D. Tomlinson, of this city, the county president, will preside at the various sessions. The morning session which begins at 10 o'clock will be devoted to annual reports, election of officers, election of delegate to the national convention and appointment of committees.

The afternoon session will begin at 2 o'clock and there will be the reports of the superintendents of the various departments, including a demonstration by the Loyal Temperance Legion. At the evening session at 8 o'clock, Mrs. Edith Smith Davis, world's and national superintendent of scientific temperance instruction in public schools and colleges, will give a lantern lecture on "The Fight o. Science Against Alcohol."

The trolley cars pass the Rahway church where the convention is to be held and it is especially desired that a large representation from Plainfield attend.

MISSIONARY CIRCLE HOLDS FIRST FALL MEETING

The first fall meeting of the Women's Missionary Circle of the First Baptist church, held in the lecture room yesterday afternoon, was largely attended and much interest was sown in the discussion of the winter's work. Mrs. J. Hervey Peckham, president of the circle, presided and introduced Mrs. Willard H. Smith, of Haddonfield, who is the State president of the Women's American Baptist Home Missionary Society. The latter addressed the women on the work of the organization of which she is the head and also spoke at some length on the five-year program in the Baptist denomination.

An interesting account of the Northfield conference was given by Miss Amy Conant, of this city. She attended the conference this year. The devotional portion of the meeting was lead by Mrs. George Robins.

During the business meeting, Miss Conant was elected recording secretary of the circle to succeed Mrs. Howard Case, who recently tendered her resignation. A social hour with refreshments concluded the meeting.

She Told Them Her Troubles.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

The Tale of A Girl Who Hated to Spin.

[Adapted from Grimm's Fairy Tales.]

WHEN daddy said he knew a good story the children climbed upon his knees, and this is what he told: "There was once a girl who was rather lazy and hated to spin. Her mother could not make her spin. At last her mother lost patience and gave her a beating. Then the girl bawled so loudly that the queen, who was driving past, heard her and stopped to ask what was the matter.

"'This child's screams can be heard out in the street,' said the queen to the mother. 'Why do you beat her?'

"The mother was ashamed to tell the truth, so she answered: 'She likes to spin so well that I can't get her to stop. I am too poor to buy her all the flax she wants.'

"'I am never happier than when I hear the sound of the humming wheels,' said the queen. 'Let me have your daughter, and I will take her home to my castle. She shall have all the flax she needs and spin to her heart's content.'

"The mother was much pleased, and off the lazy girl went with the queen. When they got to the castle the queen took the girl upstairs and showed her three big rooms filled with beautiful flax. 'Spin me all this and you shall have my eldest son for a husband,' said the queen. 'Your poverty means nothing to me, for I think your industry a splendid dowry.'

"The girl trembled with fear in her heart, for she knew she could never spin all that flax if she sat at a loom for the next hundred years. As soon as she was alone she began to cry and sat without doing a stroke of work for three days.

"When the queen came to visit her she was surprised to find the flax had not been touched. The girl told her that she had felt too homesick to spin. The queen was satisfied with this excuse, but said, 'I shall expect you to begin your work tomorrow.'

"Alone once more, the poor girl was at her wits' end to know what to do. In her distress she looked out of the window. There she saw three funny little women coming toward her. One had a big flat foot, another a large underlip that hung over her chin and the third a very broad thumb. They stood still under her window and, looking up, asked the girl what was the matter.

"So she told them her troubles, and they offered to help her. 'If you will invite us to your wedding and not be ashamed of us, but introduce us as your cousins and let us sit at your table we will spin all that flax for you,' they told her."

Training a Husband

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Marian Urges Morris to Be a Man for the Children's Sake.

"Has anybody seen my other overshoe?" called Morris Southy. "I left them here on the porch last night.'

"Maybe the pup——" The child stopped for Roger shook his head and put his finger on his lips. The pup did not stand high in the father's good opinion anyway.

"The puppy?" Morris had caught the word. "You boys scurry around here and find those overshoes. If I can't leave my things on the porch and have them undisturbed it is time something was done." The boys scampered off in different directions to find the missing overshoe.

"What is lost, Morris?" asked Marian, coming to the door.

"My overshoe! That nuisance of a dog has carried it off, I suppose." Morris was looking over the edge of the railing, his face black with a frown. Just then the innocent cause of this disturbance came trotting around the house, and squatting on the walk looked up into the irate face with his head on one side. Marian started to chase the dog away, thinking it better that he be not in evidence just at that time, but it was too late. Morris had seen him. He bounded down the steps and picking the little fellow up by the nape of the neck began to shake him up vigorously.

"Where is my overshoe, you little pest?" he yelled, as if he expected the pup to reply.

"Oh, Rags! My little dog!" chorused the children, running and screaming with terror.

"Morris, for heaven's sake be a little more reasonable," expostulated Marian, rescuing the frightened little animal.

"Yes, you insist on having the little torment here and ask me to be reasonable when it carries off my overshoes. I am late as it is. I must go in the mud without them, I suppose." He stalked off in high dudgeon.

Marian soothed the sobbing trio; got the boys ready for school and went about her morning work with a heavy heart. Were such scenes to be a part of their children's education? How could it be possible for a man of Morris' intelligence to set such an example to his boys, she wondered.

"Morris, may I have a few minutes of your time?" asked Marian after she had tucked her last child in bed. Morris was sitting in his study in the half light smoking a cigar.

"You seem to be taking it," he answered not unkindly.

"I want to talk to you about your influence on our boys," began Marian.

"My influence on the boys?" he echoed.

"Yes. Surely if you take time to think about it you will see that it is a very bad thing for them to see you so impatient, so fretful——"

"Look here, Marian, I am thirty-five years old. It is too late for you to make me over," interrupted Morris petulantly.

"Thirty-five or sixty-five is not too late for a man to say to himself that he will stop a course that he knows to be wrong and be a man. No one is worthy of the name who cannot control himself." Morris gasped at this indictment. "I am not willing to say to my children, 'Your father cannot control himself, but you must not be like him,' nor do you want me to have to say any such thing. I want to be able to say to my boys, 'Be a man like your father.'" Marian laid her hand on her husband's arm.

"You know I am a very nervous man," began Morris.

"I know. You must do everything to build up your nervous system. You are trying, but you must remember that it is what children see and hear that decides what they become. We cannot lecture them into good characters; we must live such lives before them that they will want to be like us." Morris did not answer. Marian stooped and kissed his forehead.

"We must all try together to be good." She noiselessly left the room.

THE FAIR EQUESTRIAN RIDING SKIRTS.

One Goes Astride in Horseback Riding Today Either in the Park.

By Mary Glynn.

Time was when women timidly rode astride in the country. But this comfortable way of dressing for horseback riding was reserved to little girls only. Now, however, riding breeches are being generally accepted and young women do not hesitate to dismount at race meetings or go into tea rooms, in the parks and country, or even to lunch in fashionable wayside inns with boots and breeches.

The fashionable riding coat, it is true, is long; it reaches to the knees, and the skirt is sufficiently wide to spread well over the figure when the rider is seated. The breeches are modeled after the English riding breeches worn by men and they button snugly about the knee, fitting down inside the high topped boots. They are lines with chamois skin across the seat and are faced on the outside with a dark leather where they come in contact with the saddle. These leather facings and linings serve as a sort of padding and make riding easier.

The smartest cut for a coat is a three-button single-breasted style and the chosen material is English whipcord in a dark Oxford gray.

Either brown leather or black patent leather boots may be worn, and gauntlet gloves in English tan are considered in good form.

The smartest hat for autumn riding is a tricorn or Napoleon shape of soft black felt or hatters' plush. This sets low on the head, fitting snugly and is made more secure by an elastic band which may button under the chin or cross the back of the head, fastening under the braid.

Almost every young woman braids here hair, and ties it neatly with a small black taffeta or frille ribbon, turning the end of the braid under a sufficient number of times to make it very short. If the hair is not braided, it is done in a low tight knot at the back and it is advisable to adjust a snug hair net. Nothing looks worse than untidy hair on horseback.

The ideal shirt is of mannish style and worn with a soft stock of white pique or linen, caught with a simple scarf pin.

More Evidence Against the Germ

"ELIMINATE DIRT," says the New York Sun of August 10th. And then it proceeds to show that germ-laden sputa adhere to dust—that house and store sweeping should be burned.

Equally important is the manner of collecting all this dirt. The common broom is ineffective. It is also dangerous because it raises clouds of dust—poisons the air we breathe.

The Hoover Suction Sweeper offers the correct solution of the housecleaning problem, because it sucks up all the dirt and deposits it in a dirt-container.

—The Hoover goes more than mere surface dirt, because the vibrating motion of its motor driven brush dislodges the particles that become embedded in the meshes of the carpet.

—You can buy a Hoover for $47.50. Terms. $4.75 down, $4.75 monthly; 5 per cent. discount for cash with order.

—See how thoroughly the Hoover works. Why not 'phone or write for our demonstrator today?

The spot-light of full publicity, turned on a store, reveals and places in that full light a store's defects—if it have defects. For example: If high prices prevail, or lines of goods are not kept up to date, the reader of the store advertisements knows it. It follows that advertising "pays" the store that renders real service—and would not pay the other kind of a store.

REPRESENTING TOWNS.

Writing in the New York Globe, Walter St. Denis advocates a plan that should meet with the hearty approval of track and field athletes. It should also meet with the approval of the two boosters. Mr. St. Denis says that it would be a good idea to have all home athletes represent their native towns instead of working for certain clubs. If the New York man's plans were carried out here, Plainfield would certainly have a very good athletic representation and would get what is needed—advertising. In many cases, Plainfield, through the efforts of the athletes, would come out first. Sweden has already adopted the plan of having her athletes represent cities and not associations or clubs. The result is that when anything "big" in the athletic line is staged one or two cities get plenty of publicity on the front pages of the newspapers. Plainfield boosters can readily see wherein such a plan as that advocated by Walter St. Denis is going to advertise the home town. That the native athletes would be only too glad to help the "old" town out is our firm conviction. At the present time the best advertising Plainfield gets from the prowess of her athletes comes when the High School boys do something worth while. There are plenty of other athletes who are making names for themselves and we feel sure that they would be willing to help make a better name for Plainfield.

GIVE IT SUPPORT.

The fifth annual show of the Plainfield Kennel Club is going to be held at the Horse Show Grounds on Saturday. Those who are in charge of the arrangements have done all in their power to make the affair a success. It is now up to the people of Plainfield. This show is not being held for financial gain. Those who are staging the affair are going to give the proceeds to a most worthy charity. It is only right and just that the people of Plainfield help the bench show committee out. This, the fifth annual show, is going to be the best affair ever staged in this city. In fact, we believe it is going to outshine all other shows ever held anywhere. Elaborate plans are being made; everything is in readiness. But all this work will amount to nothing if the public fails to patronize the event. The admission price is reasonable and the show is going to be worth more than twice the price asked.

WHO RUNS THE TEAM?

Of late we have attended several baseball games. Now, we have been attending baseball games for years, but we have never before witnessed such anxiety as is oftimes displayed by various members of certain "local" teams. When an umpire's decision is disputed, the captain, the manager and about fifteen other players all dash on the field. To say that an umpire is, in this manner, disconcerted is putting it mildly. Many an umpire would faint. It is not right for the whole army of players to talk and dispute. The captain should do the arguing and, if necessary, the manager should have his say. But we certainly fail to see why the "water-boy" should be allowed to make use of a neglected vocabulary at the expense of the poor umpire.

IRON MEN OF VALUE.

The Phillies are placing practically all hopes of a pennant on Alexander. True, Rixey and some of the others must help, but Alex is the big light of the combine. Brooklyn has no particular fellow to pick for the big glare, as the team piloted by Robbie is more evenly balanced than any other club in the major leagues. Detroit is heading the American bunch now, and, of course, the name of Ty Cobb stands out prominent. Ty has been pulling some wonderful stuff, his taking two bases on a little sacrifice yesterday being but incidental to some of the sensational affairs he has offered in order to make his team win. But a real strong man looms up, Stanley Coveleskie, the comeback pitcher. It has been the big Pole that has put the Tigers out in front. Yesterday Coveleskie won his twenty-third game of the season. Walter Johnson is the only fellow who has won more than Coveleskie, the Washington star having copped 25, but has lost 18, while the Detroit slab artist has dropped but nine contests this season. If Detroit wins the American pennant, and the Jennings crew is going along more smoothly now than at any time this year, Coveleskie is sure to pitch the opening game, and if the series stretches out to any length at all, it is probable he will be used in three of the contests, being booked the same as Alexander was scheduled for last year. It would be a great battle for Coveleskie and Alexander to meet in the same series, bringing the two strong men of the major leagues into action.

BROOKLYN DOINGS.

"If Wilbert Robinson's assemblage of athletes has any intention of committing grand larceny on the National League pennant, they will have to make Cincinnati and St. Louis accessories before the fact during this coming week. These two aggregations of national pastime performers are supposed to be about the tamest in the league flock. Cincinnati has a half-nelson on eighth place, closely pressed by St. Louis in the seventh. The former tubes under the East River today to remain through Tuesday and the latter begins a three-day visit on Wednesday.

The records show Brooklyn has an advantage over both these teams. The Flatbush team has won twelve from St. Louis this year and has lost seven. It has won twelve from Cincinnati and lost six. If the Dodgers can maintain this ratio of victories and defeats during the coming week, or better it, they will be in a position to face Chicago next Saturday with a lot of confidence."—Newark News.

COBB GIVES UP.

Tyrus Cobb, for nine years the leading batsman of the American League, has conceded that Tris Speaker, of the Cleveland club would be the 1916 champion. Speaker now has a margin of nearly thirty points over Cobb, according to unofficial averages. Cobb said it is a human impossibility for him to try to cut down this lead and at the same time to co-operate in team play to the fullest extent of his ability.

Cobb's individual efforts won two out of Detroit's recent victories.

SPECIAL TROLLEYS FOR DOG SHOW

Arlington Avenue Cars Will Meet Trains From New York and Philadelphia.

Those in charge of the Fifth Annual Show of the Plainfield Kennel Club have arranged for a special train to leave Jersey City at 8:15 a. m. This train will be met at the North Avenue station by special trolley cars which will convey exhibitors and their dogs to the Horse Show Grounds. Attached to the train leaving the Reading Terminal in Philadelphia at 7:30 a. m. will be special baggage and passenger coaches for the convenience of patrons of the show.

The entry list just announced contains the names of over six hundred dog fanciers, whose prize pets wil be given an opportunity to secure some valuable awards, donated and secured by the Bench Show Committee and members of the local kennel club.

The show will be given for the benefit of the Volunteers' Auxiliary Fund, a most worthy local charity. Everything possible has been done by the committee in charge of this affair. Wilbur Purcell, of New York city, is the superintendent of the show. Mr. Purcell is a man who has had considerable experience in conducting dog shows.

MOHAWKS PRACTICE ON LOCAL FIELDS

Charley Lundstorm Will Have His Men on Hand This Evening.

"Wurra, Wurra!" The Mohawks, football players, will hold a practice on the Central street field this evening. "First aid" appliances will be very much in evidence. Manager Charles Lundstorm is busily arranging a schedule and believes that the boys need practice.

Among those who will "try-out" for positions on the team are Eddie Dugan and George King. These two lads were members of the Plainfield High School squad last year. Frank Brennan and "Mickey" McCarty may try for positions on the Tab football team. Other players who will practice this evening are Newton Mowen, Carl Gullberg, Monroe Gullberg, Jack Lyons, Charley Lundstorm. It is expected that the first game will be played in a short time.

MITCHELL SIGNS.

Fred Mitchell, for some time assistant to Manager Stallings of the Boston National League baseball team, has signed a contract with the club for three years.

Last spring Mitchell was coach of the successful Harvard nine, but the new contract bars him from further work of directing college teams.

The Phillies have seldom failed to have one or more celebrated players on their roster. Many old stars pastimed with the team, among them the late Ed Delehanty, who was a slugger second to none, and Billy Hamilton, the greatest base-runner the National League ever owned.

HOLY CROSS FOOTBALL TEAM WILL HOLD FIRST PRACTICE ON CRICKET FIELD

Rumor That Bill Coyle and Joe Green Will Resign May Be "Untrue"—Joe Widdoson Will Be on Hand—Two Westfield "Rookies" to Have Try-outs—Franklins, of Newark, Will Play Here.

The initial practice of the Holy Cross football team will be held some time next week, according to the present plans of "Doc" Doyle, who, it is understood, will again manage the team. It is rumored that Billy Coyle and Joe Green, the former a quarterback and the latter, secretary of the club, will resign. Pressure may be brought to bear on the two, and, in our opinion, the "old machine" will eventually remain intact.

Many of the "old guard" will return to the fold. Jack Caulfield, who is now with Troop D on the border, will, in all probability, be a member of the team, inasmuch as it is reported that the troopers are daily practicing on the gridiron. At the present time those who have signified their intention of returning to the pigskin pastime are Jack and Tom Ricketts, Eddie Bremble, Joe Carty, Andy Stiglitz, Joe Widdoson, Jack Wilson, Lou Brown, Jack Hohenstein, Joe Barto, "Shaky" Clarke and a host of new material. Hohenstein, who hails from Westfield, has promised "Doc" Doyle that he will bring along two promising lads.

Perhaps the most encouraging report that has reached Manager Doyle's ears of late is that Joe Widdoson will rejoin the eleven. Widdoson, who with his brother, forms the "Giant Duo," recently selected by a Newark prize fight promoter as promising pugilistic talent, is anxious for the season to open.

Already requests for dates have been received from the Fiercones, of Brooklyn; Olympics, of Brooklyn; Bradhurst F. C.; Arlington F. C., of Carteret, and many others. Negotiations are under way whereby the season will probably open in the early part of October, with the Franklins, of Newark, as the visiting team. The Dexters, of Perth Amboy, have not written for a game but they probably will be "in the van" before very long. The Vikings, of Bayonne, have been assured of an engagement. An effort is being made to have the U. S. S. Wyoming eleven play here.

SENIOR GOLFERS ON APAWAMIS LINKS

H. M. Stockton, of This City, Registers Score of 117.

The senior golfers returned to Apawamis yesterday for their twelfth annual tournament, and from early in the morning before the dew was off the grass to late in the afternoon when the sun was sinking behind the Westchester hills the veterans trudged around the links in what seemed like a never ending procession. There were 172 of them on hand today and the same group will play tomorrow. Then they will make way for the second division, which probably will be even bigger, and which will play its golf on Thursday and Friday.

The ownership of only two prizes was determined by the play, for most of the trophies are awarded on a thirty-six hole basis; in fact, the two prize winners will not retain their honors if they should be fortunate enough to capture one of the more important trophies today, for one prize to a man is an inviolable rule with the seniors. It was the Connecticut contingent that carried off the honors yesterday, for C. Gilbert Waldo won the gross prize with a score of 41, 43—84, and the best net score was made by Judge Walter Stoddard, of New Haven. His winning total was 89, 17—72.

H. M. Stockton, of this city, competed, registering a total of 117.

All the value of Piedmonts is in the cigarette itself—where it should be.

The reason is that Piedmonts, being made of Virginia tobacco, pay no duty. They're ALL Virginia tobacco—mild, and mellowed by Virginia's golden sunshine.

If you ask a tobacco expert, he will tell you that Virginia is the best cigarette tobacco on earth.

Directors Decide Definitely on Campaign for a $250,000 Building Fund.

At a special meeting of the Board of Directors of the Y. M. C. A. held last night the coming $250,000 campaign for the new building to be located at the corner of Fifth and Sycamore streets was given a decided boost.

The building committee will begin active work at once visiting buildings and considering plans. The president was authorized to appoint a campaign committee, the members of which together with J. A. MacArt, the campaign leader, will have entire supervision of all details. The date of the campaign, November 12 to 22, was definitely decided upon. Dinners will be held each night during this period when the teams will come together to make reports and receive instructions.

Men and women, too, to say nothing of the boys, have long waited the consummation of this building project, and now that it is to be realized, every effort on the part of every citizen will be concentrated on the campaign which is the first and most vital step in the proposition. The building itself will be worthy of the traditions of Plainfield and will give to the boys and young men that which other cities are giving, a modern "up to the minute" Y. M. C. A. equipment, to meet the most urgent need of the hour.

DELEGATES TO CONVENTION.

Build It of WHITE PINE

Whether you're going to build a home, barn, garage, or henhouse, White Pine will give you longest service and greatest satisfaction.

No wood equals White Pine for all exposed surfaces. Three centuries of building experience in America prove this. It does not warp, sag, twist or split after years of exposure even in closest mortises and in delicate mouldings.

Its popularity has never waned since the Pilgrims used it, but many people who know the desirable qualities of believe it is difficult to obtain. Such is not the case, as the ample stocks in our yards bear witness. And its longer service makes it most economical, even at a slightly higher first cost.

WHITE PINE

Get our prices on this king of all structural woods and—if you don't already know its advantages—let us tell you more about them.

It costs no more to buy your lumber at home—often less—freight considered, and you can see what you get before you pay for it. Then, too, we are "on the ground" to serve you—always as near as your phone.

COL. COLGATE IS FRIEND OF LABOR

Arthur Warner Tells of His Interest and Efforts in Behalf of Workingman.

UNPLEDGED CANDIDATE

Speaker Quotes Assistant Adjutant-General to Prove That Opponent Did Not Draft the Compensation Bills.

Arthur E. Warner, of Elizabeth, who is campaigning throughout this section of the State for Colonel Austen Colgate, who seeks the Republican nomination for Governor, addressed two open air meetings in Plainfield last night, the first one at Plainfield avenue and West Third street and the other at West Front street and Madison avenue. During the course of his remarks, Mr. Warner said:

"Colonel Colgate has consistently been the friend of labor, and I believe that labor will be with him on primary day. If you will go back a couple of years, you will find that Mr. Colgate antagonized Henry Hilfers, one of the officials who represented the State Federation. In a courteous letter he told the State Federation that Mr. Hilfers had outlived his usefulness as their representative at Trenton, and at the present time Mr. Hilfers sees his chance to 'get square,' but I do not believe that the laboring man of New Jersey will allow himself to be made the tool of some one's venom.

"The answer to the question of whether Colonel Colgate is the friend of labor is found in his aid at the time of the Orange hatters' strike. He was selected by the labor unions to represent them on the board of arbitration. Another answer lies in the fact that there has never been a strike or a bit of labor trouble in his great factory in Jersey City, in which 2500 people are employed.

"Colonel Colgate is an unpledged candidate. When he goes to Trenton, he will not be fettered by political debts. He has promised no one the judgeships, the prosecuting attorney's place and what not. He said at a public meeting a few days ago: 'If I cannot go to Trenton and be allowed to exercise my judgment in my own way, I had rather stay at home.'

"Mr. Edge has claimed to be responsible for the Workman's Compensation Bills, but Col. Major Nelson B. Gaskill, the assistant adjutant general of the State, asserts that he was in Europe while they were being drafted and Mr. Edge has never been able to refute this.

"An attempt is being made by the opposition to fool the voters of this State and we cannot come to any other conclusion but that it is deliberate. For instance a story went out from Atlantic City that the State sealers were unanimous for Edge. Of those present fifteen were Democrats, four Republicans were for Edge. Perhaps the Democrats were for Edge, for they are looking for a man who can make the least opposition against H. Otto Wittpenn. The Edge press bureau, or perhaps it might better be called the department of fairy tales, recently sent out a story that 2,500 were in line for Walter Edge last Wednesday night. Harry Humphrey, son-in-law of David Baird, of Camden county, is authority for the statement that there were only 180 men in line exclusive of the band, and of these twenty-seven dropped out before the finish.

"The strongest man in the State today is Austen Colgate, with the solid backing of Essex county and immense popularity in Hudson county. He is the only man who can draw from the strength of Otto Wittpenn, in Hudson county. But that is not the only reason why he should be nominated," said the speaker. "His record is honorable and progressive. He stands for the best in morals, patriotism and statesmanship."

Mr. Warner said that Mr. Colgate had unselfishly neglected his campaign when war with Mexico was threatened and gone to Sea Girt as assistant to Adjutant General Sadler.

CELEBRATE WINNING OF PRIZE TROPHY

Local Union of Metal Workers Have Parade Followed by Social Session.

The members of Local Union, No. 259, Amalgamted Sheet Metal Workers' International Alliance, following a short business session last night marched to Paul Collier's store on East Front street, where they received a silver trophy won in the Labor Day parade for making the best showing of any of the trades. The tinners were accompanied by the Independent Drum and Fife Corps, and after parading through some of the principal streets returned to Trades Council Hall, where the celebration was held.

E. V. Lorton, president of the local, complimented the members on the showing they made in the Labor Day parade, after which William H. Lunger, business agent, made an address. He expressed the regrets of A. E. Force that the latter could not attend to present the trophy to the organization, and then praised the metal workers for the honors they had won. He then presented the the prize on behalf of Mr. Force, the donor, taking occasion to thank the latter.

Following other remarks by officers of the local, refreshments were served under the direction of a committee comprising J. C. Cassidy, W. V. Sutton and George F. Fosbry. W. W. Wright, of the National Press Association, was a guest and gave an interesting talk in which he urged the workingman to read the newspapers that are printed for their benefit as well as that of the employer.

TROOPERS EXPERIENCE REAL COLD WEATHER

Have Trouble Keeping Warm on Frost Covered Plains of Arizona.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Forest, Ariz., Sept. 17.—New Jersey First Squadron of Cavalry, including the Essex Troop, Plainfield Troop and Red Bank Troop, had its worst experience of army life last night on the frost covered plains just outside of this city. It was the coldest night the militiamen have struck in Arizona, and despite the fact that all claimed they were tired enough to sleep under any conditions after a day's march in the broiling sun, most of them spent at least a part of the night walking around to keep warm. Yesterday's march took in about twelve miles and camp was pitched, at least a picket line was established shortly after 2 o'clock.

The greater part of the afternoon was given over to resting and caring for the horses and the men were given considerable liberty after the work was done, most of them spending their time in exploring the surrounding country. A party of Newarkers and Plainfielders climbed to the top of a mountain peak and brought back with them several rare specimens of bugs and other curios—besides a chill. The atmosphere was cold on the mountainside and the men were all glad to get back to the temporary camp.

Wrapped in blankets and with only the clouds as protection against the elements the men turned in shortly after 9 o'clock, but one after another soon began to complain of feeling cold, and few slept through the night. Breakfast was served early and the squadron, under the command of Major Robert Hobart Brown, set out on the second lap of the trip to Fort Huachuca. Tonight a stop will be made just outside of Warren and the soldiers are planning to visit this thriving little Western municipality tonight. The food served on the trip thus far has been exceptionally good and despite the chilling they were treated to last night all of the men are in excellent physical condition. An individual about whom there was the slightest doubt regarding his ability to stand the one hundred and twenty mile hike, was left in Douglas.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY.
Arrested on Saturday by Chief Marshal George Weiss on a charge made by Foster Bird, of Manning avenue, North Plainfield, John Ashton, of Fanwood, when arraigned before Recorder Fred Hand in the borough court yesterday afternoon was held in $300 bail to await the action of the Somerset County Grand Jury. The charge against Ashton is a serious one. The defendant was represented by Robert N. Crance, while W. A. Coddington was counsel for the plaintiff.

NURSES' ASSOCIATION TO MEET.
The regular meeting of the Visiting Nurse Association will be held in the office, No. 323 Babcock building, Thursday afternoon, September 28, at 4:30 o'clock. Plans for the annual meeting to be held in October will then be made.

APOPLEXY FATAL TO W. J. DOUGLASS

Prominent Colored Citizen Stricken Attending Service at Bethel Chapel.

DIES SOON AFTERWARD

Was Well Known in Masonic and Knights of Pythias Circles—Served as Drummer Boy in Civil War—Leaves Wife and Daughter.

William J. Douglass, colored, a well known resident of Plainfield for thirty-six years, died at his home last evening after suffering a stroke of apoplexy while attending the flag day presentation exercises of Douglas Camp, No. 11, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, in Bethel chapel, last night. Mr. Douglass became ill shortly after making a speech in response to the welcome address by Rev. William Lloyd Imes, pastor of the church. He was removed to his home immediately, but all medical efforts proved of no avail. Two months ago he suffered another stroke of apoplexy.

"Colonel" Douglass, as he was better known to his hundreds of friends in this city, was born in Kingston, N. Y., August 12, 1854. When a young man he ran away from home to enter the army in the Civil War and served as a drummer boy. Between the years 1872 and 1876 he traveled around the world as a body guard to Admiral Roane.

In 1878 he married Miss Eliza Dennis, of Piscataway, and two years after that came to Plainfield. He was at that time with Dr. Chauncey Fields until the death of Dr. Fields, and later he was employed by William A. Stout. He was also employed by J. T. Clawson for some time. Recently he had been in poor health.

He was a member of St. Mark's Episcopal mission, joining under Grace Episcopal church. He was a thirty-third degree Mason, a colonel of the Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, and occupied a distinguished place in the offices of the colored lodges of New Jersey.

Beside his widow, he is survived by one daughter, Mrs. J. F. Garrett, of this city. The funeral will be held at his late residence, 610 East Third street, Monday afternoon at two o'clock. The service will be in charge of the Rev. Charles S. Sedgwick, of Croon, Maryland, formerly of this city. Interment will be in this city.

MISS BREMMER THE BRIDE OF H. FREDERICK KRAUSSE

Miss Marian F. Bremmer, of Manning avenue, and H. Frederick Krausse, of Vine street, the borough, were married yesterday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, at their newly furnished home, 19 Park place. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Dr. Philip B. Strong, pastor of the First Baptist church, the immediate relatives and friends of the couple being in attendance.

The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. John Donnelly, of Fanwood. The bride wore a travelling gown and hat to match. Following the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Krausse left for a short honeymoon to be spent at Niagara Falls. They will be at home to their friends after October 1.

FINED $25 FOR CARRYING REVOLVER IN CITY LIMITS

Charged with carrying concealed weapons, John King, colored, who gave his address as 333 East Fourth street, was fined $25 or sixty days in the county jail when he was arraigned before Judge DeMeza in city court this morning. The fine was paid.

King was arrested by Patrolman McGinley early last night at East Front street and Norwood avenue. McGinley took him into custody when he noticed a suspicious looking bulge in his back pocket and when searched a revolver and searchlight were found on him, besides several addresses in a book.

WHOLE FAMILY IS POISONED BY PORK

Mrs. John Brennan and Four Children Are Removed to Hospital for Treatment.

As the result of ptomaine poisoning, caused by eating fresh pork, Mrs. John Brennan, her three daughters, the Misses Sarah, Agnes and Anna Brennan, and a son, John Brennan, Jr., are under the care of a physician at Muhlenberg Hospital, to which institution they were removed last night. Another daughter also suffered but her condition was not deemed serious enough to send her to the hospital. Prompt action in calling a physician probably saved the member of the family from serious consequences and inquiry at the hospital today brought the information that all of the victims were improving and would probably be able to go home in a few days.

The family had the pork for dinner on Sunday, but it was not until sometime Monday that the family began to feel the ill-effects. The following day their condition was such that a physician was summoned and after an examination decided that all were suffering from ptomaine poisoning and arrangements were made for the removal of the victims to the hospital.

QUARANTINE RULES TO BE RAISED OCTOBER 2

Children May Once More Go to Sunday School, Parties and "Movies."

After waiting for nearly two weeks since the appearance of the last case of infantile paralysis in Plainfield, the local Board of Health has come to the conclusion that the epidemic is about over and the quarantine regulations are being gradually raised. Today the Board of Health sent the following notices to all the Sunday schools and theatres in the city:

"The Plainfield public schools will open on October 2, unless a serious situation should arise in the meantime and the majority of the local physicians agree that they may do so with safety, the Board of Health has decided that the ban on all children's gatherings and activities may be removed on that date too. As this date is on Monday, it would be reasonable for the Sunday schools to resume their sessions on October 1, and the theatres may then allow children at performances."

The last case of paralysis was reported on September 12 and there are no now suspicious cases being watched. Of the total of thirty-seven cases that have developed since the disease first made its appearance there are now only eighteen under surveillance, and a number of those are nearly recovered. Nine children have succumbed to the disease, one has been sent to its home for treatment, three are at the Rock avenue isolation hospital and six have been released from quarantine.

CALKINS IS EXPECTED TO RETURN SEPTEMBER 25

While no definite word has been heard from Mayor Leighton Calkins as to the date of his return, it is expected that he will be back in Plainfield Monday, September 25, or the night before the primary. Mayor Calkins is still at East Gloucester, Mass., where he went six weeks ago with his wife and children.

PHILLIP H. TREACY WILL OPPOSE MANN FOR CONGRESS

Hugh Treacy, of this city, who seeks the Democratic nomination for Assembly, received word today that his brother, Phillip H. Treacy, of Chicago, has been nominated for Congress on the Democratic ticket, and will oppose Congressman James R. Mann in the November election. Mr. Treacy, like his brother here, is a lawyer. He was graduated from Lake Forest University, Chicago, and has been prominent in politics for several years.

COUNCILMEN HAVE A SMOKE.
Plainfield's fire laddies had visions of a serious conflagration when they received a still alarm from the City Building on North avenue at 11:10 last night. When they arrived at the scene there was plenty of smoke and at last a smouldering fire was found in the room where the finance committee was in session. Some one said the councilmen were smoking and had thrown the butts of cigars on the floor.

DEATH COMES TO MRS. CHAS. HYDE

Well Known Resident of This City Passes Away After Long Illness.

LIVED HERE 48 YEARS

Was Generous Contributor to Church, Hospital and Many Charities—Leaves Daughter, Mrs. Everett Colby, and Three Sons.

Mrs. Elizabeth Hyde, widow of Charles Hyde, died last night at her home, 605 East Front street, in the seventy-ninth year of her age. Although she had been a sufferer from rheumatism for several years it was not until two months ago when she had a stroke of apoplexy and became partially paralyzed that her condition became serious. Within the past two or three weeks she failed rapidly and the members of the family realized that the end was only the matter of a short time.

Mrs. Hyde was born at Butler, Pa., her maiden name being Miss Elizabeth Kepler. She was married to Mr. Hyde at Hydetown, Pa., where the latter owned and operated large saw mills. He afterward became the owner of valuable oil wells at Titusville, Pa., at which place he established a bank.

It was forty-eight years ago that Mr. and Mrs. Hyde removed to the East Front street residence and never lived anywhere else in the city. Mr. Hyde died fifteen years ago and at that time was president of the City National Bank. Mrs. Hyde was one of the oldest members of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and the beautiful and costly organ in use there was her gift to the congregation. She was also greatly interested in Muhlenberg Hospital and its various departments and the Hyde ward at that institution was the gift of Mrs. Hyde and members of her family. She was interested in many other Plainfield charities and was always a liberal contributor to them. She was a devout Christian, and was beloved for her many admirable womanly qualities which won for her a large acquaintance.

Mrs. Hyde is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Edith Colby, wife of former State Senator Everett Colby, of Llewelyn Park, Orange, two sons, Louis Kepler Hyde and Charles Livingston Hyde; one step-son, Dorsey Hyde; a brother, A. C. Kepler, of Lancaster, Pa., and one sister, Mrs. James Kiskaddon, of Canon City, Colorado.

The funeral service will be held at the late home, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and will be in charge of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, assisted by Rev. Dr. Charles A. Eaton, pastor of the Madison Avenue Baptist church, New York city. The body will be placed in the Hyde family mausoleum at Hillside cemetery.

MITCHEL TO ANSWER CHARGE OF BATTERY AND ASSAULT

Edward Mitchel, colored, was brought back from Elizabeth today and will be arraigned before Judge DeMeza tomorrow morning to answer a charge of assault and battery on Arthur Tompkins, an aged negro. When Mitchel was first arranged two weeks ago the condition of his victim was such that it was thought he might not recover, and Mitchel was held to await the result of Tompkins' injuries. Reports from the hospital say the old man is on the road to recovery.

Mitchel is alleged to have accosted Tompkins on West Third street several weeks ago and brutally beating him, stoving in several ribs and injuring his head and shoulders. Tompkins is a recluse and nearly died before his condition was discovered.

"SOUR FACE" CLASS WILL BE ORGANIZED TONIGHT

POLICE GET TWELVE IN WEST END RAID

Negroes Caught in Disorderly Houses—Sentenced This Morning.

After watching two disorderly houses on West Second street for more than two months, the police closed the net of evidence about the frequenters of the places yesterday afternoon and before the "roundup" was completed twelve negroes, two men and ten women were at headquarters and this morning they were arraigned before Judge DeMeza. The police had had knowledge of the places for some time, but it was not until two girls were arrested yesterday charged with taking a watch that they were able to make a raid.

Charged with conducting the two houses, Mary Jordon, of 522 West Second street, and Margaret Jackson, of 526 West Second street, were sentenced to $20 or sixty days apiece. Henry Alexander and Louis Jordon, a son of the Jordon woman, were fined $10 or forty days apiece on a charge of disorderly conduct. Gertrude Jackson, Stelle Brown and Kate Todd received suspended sentences and were paroled in the custody of Miss Mabelle Phillips, of the Charity Organized Aid. Irene Dunham and Minnie Jackson, the two girls who took the watch, were held for the Juvenile Court, both being adjudged as mentally unbalanced, and will probably be sent away. Ada Anthony was remanded for a hearing tomorrow. Birdie Brighton and Mary Jackson were fined $10 or twenty days. Lieutenant Higgins took all but the three who received suspended sentences to Elizabeth today, none of them paying their fines.

STRIKE TOMORROW IF PARLEY FAILS

Last Conference With Carmen is Being Held This Afternoon.

New York, Sept. 21.—Labor leaders have announced that if a settlement of the street car strike was not reached today all unions allied with the traction lines would be called out tomorrow, and if this did not have the desired effect a general strike will follow.

In a final attempt to avert the threatened general sympathetic strike in aid of the carmen, the committee of citizens will meet Mayor Mitchel and Chairman Straus, of the Public Service Commission at 3 this afternoon. Then they will hear the side of the carmen at a conference which will also be attended by Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor. The general strike call is scheduled to be issued tomorrow, and on its eve strike violence is mounting higher as the companies operate more cars.

"SKIPPER," MASCOT OF BORO FIREMEN, KILLED

"Skipper," the mascot of the North Plainfield Fire Department, is dead. "Skip," a 5-year-old dog, was instantly killed by an auto truck on Somerset street shortly before 9 o'clock last night.

The dog which was owned by Lieutenant Al Fritts, had been the mascot of the borough fire department for five years. Whenever the firemen were called out "Skip" went along. Of late he had been getting accustomed to ride the new motor engine, although he had shown a decided preference for horse drawn vehicle. His greatest delight was to sit in front of the firehouse and allow himself to be "petted" by the children returning from school. Known to almost every one, this dog was welcome anywhere. And as one North Plainfielder put it, "he just naturally was a fire fighter."

OPENED 30 FOOT WELL.
Daniel Facey, of Hillcrest road, Watchung, yesterday celebrated the opening of a thirty foot well, which he, with the assistance of several others, completed a few days ago. Children in the nenghborhood sang "America" and Charles Brown, of New York city, recited the "Old Oaken Bucket." A salute, with old army rifles, was fired during the course of the exercises.

"TRYOUTS" FOR MINSTRELS.
"Tryouts" for the "mixed" minstrels to be held by the T. A. B. S. during the latter part of October will be conducted this evening. Charles Barrett, who has been re-engaged as coach of this, the second annual show, will be in charge this evening. All those who intend to take part in the show are requested to be on hand this evening.

ATTENDING CONVENTION.
Chief William McCullough, Lieutenant "Al" Fritts, Charles Stahl and Claude Dunn, of the borough Fire Department are in Atlantic City today attending the State Firemen's convention.

BULGARS STILL ON GREEK SOIL

Fierce Battle Raging for Lines in the Dobrudja Section.

BOTH CLAIM SUCCESSES

Russians Take Prisoners in Carpathians—Earl Duncombe is Killed in Action—Monastir Not Yet Taken.

London, Sept. 21.—The great battle in the Dobrudja, which began two days ago, is continuing with increasing fury. The Roumanian-Russian forces are conducting the defense of their new line, south of the Constanza-Tchernavoda railway, with stubborn energy, the official announcement from Sofia says.

On the Macedonian front successes of a minor sort are claimed by both the French and Bulgarian official bulletins.

The Bulgars are still clinging to stretches of Greek territory on the left wing of the Allies, though they have evacuated Viglitza in extreme northwestern Macedonia.

The Bulgarians are delivering the most vicious counter-attacks against the advancing Serbs. At one stage of the battle Bulgarian troops entered the village of Boresnica, but were finally driven out by the Serbs in violent fighting.

East of the Cerna river the Bulgars made a strong counter-attack against Kamakchalan Mountain, captured by the Serbs early this week, but were driven off.

Earl Duncombe Killed.
London, Sept. 21.—Charles William Reginald Duncombe, second earl of Naversham, major of the Yorkshire Hussars, has been killed in action, it was announced.

Monastir Is Yet Strong.
Paris, Sept. 21.—The Serb advance toward Monastir continues. Retreating Bulgars attempted to form a new line of defense by entrenching. The Serbians anticipated this move and are harassing the retreating forces continually, determined to prevent them from entrenching at any point. Military despatches declare that it will be some time before Monastir will fall. The Serbians have been victorious in fighting at Naimakclam. The capture of four machine guns by them was reported today.

Russians Take Prisoners.
Petograd, Sept. 21.—Continued successes in the Carpathians was reported by the Russians today. In the heights east of Panther Mountain thirty-seven men, one officer and six machine guns and a large quantity of arms and cartridges were captured. Six officers and 687 men, all German, were captured around Korytnica.

Sofia Claims Victory.
Sofia, Sept. 21.—Bulgarian counter attacks threw back the allied forces in Macedonia. The enemy suffered heavy losses and many prisoners were captured. In Dobrudja the battle is being fought with great stubbornness.

HUDSON IS STRONG FOR FRELINGHUYSEN

Republican Association Rescinds Former Indorsement of Murphy.

(By Telegraph to The Daily Press.)

Jersey City, Sept. 21.—By an overwhelming vote at a meeting in Jersey City last night the Hudson County Republican Association rescinded its previous endorsement of Franklin Murphy and endorsed Joseph S. Frelinghuysen for United States Senator. This means that the Fitzhenry faction is now lined up for the Somerset county man and that he has the active support of the best workers in the Republican ranks. The friends of Senator Frelinghuysen in Hudson county, including Judge Robert Carey, Mayor Mark M. Fagan, and others, are gratified by this action and they predict that he will get a splendid vote next Tuesday. Senator Frelinghuysen spoke at several big meetings last night in Hudson county and everywhere he was accorded a hearty reception.

PROFESSOR BARBOUR WILL SPEAK IN THIS CITY TONIGHT

Prof. Livingston Barbour, of Rutgers College, Prohibition candidate for United States Senator, will speak from an automobile at Madison avenue and West Front street at 8:30 o'clock tonight. He is announced by the committee as "a great man with a great message for the people of a great commonwealth." Prof. Barbour's talk will be illustrated with pictures on a screen.

BEAT MAGISTRATE AT DICE.

So Price, Arrested as Crap Shooter, Was Set Free.

Samuel Price was a better dice thrower than Magistrate Imber of Philadelphia, and thereby he saved himself a long term in jail. Price stopped on a corner where some men were shooting craps. He says he did not play, but a policeman came along and arrested Price as he stopped to gather up the pot, which contained 4 cents.

He was arraigned before Magistrate Imber, who decided to test Sam's ability as a dice thrower and offered to "roll" him for his freedom or a term in jail.

The magistrate rolled only four, and then Price rolled six and walked away a free man.

Increase of Male Births.

Bearing out the popular belief that in a great war male births increase in number as compared to female births, the official statistics for London show that in the last thirteen weeks reported 13,229 boys and 12,637 girls were born. This gives a proportion of 1,047 boys to 1,000 girls, which is seven more boys than the average for England and Wales before the war.

GERMAN METHOD OF FARM SALES

Consumer Deals Directly With Producer.

FARMERS GIVEN NUMBERS.

They Register at a Bureau, Giving List of Wares and Prices—Housewives Order From Lists, and Products Are Forwarded by Parcel Post.

The United States should by all means adopt the German method of direct dealing between farmer and consumer, said David Lubin, delegate of the United States to the International Institute of Agriculture at Rome, Italy, in a forceful speech before a number of business men and market experts in Philadelphia the other day.

"Direct Dealing Between Producer and Consumer" was the subject of the address. The plan, as outlined by Mr. Lubin, proposes to save time, labor and money by utilization of the parcel post service.

"In a speech delivered some years ago," said Mr. Lubin, "I said there was one nation in the world which, if put to stress, would stand against all other powers, and that country was Germany. The secret of her power lay in her agrarian system, by which the interests of the farmer were conserved. I said, too, that the weakest nation from the point of view of agricultural policy was the United States.

Farmers Given Numbers.

"In brief the German system is this: A farmer comes to a certain bureau and registers. His name no longer matters. He is given a number, say No. 40. The products which he sells are listed (a) for eggs, (b) for chickens, with the prices he wants for them. To this bureau the housewife comes and orders what she wants at the stipulated price. No. 40 must keep up the quality of the products he sends or else his customers will quickly turn to some other number.

"The system is what shorthand is to longhand in simplicity and convenience. The German government is the most feared autocracy in the world today, because it is a scientific autocracy. In politics Germany may have its faults, but economics are a blessing. We would do well to adopt her wonderful economic policies.

"This country cannot stand unless something is done to save the farmer from being eaten up. The Germans knew their danger. They reasoned that the farmer is the natural conservative and balance wheel of a nation and that as long as his table is supplied and he is contented the Radicals and Socialists might talk as much as they liked.

"A way presents itself for the building up of the proposed service on effective economic lines. That would be the appointment of a federal commission to take the matter up, the commission to obtain the testimony of farmers and consumers, devise a working system, and for a time have the guidance of its operation."

Pittsburgh Starts Plan.

Following the lecture was a general discussion, the prevailing opinion being that the plan proposed by Mr. Lubin had many desirable feaures and that something would have to be done to remedy the prevailing market situation.

Dr. Joseph Krauskopf, who followed Mr. Lubin, deplored the present conditions of city life, with crowding in slums. "But it is useless," he said, "to cry 'back to the land' until we advise a system that makes it profitable for a man to go back. Let us read the warning in the fact that in the state of Pennsylvania alone there are 6,500 abandoned farms."

In Pittsburgh $5,000 has been appropriated to give the German system a thorough trial. At the close of the meeting arrangements were made to appoint a committee of five to consider the feasibility of starting the system of direct dealing in Philadelphia.

THIS PULLET REAL PATRIOT.

Lays an Egg From Which Extends a Silk American Flag.

Berks county, Pa., hens hold a fine reputation for laying big eggs and hatching chickens with three legs, but here comes along a Plymouth Rock pullet, owned by John Kramer of Temple, Pa., that has just laid an egg to which is attached a silk American flag two by three inches in size.

A few days ago this patriotic biddie set up an exceptionally lusty cackle, and when Mrs. Kramer went to the nest she found the egg, from a soft protrusion about an inch in length at one end of which extended the flag. Otherwise the shell of the egg was hard.

Poultrymen claim that the hen must have swallowed the flag and that while the egg was forming it partly enveloped the emblem. Scores of persons have called at the Kramer home to see the curiosity.

Fighting Rats In Trenches.

A new way to kill the rats which infest the trenches is reported by a South African officer writing from France. He says, "We found one of our men putting a bit of cheese on his bayonet and firing a rifle every time a rat started to eat it."

CLIFFORD FRENCH NOW GONE THREE MONTHS

Local Youth Disappeared From Home—May Have Gone to Border.

Although it is now three months since Clifford French, the 19-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles French, of the Willow Grove section of the township, disappeared from his home on East Broad street, his parents have not yet given up hope that he will either communicate with them soon or will be located through their efforts. French disappeared just about the time that the mobilization order of the National Guard came, and it is the belief of his parents that he has joined the army.

Prior to leaving home young French was employed in Westfield. In order to allay suspicion he took his cloths at various times to a cleaner to be pressed and never brought them back. When he had gotten most of his belongings away from home in that manner he returned home one night and the next morning was missing.

A few days before the National Guard contingents were leaving for the border, and his parents are of the opinion that he is now somewhere on the border.

LOCAL TAXPAYERS HAVE PLEASANT VISIONS OF RATE

That taxpayers were indignant last night when they found that the rate this year had taken a big jump, is a good way of expressing the way they felt. After wathing it increase steadily year by year, the borough residents find the rate has jumped from $1.82 to $2.08, and with the probability of a sewer being installed in the near future at a cost of about $100,000, taxpayers are getting visions of a still higher rate.

Fanwood township was raised from $1.55 to $1.92 and in another year may reach the $2 mark. The same as in the borough, the issuance of over $60,000 worth of school bonds recently has only added to the increase.

SCHOOL WORK PROGRESSING.

A conference of the contractors doing the work on the new eight-room addition to School No. 1 and the improvements on the main building, was held yesterday afternoon, and it was generally agreed that the main structure would be ready for use for the school opening October 2. Fireproof stairs and a number of other improvements are being made in the school, and if those are completed the building will be all right to use while the addition is being completed.

BAPTIST FAIR AND SUPPER.

The Lend-a-hand Society of the Baptist church is making arrangements for a fair and supper in the parlors of the church during the first week in October. Committees are to be appointed to prepare the various booths and a committee will have charge of the arrangements for supper.

REV. J. MADISON HARE TO PREACH IN BAPTIST CHURCH

In a telephone message to Mrs. Hare last night the Rev. J. Madison Hare said that he had been granted a leave of absence from Saturday afternoon until Sunday afternoon, and would preach at the Baptist church at the Sunday morning service, another chaplain taking charge of the services at the camp of the Fourth Regiment at Sea Girt. It will be the first time he has been home since he is expected to get a great welcome.

Mr. Hare said that he nor any one else in the regiment knows when they will be mustered out and sent home. The camp is arranged so that left for the border in June, and he the men could stay all winter if necessary. For the past week he has been range officer and has been instructing the men to shoot.

GATHERED AT RANDOM

Mrs. Herbert B. Saunders, Miss Margaret Simpson and Miss Kathleen Saunders attended an opera given on the campus of the College of the City of New York, Tuesday evening.

Edward Hatfield, Fred Saunders and Thomas Houston expect to go to Slidell, La., where they will engage in ship building under the direction of Captain H. B. Saunders.

Adelaide and "Billy" Lindsey, children of Mr. and Mrs. William Lindsey, underwent operations at Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday, for removal of tonsils and adenoids.

The teachers of School No. 1 are attending daily lectures in the Westfield High School under the direction of Dr. Savitz, until October 2, the date set for the opening of the schools.

A meeting of the Ladies' Circle of the Baptist church will be held at the home of Mrs. F. I. Smith this afternoon, to work in the interest of the fair.

ANNUAL CLAMBAKE HELD AT FROWERY'S HOTEL TODAY

The fifth annual clambake at Herman Frowery's hotel in Scotch Plains is being held today. Nearly seventy-five sat down to dinner at a table set in the rear of the historic inn at 2:30 this afternoon, and the affair will not break up until late tonight.

All through the day various sports were enjoyed, and while dinner was being served, music was enjoyed. "Kaiser" Schmidt was the excellent toastmaster for the occasion.

STONY HILL DANCE.

Arrangements are being made for the holding of the next dance at the Stony Hill parish house on Friday night, September 29. Father Waldron, the new priest, who is taking Father McGrath's place, will be present, and a special program will be enjoyed.

COLGATE IS FRIEND OF AUTO OWNERS

Has Helped Make Driving Safe for Both Motorist and Pedestrian.

Trenton, Sept. 21.—Automobilists of New Jedsey are manifesting keen interest is based upon the part played tor Austen Colgate for the Republican nomination for Governor. Their interest is baser upon the part played by the Senator in legislation in this State tending to make the roads safe places for all autoists. During his long service as a member of the New Jersey Senate, Senator Colgate has always been alert in all matters pertaining to the regulation of automobile traffic, and the high standard achieved by this State in legislating for automobile traffic is in a large measure due to Senator Colgate's insistment upon constructive and reasonable law making.

Senator Colgate was the introducer of the well known section of the automobile law limiting speed to a mile in seven minutes on sharp curves; a mile in five minutes at road intersection, and in built up sections of cities or where houses are but 100 feet apart, and a mile in four minutes when a horse is within 200 feet of an auto. He also introduced the provision requiring lights on horse drawn vehicles from one hour before sunset until one hour after sunrise.

He also introduced the comprehensive auto law which was the forerunner of much of the progressive auto legislation of the last few years, defining administration of the law, speed regulations, court proceedings and regulating traffic. He fathered the act permitting chains on autos, and the act forbidding cutouts in cities and crowded districts, and, also, forbidding excessive noises of any kind and the production of annoying gases.

Safety first has always been Senator Colgate's auto legislation policy, and this was based upon his actual experiences as a driver and owner. He was responsible for the law making the driving of a motor vehicle while in an intoxicated condition, on a bet, without the consent of the owner of the car, or while displaying a false registration number offences constituting a misdemeanor.

Members of the Marie F. Brake Bible Class will hold a corn roast and picnic tomorrow afternoon in Watchung. High School girls wishing to accompany the members may do so by reporting at the association at 2:30, when the party will leave.

What's In a Name.

The victim of an accident glanced thoughtfully at the caller's card.

"I guess you're what they call an ambulance chaser, ain't you?" demanded the injured one.

"That's rather a harsh name, old man," replied the lawyer blandly. "Why not call me a settlement worker?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

ONE REGIMENT TO COME HOME FOR EACH NEW ONE SENT TO THE BORDER

General Funston Given Full Powers as to Which Troops Shall Be Ordered Back to Their State Camps.

Men Now Assembled In El Paso District Number 39,000. Ohio Troops Get Modern Observation Balloon.

THE war department has sent orders to General Funston to return regiments of the national guard now on the border in exact ratio of one regiment to return for each new regiment sent down.

The Second New York will be one of the first regiments to return, and General Funston will be given discretion to select other regiments. The train equipment used to transport a regiment south will be used to convey returning regiments north.

When national guard organizations are ordered to home stations for mustering out the members who apply may be discharged at border stations when specifications are made in evident good faith and when they are approved by all national guard commanders concerned.

Indiana Students to Stay.

University of Indiana students with the medical corps will not be permitted to return with Company I of the First regiment, stationed at Llano Grande. This was indicated by the action in the case of eight University of Minnesota men who had been transferred from the university battery to the hospital corps and who were not permitted to return to Fort Snelling with their fellow students.

Among the university students with the hospital and infantry corps are: Vernon Brigham, Paul Bailey, William McCool and Privates Chancellor Schwarz and Fred Baker.

The judge advocate general holds that a man who is eligible to retire from the federalized national guard under the dependent family act is not barred from such retirement because he entered the service after the call for state troops June 21. He makes this ruling in a formal opinion presented in answer to an inquiry made by Senator Kern.

Several Indiana enlisted men made application to be retired under the dependent family act, but General Funston held that the act did not apply to them because they enlisted after the call for the national guard to mobilize was issued. The advocate general thus overrules General Funston.

39,000 Men Assembled.

With the arrival of the last contingent of Ohio troops at El Paso the largest body of troops gathered in this country since the close of the civil war is under canvas in the camps near Fort Bliss, 39,000 men, of whom 23,000 are national guardsmen, according to figures announced by General George Bell, Jr.

Tentative plans are under way in Washington for a review of all the troops in this district by President Wilson in October. The president is scheduled to speak at the dedication of the Elephant Butte irrigation project on Oct. 14.

The Ohio infantry, commanded by Colonel L. W. Howard of Toledo, and the Second Ohio infantry, commanded by Colonel Guy Deming of Ada, accompanied by Brigadier General W. V. McMaken of Toledo, are now well established in Camp Pershing.

The Third Ohio infantry, under Colonel R. L. Hubler of Dayton, bringing the Cleveland Grays, has also encamped. The newly arrived Ohio troops are quartered just north of the Fifth regiment. All Ohio infantry organizations will be kept close together.

Lieutenant Colonel Benson W. Hough of the Fourth Ohio has joined his regiment.

Don't Walk Behind the Army Mule.

The army mule is one big problem for each regiment for a day or two, and they are particularly obstreperous when first taken from the main corral.

Men of the Ohio battalion of artillery had a busy time when they shoed thirty-one of the animals. Sergeant John Hedges of Circleville, O., of the machine gun company of the Fourth, is in the hospital because he walked behind a mule.

Sergeant A. J. Ulam of Warren, O., of Company D of the Fifth, has received an order for his discharge because of dependents and will leave soon for Warren.

There is still talk that Ohio troops will be given border patrol duty soon. Many men say they are eager for it. The Thirty-first and Thirty-second Michigan regiments, which have been doing such duty, are eager to be relieved.

Balloon For Ohio Troops.

The first modern observation balloon in the American army is to be given a test at El Paso in a few days. It is the military observation balloon which a tire and rubber company has presented to the Ohio national guard on the border through Battery B of the first Ohio artillery.

The balloon is being filled with hydrogen gas at the refining plant and will require 25,000 cubic feet before it is fully inflated and ready for a test trip over the army camps.

Sergeant Ralph Upson of Battery B is in charge of the balloon as an aviation expert. He was the winning pilot in the James Gordon Bennett balloon cup race in Paris in 1913 and is an expert in affairs of the air.

Private C. F. Walker, also of Batter B, is his assistant. The big balloon is valued at $10,000. The basket will carry four passengers, and the balloon is similar to those in use in the European war zone.

Every Day Is Wash Day.

Many soldiers of the Pennsylvania regiments have become real "washwomen" since they left home and admit that they never will tell their mothers, wives and sweethearts how adept they are in manipulating the washboard and how proficient in hanging out clothes on the line.

The pay of the enlisted men does not warrant them sending washable clothes to steam laundries in El Paso. These are taken advantage of only by the officers, but the college boys, the sons of the wealthy and in fact every man has found it absolutely necessary to work out his own salvation. Frequent inspection of clothing makes it necessary for every soldier to show two clean suits of underclothing, three pairs of stockings, an extra flannel shirt and breeches, which make every day a wash day for some soldiers.

Until the company laundry system became so conspicuous it was one of the most laughable sights to see men from all walks of life at the washtub. They would rip and tear the clothes and put articles in the tub containing fountain pens and indelible pencils, with the result that but few minutes would elapse before white garments would either receive a coloring or be spoiled in some way.

Illinois Troops "Taste" War.

Private Cecil Thresher of Battery D, First Illinois field artillery, was the hero in a stampede of more than 100 horses at the Leon Springs camp. While attempting to get the frenzied animals under control Thresher was knocked down and trampled upon and suffered severe injuries about the head. The horses stampeded while being led to watering troughs.

A taste of real war was experienced by Chicago artillerymen at Leon Springs when shells fired on the range struck treetops and exploded within 100 feet of gunners. The trees struck were demolished as by a hurricane. The gunners were protected by steel shields on the fieldpieces.

Soldiers of the Seventh Illinois infantry who know how to tame a wild motorcycle are eager to be attached to the new company to be organized by Brigadier General Henry A. Green for the Austin divisional hike. The motorcycle company, of a type which is expected to supplant cavalry for advance work and motor truck escorting, will consist of thirty motorcycles with sixty riders, each a skilled motorcycle driver as well as infantryman.

First and Second Kansas There.

The First and Second Kansas regiments are installed near Fort Sam Houston. They came on motor trucks from Eagle Pass, 180 miles distant. The regiments immediately pitched camp on the site formerly occupied by the First and Second Illinois. They were cheered into camp by their brigade comrades of the Seventh Illinois.

A world's record was accomplished by 130 motor trucks, which carried the two regiments. The trip from San Antonio to Eagle Pass and the complete loading of the trucks were accomplished in forty-eight hours. The return trip also was made in forty-eight hours. Infantry on foot would have required twelve days.

The Seventy-first infantry, the first regiment of the New York division to arrive from the border, is at Camp Whitman, Beekman, N. Y., being held in camp under a strict guard because of three cases of illness which the regimental surgeons fear may develop into paratyphoid, the disease which first broke out in the camp at Mission, Tex., about six miles from McAllen, where the Seventy-first was stationed.

Returned Troops Shiver.

Generally speaking, the men of the regiment are in excellent physical condition and are glad to be back north again, although the change in temperature is causing many of them to long for the heat of Texas. Coming out of a climate where the temperature rarely drops below 70 degrees, the men are feeling the change severely. During the day they remark on the delightful change, but after sundown they begin to realize just how great is the change.

Sweaters which were issued while the regiment was camped on the border have been hauled from the kit bags and rolls. The men who were lucky enough to own olive drab woolen trousers and blouses put them on in preference to the cotton suits, which were so comfortable on the border.

The sun hardly sinks behind the western hills when the first campfire is started. In half an hour there are fires at the end of every company street, and each fire is surrounded by a score or more shivering guardsmen.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

BAPTIST CHURCH BURNS MORTGAGE

Reception to New Pastor is Marked by Freeing Property of Debt.

In the presence of about two hundred people, Deacon Albert Soper, of the South Plainfield Baptist church, last night burned the mortgage on the church property, this action being taken as a result of the successful termination of a campaign to raise $1,200. Assemblyman William N. Runyon and A. C. Estes, secretary of the local Y. M. C. A., made appropriate addresses in which they extended their congratulations to the members of the church for the splendid work done in raising the necessary amount of money.

During the course of the evening, Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Thorne introduced the pastor, the Rev. William Porter Townsend, and his wife. Refreshments were served during the evening and a formal reception was tendered the new pastor.

TUBERCULOSIS WEEK DECEMBER 3 TO 10

December 3 to December 10 inclusive has been set aside as Tuberculosis Week in the United States, according to an announcement today by The National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis.

During this week an effort will be made to enlist the co-operation of every church, school, anti-tuberculosis and public health organization, lodge, and working men's organization in the United States in an effort to bring tuberculosis to the attention of the people.

Three special feature days will be held during the week. December 6 will be National Medical Examination Day. On that day an effort will be made to get everybody, men, women and children, whether sick or well, to be examined in order to find out if they have any defects of impairments of their bodies that need attention. If examination is not possible on December 6, appointments will be made then for later examination

December 8 will be Children's Health Crusade Day. It is hoped at that time to launch a national organization of Modern Health Crusaders, an association of the children of the United States in the public schools, for fighting against tuberculosis and for better health.

December 3 or 10 will be observed, according to the convenience of the churches, as Tuberculosis Day. A special sermon and a series of talking points for ministers and others have been prepared and will be ready for distribution in the near future.

Last year over 150,000 organizations and institutions took part in the Tuberculosis Week celebration. It is expected that this year this number will be greatly increased.

COURT RESERVES EDICT IN PLAINFIELD BUILDING CASE

After hearing argument on Tuesday Vice-Chancellor Stevens promised to decide in a few days whether the trustees of the Samuel Dreyer estate, of this city, were improvident when they contracted for the alteration of a property at West Front street and Madison avenue, this city, at a cost of $4,043. The remodelling was made necessary by the widening of Madison avenue, as a result of which eight and one-half feet was sliced off the building. For this the estate was awarded $10,000 damages in condemnation proceedings.

As counsel for Mrs. Bertha Senger, daughter of Samuel Dreier, William R. Wilson, of Elizabeth, argued that the building could have been restored for $2,000. He submitted affidavits from contractors to support this contention. Counter affidavits were read by William Newcorn, of Plainfield, in behalf of the trustees.

MISS AMELIA BISHOP DIES FOLLOWING OPERATION

Miss Amelia Bishop, the fourteen year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bishop, of New Brunswick, died at 5 o'clock this morning in Muhlenberg Hospital, following an operation for appendicitis. The girl was removed to the hospital last night from the home of Mrs. W. B. Martin, of 1261 Marion avenue, with whom she has made her home for the past two years. Up to the time of the fatal attack, she was an unusually healthy girl, rarely complaining of not feeling well.

Beside her parents, she is survived by four brothers, John, of New Brunswick; James, of Oak Tree; Robert and George, of North Plainfield, and two sisters, Margaret and Annie, also of North Plainfield. The latter four are in the Children's Home on Westervelt avenue.

The funeral will be held at the residence of Mrs. Martin, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock and the service will be in charge of the Rev. C. S. Gillespie, pastor of the Grace M. E. church. Interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

C. E. COMMITTEE HOLDS FIRST FALL MEETING

Elizabeth, Sept. 21.—The first fall executive committee meeting of the Union County Christian Endeavor Union, held at Elizabeth Tuesday evening, was well attended by many delegates from all sections of the county. The session was held in Bethany chapel, and was presided over by President Frederick L. Mintel, of Rahway.

George H Burt, of Roselle, superintendent of the Christian citizenship department, reported that plans were nearly completed for the supper conference on the work of this department. This conference is to be held in the Cranford Presbyterian church, on Friday evening, October 13.

President Mintel called attention to the State Christian Endeavor convention at Red Bank, October 4, 5 and 6, and urged every society in the union to send at least one delegate to this convention. He also urged that the society take up the "millions campaign."

POSTPONE FLAG SERVICE ON DEATH OF DOUGLASS

The actual presentation of the flag to Douglas Camp, No. 11, Uniformed Rank Knights of Pythias, which was scheduled for last evening in Bethel chapel, was postponed by order of Major S. H. Smith and Captain J. A. Cox, owing to the sudden illness and death of "Colonel" William J. Douglass.

Following an address of welcome to the large delegation present last evening by Rev. William Lloyd Imes, the pastor of Bethel chapel, "Colonel" Douglass responded in a brief address. A few minutes after he had taken his seat, friends sitting near him on the platform noticed that he tottered and assisted him to his home where he died an hour and a half later. Death was due to appoplexy.

The officers of the Knights of Pythias announced that the flag presentation would be held at a date to be decided upon later.

New Providence

William Jeffery, of Plainfield avenue, Berkeley Heights, has gone to Bremerton, Wash., and will travel in the Far East.

The teachers of Columbia School, Berkeley Heights, were entertained Tuesday by Miss Olive Bogart, of Springfield avenue, Gillette. Miss Bogart, who has been a teacher in the school for several years, has resigned.

Mayor and Mrs. Thomas P. Crane returned Tuesday from a motor trip to Staten Island.

WOULD PLAINFIELD JOIN COUNTY LEAGUE?

The germ of a great idea is beginning to infect Union county clubs. It's a germ that ought to bring about a more widespread epidemic in this county than the demon I. P. "bug," and will create an equal amount of interest as far as sports hereabouts are concerned. Simply stated, there has been quite a bit of talk of organizing a Union county tennis league.

Possibilities for such a circuit are exceptianlly strong, and the dubious reader has only to glance back over the tennis records of the past summer to be convinced as to the feasibility of such a project. Practically every club in the country has run off tournaments this summer, and each has been successful. Several clubs, such as the Ilderan, Westfield Golf and the Plainfield Country Club are now equipped with lighting facilities to take care of night tennis matches.

Other matches could be played, of course, on Saturdays and Sundays, when those clubs without lighted courts were the hosts. There is the Park Club, of this city; Cranford Canoe Club, the Roselle Casino, the Westfield Tennis Club, to say nothing of the Elizabeth Town and Country Club. Should the courts at Shackamaxon be completed by next spring, this club, too, would be among the list of eligibles.

The Metropolitan Store

The Rothberg Store is a metropolitan Clothing shop in every sense.

Its shelves and cabinets are filled with precisely the same character of "Things Men Wear" as you would find in the best shops of the larger cities. Its patterns are kept up-to-date—its styles new, because with one of the biggest clothing business in the city we are permitted to do what other stores can not do.

Our stocks have never been more attractive than at present, which means that a "Rothberg Tour" of the store right now would prove very interesting.

Good Impulses.

A mere good impulse that does not result in good works is rather worse than useless, for if not carried out in deed it has a reaction instead of an action as its outcome.

Happiness at least is not solitary. It joys to communicate; it loves others, for it depends on them for its existence.

Telephone Construction In the Canal Zone

DETACHMENT OF SIGNAL CORPS WORKING ON BANKS OF CULEBRA CUT.

The Telephone Review, N. Y., publishes a brief account of the construction of telephone systems along the Panama Canal, by the Signal Corps of the United States Army, with some extremely interesting photographs of the Signal Corps detachments at work along Culebra Cut.

The Signal Corps is charged with the duty of providing all means for the transmission of information in time of war, whether by telephone, telegraph, radio, flying machine, or by visual signaling methods.

The Signal Corps troops are accordingly organized into field, telegraph, radio, and aero companies, depending on the kind of duty assigned that organization. The field companies are equipped with wire carts and "buzzers" and provide insulated "field" lines laid rapidly on the ground for use during the tactical operations of large bodies of troops in battle.

The radio companies are mobile mounted organizations, provided with portable radio sets which can accompany the army into the field.

The aero company is provided with six aeroplanes.

The telegraph company is an organization made up of telephone and telegraph experts trained to provide the necessary telephone and telegraph construction connecting an army with its base.

The Signal Corps of our army is very small and totally inadequate to meet the needs of the nation should it engage in war. Should war come it would be necessary for the Government to depend on volunteers to secure the required technical men to fill up the many "field" radio, and telegraph companies needed.

After the completion of the Panama Canal, troops of the regular army were sent to Panama and established military posts at Camp E. S. Otis, Empire, Culebra, Corozal, Gatun, and Quarry Heights. Last fall, a platoon of Telegraph Co. "H" Signal Corps, was sent to the Isthmus to build the necessary telephone system for these posts.

The work, which was done under the direction of Major C. McK. Saltzman, Signal Corps, has been completed, and each post now has a modern central energy system with an instrument in every office, barrack, and officer's quarters. Each post system is connected by trunks to the system of the Panama Railroad Company, which enables any officer, barrack, or office to communicate with any other officer, barrack, or office in the Canal Zone.

The completed systems are giving the most excellent satisfaction, and reflect credit on the soldiers who built them.

CONSTRUCTION PARTY AT WORK IN CULEBRA CUT.

THE STAR THAT GETS BUSINESS

Merchant's Telephone Directory Listing Wins a Nation For a Customer.

The head of a large New York concern, answering his telephone recently, was greeted by this statement, according to The Telephone Review, N. Y., which prints the story as an authentic example of what can be accomplished by telephone:

"You do not know me, nor have I ever met you, but I am in the market for some cocoas. I am not familiar with New York City, but in looking through the classified directory, I saw your name, and referring to the telephone book I found that your concern was the only one with a star before the name, which led me to believe that you were a bigger concern than the others."

The speaker was purchasing agent for the Russian Government and he bought $100,000 worth of cocoa. All of the business, with the exception of submitting samples, was done by telephone. The two men never saw each other from the beginning of the deal to the end. The money was placed in a New York bank and when the goods were delivered the money was paid.

One-hundred-thousand-dollar orders may not be guaranteed to follow the installation of a private branch exchange system, which will insure a star before one's name in the telephone book, but the merchant in question does not hesitate to attribute this order of his to this mark of distinction in the telephone directory listing.

Pioneers of Hawaii.

The early history of the Hawaiian Islands is entirely legendary and traditionary. The earliest inhabitants, according to estimate, must have come hither about 500 A. D. They voyaged northward in their canoes from the island of Savaii, in the Samoan group, which seems to have been the chief center of dispersion of the Polynesian race, to which the Hawaiians belong. There is a great similarity in the speech of all Polynesians. To have voyaged this distance of over 2,000 miles to their newly adopted home through the unknown, uncharted and sometimes tempestuous seas in their small, open and exposed craft and subsequently to have gone back and forth, as their traditions indicate them to have done, and, finally, to have traveled from island to island in the Hawaiian group with no compass but the stars overhead, certainly stamps them as having been careful and resourceful navigators of no mean ability.—Exchange.

It is manly to love one's country; it is godlike to love the world.—J. W. Conklin.

AN ADVENTURE BY TELEPHONE

The life of a night chief operator in a telephone exchange is sometimes flavored by a touch of thrilling adventure.—participation over the wire in the chase of a burglar, the discovery of fire, summoning physicians,—the operator is the main actor in many a drama of momentous import. In the pages of The Telephone Review we read of an exciting situation which confronted an operator in a large city exchange at the fateful hour of 4.35 one winter morning. A subscriber's call came in and the operator answered, "Number, please," but no response came. The signal remained and again and again the operator answered it, but still no voice responded. Suddenly a terrible noise came over the line, as of some one struggling. At last the noise ceased, but the line lamp, signal to the operator, remained lighted, showing that the receiver of the telephone had not been replaced. The operator tried to attract the attention of the person near the telephone by ringing. She could hear heavy breathing as if the person were very near the telephone, but still no answer came. She rang on the line again, and even "put it up on the howler," but with no success. Someone could be distinctly heard moving around the room.

Plainly there was nothing to do but to notify Police Headquarters. The operator gave them the name and address of the subscriber and was promised that reserves would be sent to the house at once.

Half an hour later the mystery was solved. The "robber" was nothing more sinister than the family dog, who had knocked over the telephone instrument, had become entangled in the cord and was unable to extricate himself.

Where a King's Clothes Were Kept.

St. Andrew's-by-the-Wardrobe is a conspicuous waymark in Queen Victoria street and derives a grotesque distinguishing title from former proximity to the king's great wardrobe. This was originally the town mansion of Sir John Beauchamp and purchased from his executors by Edward III. for the keepers of the king's apparel. "There were kept," says Fuller, "the ancient clothes of our English kings which they wore on great festivals." Shakespeare in his will left to his favorite daughter, Susannah, the Warwickshire doctor's wife, a house near the wardrobe, "where in one John Robinson dwelleth." The present Church of St. Andrew's-by-the-Wardrobe was rebuilt by Wren after the great fire and became the city center of the evangelical revival under William Romaine.—Westminster Gazette.

Never at a Loss.

"This is the flat."

"The rooms are rather dark."

"Great for photography," enthused the agent.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

REPUBLICANS!

If you want a Republican Governor vote for Austen Colgate at the Primary next Tuesday.

Colgate is the strongest Republican candidate.

Because:

His standing as a business man and his record in public life are so irreproachable that his opponents will be able to bring no charges against him.

He is the only Republican who can offset the strength of the Democratic nominee in Hudson County, the stronghold of the Democracy, and poll the full party vote in the State.

A vote for Colgate next Tuesday is a vote for Republican victory in November.

THE QUESTIONER.

By Carl Werner.

I called the boy to my knee one day,
And I said: "You're just past four;
Will you laugh in that same light-hearted way
When you're turned, say, thirty more?"
Then I thought of a past I'd fain erase—
More clouded skies than blue—
And I anxiously peered in his upturned face
For it seemed to say:
"Did you?"

I touched my lips to his tiny own
And I said to the boy: "Heigh, ho!
Those lips are as sweet as the hay, new-mown;
Will you keep them always so?"
Then back from those years came a rakish song—
With a ribald jest or two—
And I gazed at the child who knew no wrong,
And I thought he asked:
"Did you?"

I looked in his eyes, big, brown and clear,
And I cried: "Oh, boy of mine!
Will you keep them true in the after-year?
Will you leave no heart to pine?"
Then out of the past came another's eyes—
Sad eyes of tear-dimmed blue—
Did he know they were not his mother's eyes?
For he answered me:
"Did you?"

—From Scribner's Magazine.

Marriage Sanctity.

Mrs. Lucy Harrington, chairman of the Marriage Sanctity Committee, has just introduced and carried a resolution in the Colorado State Congress of Mothers urging the National Congress of Mothers to get a combined action of all the State congresses to petition the United States Congress to pass uniform marriage and divorce laws. Mrs. Harrington is particularly well fitted to fill this office as she has been city recorder for many years.

Mrs. Stover's Nevers.

The following is a list of Mrs. Stover's "Nevers," of whose little daughters we are reading such wonderful things:

Never spank.
Never scold.
Never say don't or must.
Never lose self-respect.
Never frighten.
Never refuse to answer questions.
Never ridicule.
Never tease.
Never say "I can't."

Never let any place be more attractive than home and always keep the fairies.

Mrs. Stover also says more can be taught with a typewriter than in any other way. That the finding of the correct letter on the machine and the comparison of the copy fixes the matter firmly in the mind for all time.

Letting Children Learn.

The whole beauty and merit of that which we refuse to call the Stoner system lay in the fact that there was nothing new or secret in it. They will doubtless take up this excellent lady's technique and, by the petrifying process of the theoretical mind, proceed to make a rockbound system out of it. Never mind, she has revealed her secret or success to those who cared to listen. She has indicated that normal children are disposed and able to learn pretty much everything, so long as it is presented to them in an interesting way. In other words, she has told us something which nobody would for a moment seek to deny.

No one overtly denies that an ordinary child is capable of learning more than an ordinary school can teach it; but schools, teachers and parents are in a silent conspiracy to forget the fact. Formalized, wholesale instruction by books and exercise are perhaps the necessary consequences of our having taken education wholly ou of the home. The real marvel is not that Mrs. Stoner's daughter has learned so much; it is that her young contemporaries in school have acquired so very little of the mind's goods.

No question that in these busy days of absentee manhood and busy womanhood the home is a dull place for the child, and the school the necessary place of instruction. We are not likely even in the homes of the wealthy to see schooling ever give way wholly to private instruction. Yet with all the admirable efficiency of our systematized schools admitted, some of the mothers who heard Mrs. Stoner must have asked themselves: If I were as learned and as industrious as my childrn's school teacher, could I not teach them more and faster than they learn at school?

Lesson in Good Manners.

A well known lawyer is telling a good story about himself and his efforts to correct the manners of his office boy. One morning not long ago the young autocrat blew into the office and, tossing his cap at a hook, exclaimed:

"Say, Mr. Blank, there's a ball game down at the park today, and I'm going."

Now, the attorney is not a hard-hearted man and was willing the boy should go, but thought he would teach him a little lesson in good manners.

"Jimmie," he said, "that isn't the way to ask a favor. Now, you come over here and sit down and I'll show you how to do it."

The boy took the office chair and his employer picked up his cap and stepped outside. He then opened the door softly, and, holding his cap in his hand, said quietly to the small boy in the big chair:

"Please, sir, there is a ball game at the park today; if you can spare me I would like to get away for the afternoon."

In a flash the boy responded:

"Why, certainly, Jimmie; and here is 50 cents to pay your way in."—Short Stories.

WORKINGMEN COME OUT FOR COLGATE

Strong Tribute to Candidate in Voluntary Statement From Trenton.

One of the strongest tributes to the record of Col. Austen Colgate as a public official and as a citizen came to his headquarters the other day in the form of a voluntary statement signed by a number of workingmen of Trenton. The statement was prepared without the knowledge of Col. Colgate and without suggestion, recommendation or orders from any one connected with, or favorable to his candidacy, outside of the men who signed it. It follows:

We, the undersigned, citizens and workingmen of Union county, appeal to the voters of Mercer county and of the State at large, to nominate Austen Colgate for Governor at the primaries, September 26, and furthermore, in the event of his nomination, to vote for him in the general election in November. We feel that we have a just right in so doing, after thoroughly investigating his good service to the people of this State as their Senator. The bills that he has backed and stood for, together with those laws he has placed on the statute books, are to our benefit and the benefit of the people of the entire State, and in view of this fact, we feel that it is our honorable duty to speak now. At the time he was working for our benefit he requested us on our honor not to inject any politics whatever in our action, but to assist him in his great efforts in passing our laws. He has not, at this time, requested this statement, directly or indirectly, but the events of the campaign have been so misleading, we feel we would not be fair to ourselves, to the people, or to Colonel Colgate if we at this time kept silent.

Previous to the opening of the Legislature in 1916 we, as citizens, met to discuss what we could do to better the conditions of the working people in the fairest possible way to the employer and employe. We found that our liability law needed amending, and that the casualty insurance companies of this State were not playing fair with the employer or employe, while they were receiving the highest possible rates. For instance, when a poor man or woman was injured or killed, we had no law to let us know whether they did or did not receive their compensation, as the law provided. We sent a committee to Colonel Colgate, after investigating and finding that he himself was the employer of over three thousand men and women in this State. We felt that he would better understand our wants.

He received us as our humble servant, listened to us, promised us then and there to help, and asked our support in assisting him in his efforts. He introduced our bill No. 25, known as the Colgate bill, to strengthen our liability laws. He told us to see, if possible, every member of the Senate and General Assembly regarding its passage, irrespective of politics, and to take into our confidence our employers, for he felt that the bill was a fair one. He considered a law that was to the interest of both employer and employe as the only kind of a law to put on our books. The bill was referred to a committee on labor and industry, with Senator Stevens, of Cape May county, as chairman. Several hearings were given the bill; at the first hearing our committee was notified by Colonel Colgate, and with his great assistance our committee ably presented their side, which was not to the liking of Senator Stevens. It was opposed by speakers for the State Manufacturers' Association, several insurance companies, the Public Service Corporation, and other large employers of labor.

After all the hearings of the bill were over, with the greatest effort, being true to his promise, Colonel Colgate forced the bill out of the committee for its final passage. Senator Stevens introduced and passed, over Senator Colgate's objections, amendments eliminating several of its good features, one in particular, the industrial diseases clause. Senator Colgate notified us of the fact and we advised him to pass the bill as it was, for we knew what was left in the bill would do us a great deal of good, even if we could not get the original bill, and he did so, and now poor widows and orphans, together with those who are dependent on the injured, are receiving the benefit of this great law. A signed report of all accidents must be sent to the Compensation Bureau of this State by the employer and employe jointly, stating that the law has been fulfilled. There is no delay in payments now and the dependents know just what and when and how much they are justly entitled to, and they get it.

This and many other good laws, too numerous to mention, have been passed by Colonel Colgate's efforts to our knowledge, for the good of the people of this State. Our statement hereby given is in part of justice to him, prompted by no political leader nor by himself. Inasmuch as there have been many small political tricks done so far in the campaign by his opponents, and that Senator Stevens is now campaigning for a candidate against Colonel Colgate, we deem it our just duty to let the working fathers, sons, mothers and daughters know who their friend really is by speaking of him as we have found him. We do not speak for any political body or represent any labor organization as a body, but as private citizens, ready to take an affidavit to the truth of this statement, and we would humbly appeal to the voters of this State to nominate as their Governor Senator Austen Colgate, in justice to themselves, their families and to the State. We ask you not to vote for any man who is now being supported by the men who were opposed to the laws that would have done so much for us and for every working man and small employer in the State.

Very truly yours,

LITTLE SATISFACTION FOR LOCAL OPTIONISTS.

In an editorial on Tuesday night the Daily Press stated that Rev. Birney S. Hudson had done Colonel Austen Colgate an injustice when he stated in a speech that the Essex man would have taken the same attitude as Mr. Edge in opposing the closing of saloons on Sunday, had Colgate been placed in Edge's position. Mr. Hudson yesterday stated that he made the assertion because in his opinion Colgate has the support of the Essex county liquor interests, and because the Essex county Senator voted against the local option bill at the same time that Edge did. Certainly the clergyman, for whom we have the highest respect, cannot mean that Colgate is the same type of man as Edge, and stands for the same lax enforcement of law that Edge's newspapers in Atlantic county have done. Mr. Hudson judges the two men only on the one matter, that of their attitude toward local option. We are sure that after his wide experience in Atlantic City, Dr. Hudson will admit that there are other reasons for opposing Edge besides that one vote, which cannot be presented against Colgate.

Dr. Hudson points out, using an article in the American Issue as evidence, that Colgate has the support of at least some of the liquor men of the State. What candidate has not? No man seeking office feels that every supporter he has is desirable, and yet no one could expect him to proclaim from the housetops that he does not want the vote of certain persons. Many a man who has been independent and stood for the right has had the support at the polls of some vicious element of the population, but that has not affected his course after election. The Daily Press has made no effort to criticise or to defend any man's vote on local option. We have considered that as only one of many reasons for considering why a man is fit, or not fit, for office.

There are only three men who have a chance of being nominated and elected. They are Colgate, Edge and Wittpenn, and we fear that the local optionists can get little satisfaction from any of these, except that all would sign a local option bill in case the Legislature passed it. Of the two Republicans, however, Colgate comes nearer to the ideal which these people are seeking, than does Edge. His whole personal record bears out this statement.

MARTINE'S VOTE.

(From the Newark Evening News.)

It has been suggested that the Senatorial vote in next week's Democratic primaries will go far to indicate President Wilson's popularity among New Jersey Democrats. This is on the theory that the administration is opposed to the renomination of Senator Martine, and therefore every vote received by the Farmer Orator means a vote against President Wilson. Fortunately for the President, there is small basis of truth in this notion, because there is every indication that Mr. Martine will show remarkable strength at the primary election. If his vote could be construed as a deliberate expression of New Jersey's Democratic opinion of the President, the latter would have no reason to feel complimented.

However, no such view can be taken of the Martine vote. The men who will support him are no less loyal to the President than those who will give their votes to Wescott. They simply propose to exercise a freeman's right to choose among candidates of their own party that one who makes the strongest appeal to their favor, and they deny the right of the President or anybody else to dictate their course. In this there is no feeling of hostility toward the President. They admit his right to prefer Wescott, and they do not question his reasons, but they demand the same right to prefer Martine for reasons to them equally valid.

Senator Martine's strength is largely personal. It is the sort that is swayed more by impulse than by reason. It is the kind that leads a man to say, "He's a good old scout and I'm going to vote for him." And, besides, there is a strong suspicion that if Wilson made a mistake in picking Martine five years ago, he has not exhibited any greater wisdom in his choice this year.

In these days when the cost of living is mounting higher every minute, and a lot of disgruntled citizens are complaining about the extravagance of the city government, it is indeed gratifying to learn that the Council has managed things so well that the tax rate is to remain the same as last year. We doubt whether there is another community in the State as large as Plainfield that can equal this achievement of the Plainfield city fathers. The actual cost of running the city has been reduced, for the county rate and school rate have gone up. Plainfield may well be proud of the city fathers.

The Union County Board of Freeholders, or its sub-committee that is to conduct the investigation into affairs of the Board, made a wise move Tuesday when reporters were invited to be present at all sessions of the probe body. The public has a right to demand that its representatives, the newspaper men, be informed of every step in this investigation, and if the Freeholders should deny the utmost publicity it will be because they have something to conceal.

W. L. SAUNDERS NAMED VICE CHAIRMAN OF BOARD

The scientific talent of America, embodied in twenty-four representatives and leaders of the foremost scientific societies of the country, among whom is W. L. Saunders of the borough, became a legalized branch of the United States navy yesterday, when the members of the Naval Consulting Board took their oaths of office under the provisions of a recently enacted law.

These scientists, chosen by the membership of the various societies, become officers of the government. They receive no salaries and Congress has limited the appropriation for actual expenses to $25,000, regarded as barely sufficient to maintain a secretariat.

The organization of these scientists into an official body is designed to provide a direct link between the navy and the engineering resources of the nation in a manner that will place the industrial forces directly behind the navy in time of war.

Mr. Saunders, who is a member of the American Society of Aeronautic Engineers, is named as the second vice-chairman of the board.

On the Spur of the Moment

by Roy K. Moulton

Our Family Pet.

Once upon a midnight dreary, as I pondered, weak and weary,
Over many a quaint and curious volume of forgotten lore,
While a short snooze I was snatching,
Suddenly there came a-scratching and 'twas on my chamber door.
"'Tis no visitor," I muttered, "scratching at my chamber door,
Just the cat and nothing more."

I knew what the cat expected, and I knew I was elected.
So I grabbed the noisy feline to perform my nightly chore.
Down the cold stairway I hurried while the chilly breezelets scurried
Round my shins and then I let him safely out the kitchen door.
I had put him out so often that it really made me sore,
Simply that and nothing more.

Back to my hall room I ambled and into the bed I scrambled.
When I heard a fearful wailing that I'd often heard before.
'Twas the same old caterwauling and the same old feline calling,
As he vainly tried to get in at the self-same kitchen door.
Then I hastened down the stairway and was chilled through to the core,
Just to let him in once more.

Her husband answered:

"Am short myself. Will send check in a few days. A thousand kisses."

Exasperated wife replied:

"Never mind money. I gave landlord one of the kisses. He was more than satisfied."

- Proctor's Theatre -

Belgium brought up to date is one of the things accomplished by Thomas Dixon in his newest dramtic spectacle, "The Fall of a Nation," which began a three-day engagement at Proctor's local theatre yesterday. The author has done this bit of realism without ghastly overemphasis, but the application is none the less clear. In a few feet of film he depicts the shooting of two veterans of the Civil War by the foreign foe, that comes in 1918 to lay its heavy hand on the unsuspecting United States. One of the first things done by the victorious invader is to post a proclamation announcing that the penalty of concealing arms in the dwellings of the captured will be death. The invaders search the house of the most ardent woman of peace in the country. Her father and brother had not agreed with her theories and have been prepared to do their small bit. When the search brings forth weapons of various descriptions, the old father, who marched with Sherman to the sea, and his war-time crony, are stood up against a wall. Not content with supplying such a remarkable production as "The Fall of a Nation," the Proctor management has also made room for a Fox production on each of the three days mentioned above. Today Bertha Kalish will appear in one of the greatest Fox screen series, "Ambition," while on Friday William Farnum will be presented in "The Man From Bitter Roots." These screen luminaries, togehter with such a wonderful spectacle as "The Fall of a Nation," is a combination that no one can afford to miss, and the most remarkable point about the attractions provided for today, Friday and Saturday, is the exceedingly low prices of admission. In the afternoons the lower floor is sold for 25c., and the balcony, 15c., while in the evenings all seats are sold at 25c. In connection with the presentation of this special program the doors will be opened at 1:15 p. m. and the performance will begin at 1:30 sharp.

Plainfield Theatre.

Variety seems to be the keynote of the entertaining program presented for the first time this afternoon at the Plainfield Theatre. Each of the five big vaudeville acts presents a little bit of something different from its predecessor. The bill which will be seen tonight, tomorrow and Saturday afternoon and nights, is headed by the miniature musical comedy, "The Garden of Love." A score of bewitching maidens, attired in chic costumes of varied hues, delight the spectators with expert rendition of intricate dance steps. Singing and all the latest jokes also add to the presentation. The act taken as a whole is one of the best that has been seen here in a long time.

Other acts on the program include Howard and Phillips, entertainers with nifty sayings and nifty doings; Richards and Delmo, who please with musical lumbers; the Sherwood Trio, with all the up-to-the-minute songs, and Vassar and Arkin, comedians extraordinary.

One of the big features of the bill and one which brought much favorable comment is the moving picture entitled "It Can't Be Done," in which local young people take the leading parts. The picture is a credit both to the company, the participants and the city of Plainfield. The photograph is excellent, the unconscious-of-the-camera air of the cast in their various roles and the beautiful scenes in and around Plainfield, make the film one long to be remembered. The picture will be included in each show tomorrow and Saturday as well as tonight. Don't fail to see your relatives, friends and neighbors in the local pictorial.

Beside the usual run of Pathe comedies, dramas and educational films, the program each day includes the noted Pathe Weekly, the animated newspaper of current happenings.

GETTING THE BOYS OUT OF THE TRENCHES

D. A. R. HOLDS ITS FIRST FALL MEETING

Camp Middlebrook Chapter Guest of Mrs. Plumb, of Bound Brook.

The Camp Middlebrook Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held the first meeting of the season Tuesday afternoon at the residence of Mrs. A. L. Plumb, 403 East Union avenue, Bound Brook. The hostesses for the occasion were Mrs. Plumb and Mrs. L. M. Coddington.

During the business session reports of the various officers were read and accepted and four applications for membership were presented by the registrar. Thirty-four members were in attendance at the meeting. A brief account of the Nathan Hale Chapter, Children of the American Revolution, which was organized on Bunker Hill Day, 1896, and of which she has had charge for twenty years, was given by Mrs. Thomae. Miss Langstroth, State Director of the D. A. R. followed with an interesting and enthusiastic talk on the beneficial value of the order in inspiring patriotism and greater interest in the history of our country in the minds of the young and ended with an earnest appeal to each member of the D. A. R. to help the growth of the younger order by being responsible for at least one new member.

A social hour followed, during which refreshments were served by the hostesses.

NEW BISHOP OF HARRISBURG.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 21.—Rev Philip R. McDevitt was concecrated bishop of the Catholic diocese of Harrisburg in the Cathedral of SS. ZERO WEATHER REACHES CAMP AT DOUGLAS

By JAMES J. McNAMEE

Friends of First Sergeant Robert H. Cox are hereby notified to begin fattening the festive calf. He is preparing papers to file for a Christmas furlough so that he may eat Christmas dinner in Plainfield. This just goes to show how his hopes for an early return have been shot to smithereens.

Reginal Ralli is still the champion letter writer. He has yet to pass up a twenty-four hours without sending a twenty-page letter back to North Plainfield. When he gets this important message off each evening he spends his remaining hours giving a Westfield newspaper some first hand dope on Villa and the Mexican situation.

"Fat" Cregar and "Taxi" Barry appeared in their new issue of clothes last night. After giving these two models the once-over the rest of the troop is afraid to appear in public with the new togs.

Time—Half hour before tape.

Scene—On a wooden bench in front of "Don" Fullerton's tent.

Characters—Cook Duclo and a half dozen "busted" troopers.

Plot—Duclo telling of that memorable visit to the regulars' camp one day two weeks ago, when he met a half dozen friends who had served with him six years ago. Just as taps sounded "Duc" began telling how his horse brought him back to camp safe and sound, put on his own nosebag, pumped his own water and tied himself to the picket line.

Corporal James Grosshauser is today celebrating his forty-fifth birthday and yesterday was his fifth wedding anniversary. Two occasions of so great importance coming so close together proved too much for him, and he decided to relieve himself of troop troubles by appointing Private Kirby a corporal to take his place. Kirby accepted the honor with due thanks and was all swelled up for the rest of the day.

Three horses have been lost to the squadron of cavalry during the last two days, two dying and a third being shot. For several weeks past it has been customary to take the dead animals to the smelter and have them cremated, this being decidedly easier than digging a twelve-foot hole in adamant earth, but yesterday the smelter officials put a stop to it. After Kirby and a detail had coaxed a dying animal all the way to the smelter and were preparing to cremate it, an officer appeared and put a stop to the funeral. Now they'll have to drage the beast back to camp and dig a grave.

"Fat" Cregar holds the camp record for the invention of ways and means to escape hard work. And what is more, he refuses to tip any of his friends off to the best methods.

With the thermometer down to 3[illegible] last night and every one freezing to death, the Plainfielders were wondering what the boys back at Camp Girt were doing. Last night was the coldest we have felt here, but the mercury has already crawled back to its accustomed mark over the centre spot. It is a case of freezing stiff a night and baking to death in the day time.

FORMULATE PLANS FOR WORK OF THE CONGRESS

The officers, board of managers and chairmen of the standing committees of the New Jersey Congress of Mothers and Parent-Teachers Associations, at a business meeting in the Women's Club room, Cooper Library, Camden, formulated plans for the work of the congress during the coming year. The following women were present: Mrs. Wellington Bechtel, president, of Haddonfield; Mrs. Reuben F. Corry, Riverton; Mrs. I. Grafton Sieber, of Audubon; Dr. Clara K. Bartlett, Atlantic City; Mrs. Theodore F. Dormann, Upper Montclair; Mrs. Alexander Marcy, Jr., Riverton; Mrs. Augustus H. Reeve, of Morristown; Mrs. J. Linton Engle, Haddonfield; Mrs. L. P. Tomlinson, Marlton; Mrs. Samuel P. Leeds, of Atlantic City, and Mrs. Francis D. Weaver, Camden.

The sixteenth annual meeting of the congress will be held at Upper Montclair, October 10 and 11, when a most interesting program will be carried out. The entire program will be announced later.

FLETCHER FAMILY REUNION.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 21.—The annual reunion of the Fletcher Family Union met in Horticultural Hall in this city today with Governor McCall, of Massachusetts, former Governor Allen M. Fletcher, of Vermont and Horace Fletcher, "the father of Fletcherism," scheduled as the guests of honor and principal speakers at the annual reunion banquet. Present at the opening of the gathering were members from many parts of the country, all claiming descent from Robert Fletcher, one of the earliest of New England settlers and founder of the family in America.

Anecdotes of Richter.

Mme. X. was singing at a rehearsal and was decidedly out of tune. Dr. Richter stood it as long as he could, then turned to her. "Madame," he said, "will you kindly give the orchestra your A?"

At another rehearsal one of the instrumentalists made a mistake. "No," said Dr. Richter; "it goes so (humming)—rum-tum tarum!" The same player made another mistake. "No, no—rum-tum tarum!" At the third mistake Dr. Richter momentarily lost patience and cried, "Why do you make so many mistakes, Mr. ——?" Then quickly recovering his habitual good humor, "Ah, I know why it is—you like to hear me sing!"—Manchester Guardian.

Why He Was on Time.

Beranger was one day complimented by a lady on the punctuality with which he kept his engagements. "It is a pleasure," said she, "to invite you to dinner, for you never make us wait."

"I am no longer young, madam," replied the poet, "and experience has taught me one thing—it is dangerous not to arrive at the precise hour, for the guests who are waiting for you will pass the time in discussing your faults."

A Rising Concern.

"So you've invested your money in a new airship company?"

"Yes. If our airship goes up the stock will go up."

"But suppose it doesn't?"

"Then the company will go up."—Boston Transcript.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

How an Emperor Rode In a Procession.

"Listen to the innocent!" cried his father.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

WHEN Jack and Evelyn were through playing leapfrog they ran to daddy for a bedtime story: "Two clever rogues pretended to weave some cloth for an emperor, but really they just took his money and said the cloth was so beautiful that nobody stupid could see it.

"A great procession was about to take place in the town, and the two swindlers held up their hands and said: 'This is the coat, these are the trousers and this a mantle. They are as light as a spider's web.'

"The courtiers, fearing they might be thought stupid, exclaimed.

"'Will your majesty be pleased to take off his clothes so we may put his new ones on him before this long mirror?' asked the crafty weavers.

"'How well his majesty looks in them!' all the courtiers cried. 'How becoming they are! What designs and what colors! Gorgeous robes!'

"'Outside waits the canopy which is to be carried over your majesty in the procession,' said the master of ceremonies.

"'Well, I am quite ready,' answered the emperor. 'Don't my new clothes fit well?'

"And he turned around and around in front of the mirror so that every one might see that he was admiring his new robes.

"Then the chamberlains who were to carry his long train stepped forward and pretended to lift it from the ground with both hands. They walked solemnly along with their hands in the air. They did not dare to let it seem as if they could see nothing of the emperor's clothing.

"Then the emperor walked along in the procession under his canopy, and everybody in the streets and at the windows cried: 'How beautiful the emperor's new clothes are! What a splendid train and how well they fit!' Nobody was honest enough to say he saw nothing for fear of being a fool.

"'But the emperor has nothing on!' a little child called out at last.

"'Listen to the innocent!' cried his father.

"'A child says the emperor has nothing on,' one person whispered to another till at last all the people cried out, 'The emperor has nothing on!'

"And the emperor writhed, for he knew what they said was true. But he thought, 'The procession must go on now,' and held himself prouder than ever, and his chamberlains held high his invisible train. But the two sly weavers packed up their bags of gold and cleared out for the woods, where they divided their wealth," daddy finished.

Training a Husband

By MRS. EVA LEONARD

Morris Tries Desperately to Escape Caring for the Baby "A Whole Afternoon."

"Morris, Mrs. Ellson has invited me to a little sewing club that meets at her house Saturday afternoon. I am so pleased." Marian met her husband at the door to tell him the good news.

"That certainly was kind of her." Morris smiled tolerantly at his wife. Women were such children in some things.

"They changed the meeting from the regular day to Saturday so you could be home to stay with the children," continued Marian.

"Ahem! Why, Marian, I had planned to work on my paper to be read before the County Teachers' Association. I really must have my time to put on that paper." Morris seemed sorry that the steam roller of necessity must crush her trifling pleasures.

"Why can't you work on the paper evenings?" There was anxiety in Marian's voice.

"You know how that is. The evenings are so short and I no more than get started than it is time to go to bed. I must have a long enough time to get the thing organized and well under way, then I can finish it up during the week by working evenings." Morris calmly picked up a book preparing to read.

"When is this association meeting?" asked his wife.

"A week from Saturday afternoon," absently replied the husband, already immersed in the pages of the book. Marian thought for some minutes in silence.

"Morris, what do you expect to do Saturday morning?"

Morris made a vocal intonation that indicated that he had heard a sound, but it evidently had not pierced his inner consciousness, for he made no reply.

"I asked you what you intended to do Saturday morning." There was an incisiveness of tone that brought the eyes from the book and the wandering attention to focus on her face.

"Why, the usual thing; I always do school work in the office Saturday morning. Why do you ask?" His eyes dropped to his book again.

"I will wait, Morris, till you are ready to attend to what I say." Marian seated herself calmly in front of him.

"What is it you want?" was the irritated reply.

"Simply to ask if it will not be possible to do the work you planned to do at school Saturday morning some other time and so make it possible to use the morning for work on your paper. Then you could care for the children in the afternoon and I could go to Mrs. Ellson's thimble club."

"Are you harping on that yet? I thought that was settled long ago. I told you my plans." Morris crossed his knees and reopened his book, but he did not look at it; instead he stared at his wife so astonished was he at her reply. She said:

"Nothing is settled till it is settled right."

"What do you mean?" he asked.

"I mean that I am going to Mrs. Ellson's Saturday, and you are going to take care of the children if there is any possible way to arrange it." Morris' jaw did not drop because he made a conscious effort to prevent it, but his wife had undoubtedly gained his attention. "I have had no society since Roger was born. We have moved so often that I have never had a chance to get acquainted, especially as I never got out to church. Here the people are so friendly and are making such an effort to make me one of them that I want to——"

"Can't you get Mrs. Fisk to stay with them?" interrupted Morris.

"I might if I had the money to pay her. You know just how much we have to go on until the end of the month. I can't ask her to come for nothing because she did it once." Morris sat and started at his wife in silence. She seemed so calm and good-natured, but there was an element of force in her that surprised him. "Some more undiscovered territory," he thought.

"I don't know whether I could manage the baby a whole afternoon or not," he demurred.

"I can give you a few lessons before the time comes. It is time that a father of a family learned to care for a baby a whole afternoon," laughed Marian, stooping to kiss his unresisting cheek.

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

A GREAT COAT OF FUR.

Who Chooses an Enveloping Coat of Fur Chooses Well For it Serves Upon All Occasions.

By Mary Glynn.

For several years women have been coming to the conclusion that nothing more practical or really more economical after the first cost can be numbered, than a big fur coat. Now in olden times it was necessary, if one had a fur coat, to put almost a fortune into it because it must be of a rare and expensive pelt, like sealskin, otter, beaver, Persian lamb, mink, or chinchilla. Our grandmothers even felt it necessary to wear sable coats if they were great ladies. Not so today, however. Even the wealthiest women and most fashionable and carefully dressed women are content to make use of the less expensive furs. In the first place they do not wish to have the burden of caring for so costly a garment. Then again, they argue that a fur coat goes out of fashion quickly, and to them expensive pelt remade is almost as expensive as to buy a new coat or less expensive fur. American dealers in fur garments have cooperated wonderfully in this new idea of less expensive furs, and so today there is a wide range of choice to be had in wonderful looking coats which are really not expensive. There are all kinds of imitations of real furs made from humble little animals that would not recognize their own skins; once they have been denuded of them and they have been put through the fashionable process of dyeing, and tinting, and dressing, and making up. Choose what you like in the way of a fur coat. The skins of all the animals are there, either in reality or in some imitated form. The big coats for autumn are big in every sense. Extensive in width, voluminous in cut, and to the very edge of the hem of the skirt. Not content only with this bigness, they have big collars, big cuffs, huge buttons, and often deep trimming in bands of a contrasting fur. To add to their luxurious appearance they are beautifully lined with brilliant silks many of which have gorgeous printed patterns, while others are in bold stripes in order that one need not regret putting aside for a moment the awning striped skirt or sweater which have been faithful friends of the summer. Thus with one great coat of this kind, its owner is ready for motoring, shopping, traveling, calling, for the opera, theatre, or evening reception. It is a many-in-one sort of garment, and that is why women like it.

POINT OF LIABILITY.

Jersey City, N. J., Sept. 21.—Whether an employer is liable for the death of an employe on an errand outside the plant is the interesting question presented in an action which came up for hearing today in the Hudson Court of Common Pleas. The action was brought by Miss Celestine Manzo, suing as adminstratrix for the estate of her father, Antonio Manzo. The defendant in the action is a local box manufacturing company. Manzo was employed by the defendant company August 2, 1915 when he was sent on an errand outside the plant. On his return he alighted from a street car and, as he did so, was killed by an automobile. The petition states that the company disclaims liability for the accident because it occurred outside the plant.

BRONCHO BUSTING CHAMPIONS.

Pendleton, Ore., Sept. 21.—Cowboys who boast of an ability to tame the wildest broncho that ever cavorted over the plains, have gathered here from many Western States and from Canada to contest for the Richard K. Fox gold belt, emblematic of the broncho busting championship of the world. The bucking contest will be a leading feature of Pendelton's seventh annual round-up carnival, which was opened today and will be continued through the week. Many other sports and festivities are also included in the carnival program.

Raking 'Em Over

By "JINKS"

FRENZIED FINANCE AND BASEBALL.

They do say that money and baseball go hand in hand. And that may be very true. But there are some parties who, unfortunately, have come to the conclusion that one or two managers are millionaires, having obtained their "dough" as a result of large attendances at recent games. All such opinions are absurd. Take for instance the Tab management. Conservative estimates say that two thousand fans witnessed the baseball game last Sunday. There were some who believed that fully three thousand were on hand. Split the difference and you will have, approximately, the paid attendance. But the Tabs collected about one hundred and fifty dollars on the affair and Pete Simmons' Royals were given forty per cent. It does seem improbable that one hundred and fifty dollars could make millionaires of any of us.

BOWLING SEASON STARTS.

The bowling season will commence at the Columbus Club tomorrow evening. Those who are promoting bowling at the Front street clubhouse are hopeful of a successful season. It is said that a team will be entered in the New Jersey Knights of Columbus League and it is highly probable that a team will also be entered in the local fraternal league, should one be organized. The Knights have in their ranks some of the best bowlers in the city and those who follow up this branch of sport can look forward to many pleasant evenings at the Columbus Club.

BASKETBALL MANAGER ALIVE.

The Abstainers have chosen a basketball manager who is alive to his duties and who is acquainted with the sport in all of its branches. Rufus Larew, who will guide the destinies of the Tab five this year, is a gentleman who knows a good player when he sees one. He is a manager who is capable of booking the best games and is a person who will not tolerate rough tactics on the part of his players or on the part of any other players. The Tabs are all good sportsmen and an unusually successful basketball season is anticipated.

OTHER FOOTBALL STARS.

George Trust and his friend, Witherington, have signified their intention of joining local football elevens. This news will be heralded with delight by the many local followers of the pigskin game. Trust and Witherington played on the North Carolina "Aggies." Each is a clever artist and it is said that Witherington is a marvel at punting. From the looks of things, we fans can count on seeing a banner football year.

IF TOMMY APGAR ORGANIZES.

There is a report in circulation to the effect that Tommy Apgar contemplates the organization of a football team to represent Dunellen. If Tommy does organize the eleven a series of games will, undoubtedly, be arranged with the Holy Cross squad. And that certainly would be some series. Baseball, in all its glory, could not come up to that series. Keep up the good work, Thomas.

• • • • • •

RESIGNATIONS IN ORDER.

It is with regret that we learn that Joseph Green and Bill Coyle may resign from the Holy Cross squad. Pressure of other business, we suppose, is the reason. We have a "hunch," however, that if someone uses a little persuasive power, no resignations will ever appear on the Cricket Field horizon.

VALUE OF TAB ORGANIZATION.

In this city there are many fraternal and social organizations. Each does creditable work and the Total Abstinence Benevolence Society's efforts along this line are well worth mentioning. The Tabs have a new clubhouse on West Fourth street. There young men congregate—not to indulge in vulgarity—but to seek honest enjoyment and to mould their minds—although perhaps they do it unconsciously—along the right lines. Athletic sports of all sorts are fostered by the Tabs and social functions are held at various intervals. In fact everything that tends to make good citizens is accomplished by this and other organizations. The value to a community of such a society can best be estimated by a summary of things that have been accomplished by its members. Stick to it, fellows.

STRETCHING THE RULES.

"Stretching the amateur rule in unexpected directions cropped up again yesterday. This time it was at the State championship tennis tournament at the Montclair Athletic Club. Miss Claire Cassel was barred from further participation in the tournament on the ground that she had destroyed here amateur status by giving skating exhibitions on ice for money. She explained that this was not done in athletic competition, but as an actress, but to no avail.

"Her disbarment came over the telephone from President Adee, of the United States Lawn Tennis Association, in the middle of a match. It caused considerable indignation. Naturally!

"The action will start another discussion of amateurism this winter. It is bound to shake up tennis circles generally, for the women will oppose the barring of one of their number, if McLoughlin is allowed to continue as an amateur when he conducts a sporting goods store. Mr. Adee has lived up to the technical rules in this case, but there is room for a strenuous argument as to whether or not Miss Cassel was engaged in sport when she was doing her skating. It seems strange, too, that there should be such a rule. A professional skater isn't a professional golfer, neither is a professional tennis player a professional golfer, but a professional golfer is a professional tennis player. The difference in rules between the various sporting organizations looks like a joke to an outsider."—Newark News.

PLAINFIELD HIGH SCHOOL FOOTBALL SQUAD WILL GET BUSY ON MONDAY AFTERNOON

Coach Ralph Patch Will Have Large Squad—Battin High School Band Hard at Work—Rahway Will Have Light Team—"Hub" Stine Looks Over His Westfield Talent—Other Newsy Items.

"Bijou."

The Plainfield High School football squad will hold its first practice on Parker Field Monday afternoon. Coach Ralph S. Patch has issued a general call and expects that an unusually large band of candidates will respond. While it is not thought that the first game will be played until October 6, practice will be held daily.

Of last year's eleven several fast men remain. Bill Daniels, who has been at the border with Troop D, will return home in time to enter school and will resume his athletic efforts. Candidates for the end positions will have to go the limit to beat Sidney Butler, who was a substitute end of last year's team. Butler has signified his intention of going out for the team and evidently means business. Ches Alpaugh will, in all probability, secure the quarterback position, while Morris Kline, sub centre last year, is almost certain of that position this season. In the line will be Captain Pennock, Hooper and Zamloch, all of whom were regulars last year. Geary and Van Hoesen, who were sub linemen last year, expect to return to school and are almost certain of regular berths. "Polly" Snyder is looked upon as one of the most valuable men the Red and Blue outfit will have. Snyder's record run in a game with South Side at Newark last year has earned for him considerable renown.

Graduation has deprived the Red and Blue of much talent. Those lost to the team in this manner are Bill Wheelan, 1915, centre; Herb Peacock, quarterback, who is now confined to his home with infantile paralysis; "Box" Apgar, a halfback; and Jim Noonan, fullback, who will enter Georgetown. Warren Mumford, Clinton Berrien and Bernard Miller have stated that they will not return to school and the loss of these men, all of whom were regulars of the first order, will be felt considerably.

The Plainfield High School team expects to capture the Union county title. To do this the Red and Blue will have to administer defeat to Westfield, Battin and Rahway High Schools. "Hub" Stine, a North Plainfield athlete, is coaching Westfield; Walter E. Short is guiding the destinies of the Battin boys, and Carl Eliason is at the head of the Rahway team. According to newspaper talk, the Rahway team is the lightest in the history of the school. Battin is assured of a clever outfit and Westfield cannot complain.

Columbia.

Twenty-nine candidates reported on South Field yesterday afternoon for the opening practice of the Columbia football squad. Coach T. Nelson Metcalf and his staff of five assistants, Tom Thorp, Columbia; Ted Withington, Harvard; Ike Telfer, Dartmouth, Pete Fisher and Alex Stimson, both from Oberlin, took advantage of the ideal football weather to line up the candidates. The men took to it so well that Metcalf announced after practice that for the next few days there will be double sessions—at 10 in the morning and at the afternoon.

Six "C" men were in the squad, Captain Jeff Haley, Howard Miller, the sensational quarterback and drop kicker; J. Howland Donaldson, a giant tackle; Jimmy Cleveland, the 210-pound guard; Joe Brown, the regular centre, and Henry Monroe, substitute fullback last year. Buddy Wilber, left tackle and Dan Kennedy, right guard, were not present.

Rutgers.

The opening of the Rutgers football season was put off one week, when the game scheduled to be played with Albright on Saturday was cancelled on account of the infantile paralysis epidemic. The first game will be played here on September 30 against the strong Villanova team.

The first practice game of the season was played yesterday. The varsity scored two touchdowns in twenty minutes, although Nash, an all-American tackle last year, and others of last year's team, played on the second eleven. Hazel averaged fifty-five yards for nine points.

Roselle, the all-scholastic quarterback of New Jersey last year, reported today and worked out with the team. He made a fine showing, and it is likely that he will displace Captain Starr as the varsity quarterback.

Harvard.

The Harvard scrub football team again held the varsity players to a single touchdown yesterday, and was able to score itself. The varsity got its score on a brilliant end run by Flower. After this Minot dropped a kick and the scrubs, recovering the ball, pressed to within 18 yards of the varsity's goal.

Here the scrubs were stopped, but Ginn, one of the backs, kicked a field goal. In its rushing advance the scrub team made no less than four first downs.

Captain Dadmun went to taokle and Snow went in at guard. The shift did not work especially well, but it is likely to be continued until after the Colby game next Saturday.

Casey of last year's freshman team did some beautiful open field running and is considered a find for Mahan's place. Dick Harte worked for a time at end, but Moseley Taylor did not get into the scrimmage.

FEDERAL FISH BUREAU TO REVIVE "SHAD RUNS"

Look to Pacific Coast for Sufficient Supply of Shad Eggs.

With shad fishing in the Delaware river during the last season probably the poorest in the history of the industry, it may be necessary for the Federal fish bureau to look to the Pacific coast for a sufficient supply of shad eggs to use in its endeavor to bring about a real revival of the old-time "shad runs" in the East. If this happens, it will be a remarkable illustration of the flexability of methods made possible by the artificial propagation of fish for the supply procured from the Pacific coast would be the descendants of shad taken from the Delaware, not so many years ago, to induce as new fish in the streams of California, Oregon and Washington.

The shad and another fish, the striped bass, have done so well in their Pacific homes that the catches there now exceed those of native Eastern waters, where, as fishermen know these fish are decreasing. This exchange and continual destruction of the new fish has built up inland fisheries in the United States that are superior to those of any other nation. Take the work of the State of New Jersey for example. The State Fish and Game Commission, through co-operation with the Federal authorities, has hatched and distributed in its lakes, this year, hundreds of thousands of the famous Chinook salmon, of the Pacific. Their introduction is an experiment, but it has experience in its favor, for the rainbow trout, another experiment, has in three years established itself as one of the most popular game fishes in the State. The small-mouth bass, the wall-eyed pike, the pike perch, the Atlantic salmon, the carp, the brown trout, the strawberry bass, the crapple, the calico bass and many of the sun fishes are more or less common varieties found in our streams, which are not native to New Jersey, but were artificially introduced and have flourished here for the delectation of thousands of anglers.

GIFFORD JONES IS ARRANGING GAMES

Will Place His Plainfield A. A. Team on Courts This Year.

Gifford ("Dip") Jones, formerly a baseball manager, intends to reorganize the Plainfield A. A basketball team and is already making up his schedule. The Jones team had a successful season last year and played some of the best combinations in the State.

Harry Moulton, Edson Day, Benny Rosenson, Eddie Gunzelman and Aaron Hirsch have been mentioned as candidates for berths on the Plainfield A. A squad. Games will be arranged with all teams. Gifford Jones bars no one. He can be seen daily and is always willing to do right by rival managers. Jones would like to hold conferences with each and every one of the local basketball leaders.

TICKETS FOR SHOW PLACED ON SALE

Kennel Club Passports Can Be Secured at Various Stores.

Judging at the Plainfield Kennel Clu Show on Saturday will begin promptly at eleven o clock and will continue throughout the day. The result will be posted in conspicuous places and it is expected that a large number of local entries will capture prizes.

Tickets for the event may be secured at everal local business houses. A list of those places where tickets can be purchased follows: Harry, Dreier Sporting Goods House, P. B. Hodge, druggist; Richard Harrigan, Netherwood and Plainfield offices; Hall's Drug Store, Rowley's Drug Store, Walsh's Drug Store, Queen City Hotel, Paul Collier's Sporting Goods House, Edward Laing's Book Store. From this list it can be readily seen that the committee has taken precautions to establish a ticket office in each section of the city.

Of particular interest to Plainfielders, is the special classes. There will be a children's class, prizes having been donated by Wilbur Purcell, the Plainfield Kennel Club and Mrs. John J. O'Donohue. There will be a special class for residents of Plainfield and one for New Jersey residents. The City Department class ought to attract considerable attention. It is said that a large entry list has already been received for this class.

Inasmuch as the proceeds from this show will be given to the popular local charity, the Volunteers' Aid Fund, it is expected that a large and representative gathering of people will be in attendance.

This, the Fifth Annual Show, will be under the supervision of Wilbur Purcell, of New York city. Mr. Purcell has had considerable experience in running dog shows and has been instrumental in staging many successful events. His latest effort was a distinct success. He was in charge of the Queensboro Kennel Club Show, held at Link's Casino, Astoria, L. I., on September 16 of this year.

Bee's Double Stomach.

The bee has two distinct stomachs. In the first it stores away the honey it so industriously gathers up from the flowers until such time as it is ready to yield it up, while the other stomach is used simply and solely for digestion purposes. Thus the food and the honey are never mixed. When the bee returns to the hive and is ready to deposit the honey it has gathered it contracts the muscles of the stomach, by which act the honey is ejected through the mouth. As to bee food, it is various in kind, consisting largely of the honey it so patiently makes for others.

PLENTY OF BASKETBALL TALENT WILL GRACE PLAINFIELD COURTS THIS YEAR

With All This Talent Why Not Organize a City League?—Tabs Will Have Two Teams—Hope Chapel May Organize—Red and Blue Squads.

Although it is rather early in the season to discusss basketball, nevertheless, several teams have already begun active preparations for a successful season. In some instances, practice has started, while in other cases the preparing has been confined to words.

In this city and vicinity there will be many basketball teams this year. In fact, present indications point to an overflow of good material. The Plainfield and North Plainfield High Schools will, as usual, place competent fives on the courts. The Athenians, a colored five, will organize and have already begun practice. "Dip" Jones, as is stated in another column, will have his Plainfield A. A. in action. The Knights of Columbus and the Tabs expect to have formidable outfits and there is some talk to the effect that Hope chapel will place a five on the floor. Jack Martin will, in all probability, coach the chapel squad. The local Y. M. C. A. will have a team, according to Benny Berse, who guided the destinies of that team last year. Also, there will be another Recreation five.

Among the junior teams the Inner Triangles will, undoubtedly, hold their own. The Tabs will, in all probability, have a junior team. While the young men are busy, the girls will not be idle. Basketball in feminine circles will be given plenty of attention. The High School squads will be formed, as usual. The Plainfield Five expects to have another banner year, also.

By Peter P. Carney.

In the recent Grand American Handicap, youth and old age stood side by side W. E. Phillips, Jr., 12 years of age, was the youngest contestant, and Captain W. E. Brieteustein, the only living survivor of the Merrimac, was the oldest of the trap shooters.

Ten schools and colleges are now enrolled in the membership of the Americain Amateur Trap Shooters' Association.

The best average—amateur—for one season is the 95.50 by Woolfolk Henderson, of Lexington, Ky. He broke 2731 of 2800 targets. The best professional record is held by C. G. Spencer—97.50 at 5620.

The longest run ever made by a trap shooter was compiled by Charley Spencer at the Viola (Ill.) shoot in June, 1913, when he broke 528. Ray Kingsley, of Omaha, had a run of 518 to his credit, and Jay Graham once hit 477 before missing.

A record for shooting at 1000 targets was made when Alex Mermod, of St. Louis, and Fred Stone, the comedian, met in St. Louis on a cold day in April, 1908. Mermod broke 929 and Stone 901 targets, and the time consumed was 1 hour, 30 minutes and 23 seconds.

Newspapers are giving more attention to trap shooting now, and the sport only needs publicity to make it the greatest of American pastimes.

The St. Hubert Gun Club, of Ottawa, is the oldest gun club in Canada, and possibly older than any gun club in the United States. It has eighty members. It has won nearly all of the trap shooting championships in Canada for more than a generation.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"
When you rent a room in your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.
In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

MOSBY AND HIS MEN.

The Old Warrior's Attitude Toward Reunions After the War.

The late Colonel John S. Mosby differed from many military men in that instead of being pleased at being given a higher designation than he was properly entitled to the conferring of the higher title was extremely obnoxious to him," remarked Henry D. Rose of Norfolk.

"People who thought to please him by calling him general instead of finding favor invoked upon themselves the resentment of the old partisan chief. 'I never was a general, sir,' I heard him once say with great warmth to a young Virginian who thus addressed him. 'I am Colonel Mosby, and I never attained any higher rank than colonel, so please don't call me general.'

"As brave a spirit as ever lived, the old warrior was full of eccentricities. One of his peculiarities was his persistent declination to attend any of the reunions of Mosby's men. He probably gloried in the fact that these reunions were held, but no amount of persuasion could get him to be present.

"He used occasionally to indulge in a little grim humor regarding the number of those who attended the reunions. As the years went by naturally many of his old followers would cross to the great beyond, but curiously enough, according to the colonel's own statement, there seemed to be just as many of Mosby's men at these annual gatherings a generation after the war as ever he had enlisted in his command at the height of its numerical strength."—Washington Post.

WORLD'S LARGEST CLOCK.

Its Dial, Forty Feet Across, Carries a Twenty Foot Minute Hand.

The largest clock in the world is in the tower of the Colgate building, on the Jersey side of the river, writes the New York correspondent of the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

This clock, which is illuminated at night, can be seen by persons using any of the ferryboats leaving from the lower part of Manhattan and those plying between the New York and New Jersey shores. Staten Island dwellers coming to or leaving New York city and commuters from New Jersey points use it as their official timepiece and regulate their watches by it.

The clock was built at Waterbury, Conn., and so gigantic are its parts that it was necessary to bring the hands from the factory on a flat car and use a box car to transport the works. The minute hand is twenty feet long and weighs half a ton, and the hour hand is fifteen feet long.

The weights of this monster timepiece are more than a ton. The dial is forty feet in diameter, surpassing by thirteen feet six inches that of the second largest clock in the world, in the Metropolitan tower; it is fifteen feet greater than that of the clock in the tower of Philadelphia city hall, the third largest in the world, and it doubles "Big Ben," on top of the house of parliament, London, which is perhaps the most widely known clock in the world.

GIVES VIEWS ON EXCISE QUESTION

Councilman Sminck in Interview Discusses the Local Liquor Problem.

LET PEOPLE DECIDE

Favors the Present Regulations of Traffic, but Will Be Guided Entirely by Choice of Candidate in His Ward.

In view of the agitation on the excise question in Plainfield and the movement started by the Church Co-Operative League in an effort to elect four councilmen who are opposed to the granting of liquor licenses, Councilman Charles S. Sminck, of the First Ward, who will be a member of council next year, has decided to let his constituents as well as the people of Plainfield know just how he stands on the liquor question. In an interview Mr. Sminck expressed his views as follows:

"The charter of Plainfield provides that the granting of liquor licenses to hotels and saloons shall be vested in the Common Council, which gives eleven men absolute authority on this question affecting twenty-five thousand people.

"At the present time there is an intense campaign being waged, having for its object the closing of all the licensed saloons in Plainfield—but not the club bars.

"Last fall when I was a candidate for the Council I understood that some of the voters thought I would vote for 'no license' and others were of the opinion that I would vote for license. Not wishing to have the people in doubt on the proposition, I issued a statement declaring that I was in favor of the exising regime of well ordered regulation, which has given Plainfield so much favorable notice among the cities of the State.

"I do not think it a good plan, especially when dealing with matters relating to personal habits, to either directly or indirectly establish distinctions resulting in comparisons tending to provoke envy or ill will. A situation like that creates disrespect for authority and contempt for law.

"'No license' in Plainfield does not mean that people will not drink liquors within the city limits. They can do it legally in their clubs—at the same time it would be illegal to sell a glass of beer in any store in the city. In my judgment, the result will be an increased use of such drinks as whisky and a decreased use of beer—a situation the very essence of which would be the reverse of reform.

"The excise issue in the First Ward is clear cut between Mr. Edgar and Mr. Cutter. Mr. Edgar stands for a well regulated and reasonable license town and Mr. Cutter advocates the closing of all hotel and saloon bars in the city.

"I do not propose that my opinion shall prevail over the verdict of a majority of the voters of the First Ward. If Mr. Edgar is nominated and re-elected to the Common Council I shall regard it as my instructions from the voters I represent to continue the policy of wise and careful regulation of the excise problem. If Mr. Cutter is nominated and subsequently elected by the voters of the First Ward, I shall interpret that action as a mandate and will subordinate personal views to the command of the people.

"Let the people decide and I will be guided accordingly, for I will not knowingly misrepresent the First Ward in the Common Council."

MARTINE TO BE SPEAKER AMONG ANTI-WILSONITES

United States Senator James E. Martine will speak from the same platform in Newark tomorrow night with men who have for months been denouncing President Wilson and his administration. He is scheduled to be the principal speaker at a meeting in the Eagles' Hall at 30 East Park street in quest of support for renomination at the coming primaries.

Among the other speakers will be Otto A. Stiefel, president of the Fair Play League, which long has conducted a campaign against the President.

Other speakers will include John H. O'Connor, S. J. Donleavy and James McGovehrn.

ST. MARY'S EUCHRE.

St. Mary's Holy Name Society will hold a euchre and "500" in the school hall of St. Mary's on Thursday, September 28. Play will start at 8:30, and prizes will be awarded. The committee in charge is arranging for a series of social events to be held during the coming winter and is as follows: Patrick O'Brien, John Hurley, Daniel McCarty, John Miller, Samuel Flatley, Frank Cullen, Patrick Culliny, Patrick Griffen, Edwin Sullivan, Joseph Gallagher, Joseph McEvoy, Edward McCann, John Powelson and Fred Greene.

Auction Sale.

Watch for the next big auction sale of select household goods to be held in the large auditorium at 316 and 318 West Front street, over J. W. Gavett's china store. A list of goods and date of sale will appear in tomorrow's paper.—Adv.

CANDIDATE FOR GOVERNOR HERE

COL. AUSTEN COLGATE.

Col. Colgate, who is candidate for the Republican nomination for governor, is in Plainfield this afternoon. He will spend several hours here conferring with leaders in the support of his candidacy and will be enthusiastically received.

MACKENSEN'S ARMY IS IN FULL RETREAT

Burning Villages as it Falls Back Before Advance of Serbs.

London, Sept. 22.—Field Marshal von Makensen's army of invasion in the Roumanian Dobrudja has been defeated by the Russian and Roumanian armies and is in retreat, according to an official bulletin made public today.

The Teuton-Bulgarian army made a desperate effort to break through the Roumanian line guarding the Danube crossings. This was hurled back, and the Allied troops, turning to the offensive, thrust the enemy back. In their flight the invaders are burning Roumanian villages.

On the other Balkan fronts the tide is running in favor of the Allies. In southwestern Transylvania the Austrian counter drive has been checked and the resumption of Romanian thrsts in the north can be expected. In Macedonia the Allied advance continues to make slow progress.

Great Battle Impends.

Before Monastir, the first great objective of he Serbs in their effort to reclaim their contry, the stage is being set for a heavy battle. The Germans and the Bulgarians, according to reports from Saloniki, are striving to entrench before the city, while the Serbs harass them constantly, awaiting the arrival of reinforcements.

Warships Shell Bulgars.

Saloniki, Sept. 22.—The War Office today issued the following bulletin: British warships shelled the enemy in the neighborhood of Neochori. The artillery duel at Doiran is increasing. Neochori is a Macedonian town on the Sturms near the coast.

WENT TO CONVENTION.

Four transit buses carried thirty patrolmen from this city, North Plainfield and Westfield, St. Mary's Fife and Drum Corps and nearly seventy-five guests to Jersey City yesterday to attend he annual State convention of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, and while the local men did not get elected to any of the association offices, they did make an excellent showing, especially in the parade.

TENNIS TOURNEY.

The Women's single championship tournament will begin at the Plainfield Country Club Monday morning at 10 o'clock. Entries close with Miss Edith Beers on Sunday. Miss Beers may be reached by calling 312-M.

WILL REMOVE STUDIO.

Miss Minnie Serrell, who has conducted an art studio on West Front street for some time, will remove it to the store at present occupied by DeMeza & Blum, on East Front street, as soon as they vacate the premises.

COL. COLGATE HERE FOR BRIEF VISIT

Republican Leader Arrived at 2:30 for Few Hours in Plainfield.

Senator Austen W. Colgate, candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor of the State of New Jersey, is in Plainfield this afternoon. Colonel Colgate reached here at 2:30 accompanied by Charles A. Codding, one of his campaign leaders. He will spend a greater part of the afternoon in Plainfield, being accompanied by a committee of local business men on a tour of the city. Colonel Colgate will not make an address here today, and will probably not speak here before the primary of next week. Leslie R. Fort and Duncan Taylor are friends of Mr. Colgate who have been invited to accompany him around Plainfield.

YOUNG PEOPLE OF TRINITY CHURCH ENJOYED A SOCIAL

About thirty members of the Y. P. S. C. of Trinity church enjoyed a social in the parlors of the church last night. A pleasant evening was spent playing all sorts of games, and several sung musical selections. Refreshments were also served.

The committee on arrangements included Miss Leila Wherry, chairman; Joseph Murphy, Edward Weaver, Adolph Raymond, Louise Hann, Mildred Oliver, Margaret Barklew, Dorothy Martin, Harold Gayle and Samuel Harper.

ARRANGEMENTS MADE TO PREVENT ACCIDENTS

Arrangements have been made to avoid "bumping" or collision of automobiles in the anti-saloon parade tomorrow night. Every precaution to prevent accidents will be taken by those in charge. Cars will be kept fifty feet apart. The parade will start from Crescent avenue and East Seventh street at 8 o'clock. Cars will be decorated and every one who is in sympathy with the temperance movement is asked to take part.

There will be a meeting in the interest of the anti-saloon cause at Hope chapel Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock, and another meeting Sunday evening at 8 o'clock, at Mt. Zion A. M. E. church, at which R. M. Depew will be the speaker.

—If you have something to rent, you have something to advertise—and something that it will pay you to advertise adequately and persistently.

FIGHT TO A FINISH ON IN NEW YORK

"This is a fight to a finish," said President Shonts, of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company and the New York Railways Company, in reiterating the firm stand of these companies against any concessions to the union organization.

"Summed up the question is whether men who want to work and are working will be permitted to do so or whether they are to be intimated by the union. At 10 o'clock this morning the New York Railsway Company operated 517 cars, which was 70.6 per cent. of normal. On Thursday the elevated, subway and Queens Borough lines carried an increase of 387,639 passengers over the corresponding date last year."

Hugh Frayne, general organizer of the American Federation of Labor, says:

"Trade unionists wil not surrender their right to organize in this city and every possible help that the American Federation of Labor can give them will be extended to the Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employes to maintain this right. This is a fight on the issue of trade unionism, and were the traction companies to win, other employers would resort to the plan of making these 'master and servant' contracts.'"

PLAINFIELD WOMEN HONORED BY W. C. T. U.

Are Re-elected County Officers—Mrs. T. C. Bodine National Delegate.

Plainfield women took a prominent part in the Union county convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union, held at Rahway yesterday. All of the officers were elected for the coming year, and include Mrs. Mary Davis Tomlinson, of this city, president, and Mrs. T. C. Bodine, also of this city, recording secretary. Mrs. Bodine is recording secretary of the State association and was honored by being elected as delegate to the national convention at Indianapolis from November 17 to 22.

It was announced at the convention that owing to the prevalence of infantile paralysis the residents of Haddonfield did not feel like entertaining the State convention the latter part of October, and that the convention would be held instead at Asbury Park. The local delegates will be elected at the next meeting to be held on October 6.

Reports of the various officers at yesterday's conference showed that the union is rapidly growing stronger in the county. There is now a membership of over six hundred, a large gain during the past year. Reports from every delegate were encouraging, and plans for an even more active year were made.

PRESIDENT WILSON WILL ENTERTAIN BUSINESS MEN

President Wilson will entertain the business men of the State at Shadow Lawn, tomorrow afternoon. Business men, irrespective of their party affiliations have been invited to attend. President Wilson will personally receive them and address them on a topic of national importance. A number of Plainfield business men have accepted the invitation and will be present at the gathering tomorrow.

DEMOCRATIC CANDIDATE FOR CONGRESS IN TOWN

Charles J. Blake, of Trenton, who is seeking the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Fourth district, was in Plainfield today in the interest of his candidacy. He declares that he is in favor of the national ticket and if elected to Congress will support Wilson in passing any act of legislation which may be further necessary to banish the horror of war from the face of the earth. He also says that he is for a national tariff board.

ANTI-SALOON FORCES FORM A ORGANIZATION

A gathering of New Market voters met in the First Baptist church rooms, at that place, last night, in the interests of local option candidates. The attendance was large and much enthusiasm was in evidence during the meeting. Officers were elected for a permanent organization which is thought will in time evolve into an anti-saloon league. The officers elected last night were as follows: President, John Nelson; vice president, David Perrine; secretary and treasurer, Frank Smalley.

J. L. CONWAY SUCCUMBS TO INFANTILE PARALYSIS

James Leslie Conway, the 11-year-old son of Albert E. and Margaret A. Conway, of 217 Manson place, died this morning from infantile paralysis. The little lad was taken ill last Sunday with a high fever and although his case was under suspicion for several days, paralysis did not set in until yesterday, the disease affecting the throat. An immediate quarantine was placed on the house by the health authorities.

Beside his parents he is survived by three brothers and sister. These are Edward Raymond, Albert and Florence Conway. The funeral will be held tomorrow and interment will be in Hillside cemetery.

TRIAL POSTPONED.

Because the condition of Arthur Thompkins would not yet permit him to leave the hospital, Edward Mitchel will remain the county jail until next Wednesday before he is tried for assault and battery. The case was to have come up in the city court this morning, but Thompkins had not recovered from his injuries.

TO HOLD SOCIABLE.

The Band of Workers of Class 2, of Trinity Reformed Bible School of which Mr. Vroom is teacher, will hold a birthday social this evening at the home of Mrs. Schomp, 166 Grove street, the borough. All members are requested to try and be present.

COVER MANY MILES ON EIGHT DAY HIKE

New Jersey Cavalrymen Swoop Down on the Town of Bisbee.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 18.—Eighteen miles were covered by the First Squadron of Cavalry under command of Major Hobart B. Brown yesterday, the second night's stop of the eight-day outing being made at Don Luis, quaint little hamlet just outside of Bisbee. The latter town is one to which all Jerseymen anticipate going. It is located in one of the deep and narrow gulleys of the mountain range and its houses are built high up from the ground on rock ledges. Plenty of passes were distributed by commanding officers last night and the soldier boys swooped down upon the town en masse. Never in its history has the town of Bisbee seen so many khaki clad men on the street at one time. The squadron of cavalry augmenting the Arizona regiment of cavalry which is stationed at Naco, just outside of the town. The Arionians visit Bisbee nightly but the Jersey cavalry swelled their forces noticeably last night.

The ride yesterday was along the mountainside and the long string of mounted soldiers was an impressive sight as it wound in and around, up and down the side of the hills. For miles, or as far as the eye could reach, no sign of humanity could be seen and then all of a sudden a small mining village with ten or a dozen shacks sprang up in the distance. The miners' wives ran out into the road to greet the militiamen, selling them watermelons and other products of the garden in the mountain glutches.

Sleeping last night was little better than the night before. Most of the men took advantage of their "pup" tents and two crawled into each one of these. Others rolled up in blankets and slept on the wagons. Several horses have "gone lame" on the trip but outside of this it has been uneventful. Everyone is well and apparently enjoying the trip. Tomorrow morning the cavalrymen will set out for Hereford and the next day they will pull into Fort Huachuca, their destination.

SECOND ANNIVERSARY OF FLOWER GUILD

Event Will Be Observed at First Baptist Church, September 29.

The second anniversary of the Plainfield Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild will be celebrated in the lecture room of the First Baptist church, Friday evening, September 25, at 7:45, at which time the organization will demonstrate the splendid work it has done and is doing in this city.

The president, Joseph M. Harper, his officers and the several committees are using every eqort to make the event an interesting and profitable one to the guild and its many friends and a program has been prepared that will prove pleasing to all who are present.

Mrs. John Wood Sewart, organizer and president of the National Plant, Flower and Fruit Guild, will display a number of stereopticon views explaining the work during her address.

Mr. Albert R. Lawton, a worker in the "Help-My-Pal" Society of the Twentieth Street Friends Meeting, New York city, will give some of his experiences and advice in helping the unfortunate.

As the guild is supported by donations a birthday offering will be taken for the beuefit of the guild treasury.

The Biederwolf song books will be used and the singing will be accompanied by the guild orchestra and a quartette.

MISS EDNA PETERSON DIES AT GLEN GARDNER

Miss Edna Petersen, formerly of Elizabeth, and for several mouths a student in the training school at the Muhlenberg Hospital, died on Wednesday at Glen Gardner, after a long illness. Miss Petersen was educated in the Elizabeth public schools and was graduated from the Battin High School in 1915. She is survived by two sisters, the Misses Henrietta and Blanche Petersen, and a brother, Lee Petersen. Miss Petersen entered the Muhlenberg training school last September and continued her studies here for about three months when she was compelled to discontinue on account of ill health.

WM. LEONARD IN TOWN.

William Leonard, of Elizabeth former Assemblyman and present Democratic candidate for county clerk, visited Plainfield today. He was accompanied by several personal workers during his stay here, met a number of Plainfielders and talked with them in the interests of his candidacy.

LEIGH S. BACHE DIES IN HOSPITAL

Prominent Citizen of Bound Brook Passes Away Following Operation.

Leigh S. Bache, of Beechwood avenue, Bound Brook, died in the Muhlenberg Hospital last night, following an operation for internal trouble. He was removed to the institution last Saturday, but his condition steadily worse despite the best medical attention. Mr. Bache, who was forty-six years old, had been a resident of Bound Brook for over a quarter of a century and possessed the friendship and acquaintance of hundreds of prominent Bound Brook residents. At the time of his death he was manager of the Oilless Bearing Company, of Bound Brook, and was affiliated with several fraternal organizations.

Mr. Bache is survived by his widow. The body was removed today to his home in Bound Brook, where the funeral arrangements will be made later.

CANDIDATES SPEAK AT OPEN-AIR MEETING

Prof. Barbour and Dr. Vaughan Urge Support of the Prohibition Ticket.

Dr. Harry Vaughan, of Morristown, and Prof. Livingston Barbour, of Rutgers' College, Prohibition candidates for Governor and United States Senator, visited Plainfield last night, speaking at an open-air meeting at the postoffice corner. E. E. Brown, State field secretary, threw about fifty pictures on a screen illustrating various planks in the Prohibition platform.

Prof. Barbour said that of the 8,000 saloons in New Jersey, 6,000 were owned under chattel mortgage by a syndicate of brewers and distillers, who control the vicious and corrupt vote at election time. The speaker said that the annual consumption of intoxicating liquor has increased in twenty years from 6½ gallons to 23½ gallons per capita in the United States.

Dr. Vaughan spoke for the principle of Prohibition which he said was not a new one. It taught preparedness of a high order, had been adopted as a war measure by many governments, but accepted by scientists and economists as a prerequsite to obtain a proper standard of efficiency and to prevent waste. Dr. Vaughan said that if elected he would set a good example in the Capitol and would enforce all existing laws and abolish the liquor traffic so far as possible.

PAN'S ANNIVERSARY WILL BE PORTRAYED

Recreation Committee Arranging for An Elaborate Entertainment.

"Pan's Anniversary," a Greek masque by Ben Johnson, which was given before the Court of King James early in the seventeenth century, is to be presented on Thursday evening, October 12 (Columbus Day), in the Plainfield High School under the auspices of the Public Recreation Committee.

The committee his distinguished itself in the past along the line of unique entertainments and this undertaking, it is said, will surpass any of the previous efforts in beauty and originality.

The production will be as nearly historically correct as possible. The court scene will be reproduced. The king, his queen, the court jestter, the Spanish ambassador, and attendants of the court presenting a spectacular picture of the historic scene.

The masque itself is a Greek play representing the revels of the shepherds, the nymphs of wood and water, the priests and priestesses before the altar of the god Pan. The beautiful nymphs and pictureque fauns, the spirit of music, the mysterious masquers, and the graceful water nymphs will present an artistic display of color and poetry of motion.

This is the first big undertaking of the season for the Recreation Committee and eery effort is being put ofrth to make the occasion a notable one. Special attention is being given to costuming, scenery and lighting effects. The cast is composed of seventy-five people and has been rehearsing for some time. There has been revealed some unusual talent in this altogether new form of dramatic expression.

DEMOCRATIC CLUB MEETING.

The Plainfield Democratic Club will hold a meeting in its rooms in the Depew building, Monday night. At that time the Democratic Assembly and other candidates will be present to address the meeting. All Democrats are urged to be present.

GREAT WALK OUT BEGINS MONDAY

Unions Defy Mayor Mitchell and Public Service Commission.

MAY CALL ON MILITIA

500,000 Union Workers Will Be Ordered to Quit Jobs—Shonts Says Railway Companies Will Not Give In to Employes.

New York, Sept. 22.—Organized labor today defied the Mayor, the Public Service Commission and the combined civil and military power of the city and State, and declared that sympathetic strikes involving 500,000 union workers would at once be called to aid the striking traction employes.

When these workers will be called out labor leaders refused to say, but it was intimated from many seeming authoritative sources that the great walk-out would begin Monday and gradually expand until 500,000 union men and women were out.

While all efforts to bring about a peaceful settlement of affairs failed, rioting continued all over the city during the early morning hours. Fifteen specific instances of the bombardment of Sixth and Third avenue "L" trains by bricks, bottles and other missiles from roofs and windows were reported to the police, but no arrests were made.

The disorders became so bad that drastic measures were decided upon by the authorities, and Magistrate Krotel gave warning to such defendants as they were arraigned before him that a six months' sentence would be imposed hereafter upon every man convicted before him of strike violence. Mr. Krotel gave thirty-day sentences to most of the strikers brough before him notwithstanding appeals for clemency.

Chief Inspector Schmittberger, of the Police Department, told the traction companies that they could re-establish night service as soon as they were ready. The department, he declared, was ready to meet any emergency, and would furnish any degree of protection required.

Fifty automobile patrols were established, the motors carrying squads of picked parolmen. Then 100 motor cycle patrolmen were sent out, making 6,700 men so disposed at strategic points that violence could be dealt with quickly and severely.

CHANCELLOR STEVENS DENIES INJUNCTION

Trustees of Dreier Estate Are Permitted to Proceed With Improvements.

Chancellor Stevens, before whom the case was taken, yesterday denied the injunction in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Senger against Harry and Garret Dreier, trustees of the esate of Samuel Dreier, in which the former tried to stop the work of altering the Dreier building at West Front street and Madison avenue, and placed the costs on the complainants.

The action was brought against the trustees on the ground that the complainants thought that the work of alteration could be done for $2,000, while the trustees had made a contract for the work at a cost of $4,043.

Chancellor Stevens said: "It would plainly not be for the interest of the trust estate to stop work at this time and require further bids. There is no sucient proof that the trustees have abused their trust, but if they have they can be charged with the difference between what they have agreed to pay and what they ought to have expended. As the evidence now stands they seem to have acted judiciously.

Chancellor Stevens further adds that in order to prevent the injury of the building by storm or otherwise, he above order will take effect from the receipt of his letter which was today. William Newcorn represented the trustees of the estate, and William R. Wilson of Elizabeth, was counsel for the complainants. The work, which is part of the plan to widen Madison avenue, will now proceed.

STAATS-ZEITUNG APPEALS TO GERMAN-AMERICAN VOTER

In an editorial appeal to the German-American voters of New Jersey the New York Staats Zeitung in its issue of yesterday urged the nomination and election of United States Senator James E. Martine, the support of Joseph S. Frelinghuysen for United States Senator and Walter Edge for Governor and the defeat of what it terms the "anti-German Murphy-Colgate combine."

It declares that the education that Mr. Edge enjoyed in Germany has borne fruit, that he has voted and worked valiantly and with the greatest energy against prohibition and against invasive legislation in general.

JOHN ZUBECK IS CAUGHT AT DUNELLEN

Wanted in Somerset Co. on Assault Charge—Whipert Also Found in Borough.

Marshall Harry Shugar got into the local "Hall of Fame" yesterday when he made two important captures. John Zubeck, 47 years old, wanted by the police of Somerset county since August 2, on the charge of attrocious assault and battery with intent to kill, was caught by the marshal last evening. Zubeck had been in the borough since last Wednesday, when he secured a position with the Levgar Construction Company.

After his alleged act Zubeck made his escape into Pennsylvania, staying a day or two in different places. State Detective Totten traced Zubeck through Wilkesbarre, Scranton, Bethlehem and Slatington, and it was from the latter place that Zubeck came to this borough.

Wednesday night Detective Totten came to the borough and informed the local police that Zubeck had been in this place, as he had mailed a postal from here to Mrs. William F. Noltz of Clover Hill, the wife of the man who was shot.

Marshal Shugars made up his mind that he would capture the man if possible. His first step was to ask Postmaster Apgar to notify him at once if any person came to the office for Zubeck's mail. At 4 o'clock Zubeck walked into the office and asked for his mail. Postmaster Apgar got word to Officer Shugars and in five minutes the marshal had the man in the lockup.

Detective Totten came to town at 7 o'clock and upon the endorsement by the local recorder of the warrant issued by Recorder Sutphen, of Somerville for Zubeck's arrest the detective took him to Somerville.

The other capture by Marshal Shugars was when he gathered in Daniel Whipert, 56 years of age, an escaped inmate from the New Jersey State Village for Epileptics at Skillman. At 9 o'clock yesterday morning Marshal Shugars was informed that a man who was boasting of how he had escaped from the institution, had gotten off the Bound Brook car ahead of him and disappeared down Grove street. The marshal jumped on his bicycle and gave chase, capturing his man at the corner of Walnut street and New Market road. Upon being questioned by the officer Whipert admitted that he had made his escape from the epileptic village, saying that he had done so while an entertainment was going on. He said that he was picked up by a man in an automobile and taken to New Brunswick, from which place he came by trolley to this borough. C. F. Applegate, special officer for the epileptic village, came in town from Skillman yesterday afternoon with the necessary papers and took him back.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Hayes, of New Market road, are entertaining Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barto, of Brooklyn.

William Bambach, the former local druggist, has taken a position in New York city.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Nye, of Jefferson avenue, will move to Lincoln tomorrow.

"Dut" Witherington, the Southern athlete, who was induced to come North by George Trust, has taken a position at Saurer's.

Contractor and Mrs. C. D. Nonemaker, who have been summering at Mt. Hermon, Warren county, have reopened their home on Front street.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul Schwartzer, of Brooklyn, have returned home after spending several days in the borough, the guest of Paul Kratzel, of Front street.

WILL ERECT DWELLING.

The barn on the property of the Watchung Investment Company on the southeasterly corner of Walnut street and Prospect avenue, is being torn down by Charles Wrage, who it is understood has been given a contract to erect a handsome dwelling in its place.

Mrs. Theodore Apgar of Lincoln avenue, on Wednesday entertained her cousins, Mrs. S. R. Pendleton, of St. Johns, N. B., Canada, and Miss Marie E. Miller, of Elizabeth.

G. O. P. MEETING.

A Republican meeting will be held in the borough hall this evening for the purpose of organizing a Dunellen Republican club, and for the transaction of such business as may come before the meeting. C. E. Brennan will address the meeting.

WILL PLAY WESTFIELD.

The locals will try to make amends for the 2 to 1 defeat administered by the strong Westfield team several Saturdays ago, when they play that team at Maurer Oval tomorrow afternoon. George Ortleb will again be on the mound for the Mt. Ararat aggregation.

TAX RATE $2.66.

The tax rate for the year was given out by Assessor J. H. L. Peters yesterday. It is $2.66 per hundred, as against $2.75 last year.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Muller, of Whittier avenue, are the parents of a daughter.

CURTIS-SMITH.

Miss Florence Curtis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Curtis, and Merel Andrew Smith, of Cortlandt, N. Y., were quietly married in this village Wednesday evening by the Rev. H. L. Nolan, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church, of New Market.

Miss Elsie F. Schmidt has been entertaining Miss Dorothy Neal, of Plainfield, and Miss Rose Andrews, of Elizabeth.

Miss Beatrice Bodine is visiting relatives in Bayonne, N. J.

Miss Emma Martinz has returned to Bernardsville, where she will resume her duties as a teacher in the public school.

Mrs. Stewart Ogilbee, who has been visiting her aunt, Mrs. Anna H. Underhill, has returned to her home in Staten Island.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Patte, Mr. and Mrs. Melvin H. Cleaves, William Anderson and Edward T. Canning left yesterday for Atlantic City, where Messrs. Patte, Cleaves, Andrews and Canning will attend the annual firemen's convention.

Postmaster and Mrs. George A. Schmidt have returned home after spending several days at Atlantic City, where they attended the postmasters' convention.

YOUNGSTERS CAN'T GO TO "MOVIES" AS OF OLD--KIELY

Although the Board of Health is going to raise the quarantine that it put on children under sixteen going to the "movies," the youngsters are not going to be able to go to the theatre any time they want. Such was the gist of a conversation with Police Chief Kiely. Not because he wants to be hard on the children, but because some people make it the subject of criticism when the law is not enforced, Chief Kiely is going to give the local theatre managers and the patrolmen instructions not to allow children under sixteen to attend the show unless they first have the consent of their parents.

Rowdyism on the streets and other disagreeable features that are detrimental to Plainfield are also to be more rigirdly handled and violators severely dealt with.

BRITISH "WILLIES" MADE IN AMERICA

Armored Tractors Leap Trenches and Demolish Houses.

THEY LAY THEIR OWN TRACKS

Can Bowl Over Trees and Walls and Chase a Man All Around a Field. England Has Bought 1,000 of These Wonder Machines For War Use.

The British "tanks," or "Willies," as they are popularly called among the soldiers, the armored motorcars used in recent assaults on German trenches in northern France so successfully as to attract worldwide attention, were built for the most part in Peoria, Ill., in the form of caterpillar tractors designed, many years before the war began, to meet some of the difficult problems of modern farming. Except for their armor, their machine guns and their crews, thousands like them are in use today in the United States in plowing, digging ditches and other labors less heroic than those of war.

M. M. Baker, vice president of a big manufacturing company, explained that they were machines made by his company in Peoria that had hurdled German trenches, walked through forests and crawled over shell craters in the face of intense gunfire.

"We have sold about 1,000 caterpillar tractors to the British government," said Mr. Baker. "We have had nothing to do with putting armor on them or placing machine guns, but some of our men at Aldershot, England, recently were informed the British government intended to arm some of the tractors and use them for work other than the usual towing of big guns.

Germans Also Have Them.

"Germany had some of these tractors before the war began, and, although I do not understand just how it happened, I believe she may have got others since then. We have sent some to France and some to Russia.

"So far as I know, until the recent appearance of the armored cars the tractors were used only to tow big guns. I understand that Germany used about forty of them in this work before Liege early in the war, and recent photographs show that the British are using some of them now for the same purpose."

Mr. Baker said he did not know how many of the 1,000 tractors sent to England had been armored and put in service as land battleships.

"It is true," said Mr. Baker, "that these tractors can go ahead over almost anything or through almost anything. They can straddle a trench, go through a swamp, roll over logs or climb through shell craters like a car of Juggernaut. It looks uncanny to see them crawl along the ground, just like a huge caterpillar.

"In a thick forest, if they encountered trees which they could not brush out of their way, they could easily be used to uproot them and clear their own paths." The description of the car says that the corrugated surface is on the ground. On the inside of the belts, on each side of the body, are two lines of steel rails, making four lines in all.

These rails are in short sections, jointed, and operate over a cogged mechanism that actually lays them down with their belt attachment as the tractor moves ahead and picks them up again, so the car runs on its own self made track continuously. The short joints in the rails make it easy to turn to right or left.

How a "Tank" Crosses a Trench.

When it moves across a trench the front wheel, on which normally no weight rests, crosses first. The forward end of the caterpillar would then move forward over the open part of the trench, and the machine would be supported by the rear of the caterpillar, where most of the weight was concentrated, on one side with the guide wheel forward to act as a steadier in front. Then by the time the rear part of the caterpillar had reached the edge of the trench the forward part would already be across, and there would be very little displacement of the machine.

The machine had been used to knock down trees before the British thought of making a war chariot out of it. The narrow lumber roads through the Florida woods must be widened for the passage of the tractor, and instead of having men go ahead to cut down trees on either side of the road the caterpillars themselves are run against the trees that are in the way. The cogs on the other side of the track plate take hold of the tree and start to run the caterpillar up the hole, but the weight and the force of the engine are too much for the resistance of the tree, and it snaps off almost immediately.

As to knocking down houses, the ordinary frame of the tractor will easily run through a brick wall. The machine weighs about 25,000 pounds. With the armor and armament it would probably come to about 31,000. A machine of this weight driven with a motor of not less than 120 horse power will play havoc with ordinary houses.

The machine has two speeds—one of about two and a half miles an hour and the other of four. With its ease of direction and management the car can be used to chase a man around in a field and follow almost at his heels, no matter how he turns.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

ENDEAVORERS WILL MEET AT RED BANK

Thirtieth Annual State Convention to Be Held October 4, 5 and 6.

Red Bank, Sept. 22.—Final preparations are being made for the thirtieth annual convention of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union, which will be held here on October 4, 5 and 6. The local convention committee is holding meetings nearly every day. Thousands of circulars have been sent all over the State inviting Endeavorers to attend the convention.

The convention sessions will be held in the First Presbyterian church, of which the Rev. Dr. James W. Rogan is pastor, and Grace Methodist church, of which the Rev. Henry J. Root is pastor, will be used for conferences, committee meetings and exhibits. These churches are on opposite corners, the First Presbyterian being at Broad street and Reckless place, while the Grace Methodist is at Broad street and Branch avenue.

Working with the Red Bank churches in preparing for the convention are those of the surrounding towns, including Fair Haven, Oceanic, Atlantic Highlands, New Monmouth, Belmar and Long Branch. The people of Red Bank and neighboring localities will provide lodgings for the delegates from outside the county, the lodging and breakfasts being furnished without charge to the delegates. Luncheon and dinner will be served daily under an arrangement whereby the charge will be only large enough to meet the cost. Well-known and prominent speakers will make addresses, and an interesting program is being drafted for all the sessions, which will be held morning, afternoon and evening each day.

The Rev. Dr. Rogan is general chairman of the local committees; Arthur E. Jewell, of Long Branch, is vice chairman; Charles A. Lufburrow, of Atlantic Highlands, is secretary, and Roland Fennimore, of Fair Haven, is treasurer. The Rev. Arthur A. McKay, pastor of the Oceanic Presbyterian church, is chairman of the press and advertising committee; Alvin A. Whiting, of this place, is in charge of the music; M. Van Buren Smock, of Red Bank, will look after the entertainment and transportation features; Miss Rachel O. Osborn will have charge of the church decorations, and the chairmen of the other committees include J. S. Kruser, of Atlantic Highlands; William H. Hendrickson, Jr., and Mrs. Johnson L. Miner, of this place; Raymond Doughty, of Fair Haven; the Rev. Charles Everett, of Belmar; Mrs. Arthur E. Jewell, of Long Branch, and Miss Ethel M. Walling, of New Monmouth.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Woodhull, of Stelle avenue, have returned to their home after summering at Lake Hopatcong.

Miss Harriet Filmer, of Central avenue, has returned home after some time spent at Gloversville, N. Y.

The Misses Lee, of the New Madison, returned home after some time spent at Auburn, N. Y.

NEWARK AMUSEMENTS

At the Broad Street Theatre, Newark, begining Monday evening next and to continue throughout the entire week, with matinees on Wednesday and Saturday, will be presented Henry Blossom and Victor Herbert's charming musical comedy success, "The Only Girl," a combination that could not be anything but felicitous, for Henry Blossom has a real lyrical knack which seems to strike sure fire to Victor Herbert's musical imagination.

This delightful musical comedy which was played for an entire year at the Lyric Theatre, New York, in story details how a young man, a writer of librettos by profession and a bachelor by practice, is seeking a composer for a new opera upon which he is at work, and finds her in a charming young woman who lives upstairs and whose music haunts him. Add to this that three old friends who have deserted his bachelor quartet to marry, and a soubrette who wants a part for herself and her show girl friends in his new opera and there you have the beginning of the plot. To its completion there is much that is amusing, with Mr. Blossom supplying many bright lines and humorous situations.

Then too, there is Victor Herbert's delightful music of which it is always a pleasure to hear. Of the many compositions with which he has decorated "The Only Girl," perhaps the most popular of all is "When You're Away," the theme of the light opera which the hero and heroine are writing, which runs through the entire play. Other popular numbers are "Here's to the Land We Love, Boys," "Equal Rights," "Tell It All Over Again" and "When Your Ankle Wears the Ball and Chain."

Joe Weber has gathered an unusually clever company which includes Laura Arnold, Olga Roller, Adele Hassan, Nettie Velie, Marion Sitgreaves, Emmanuel A. Turner, Ernest Torrence, Frank Coombs, Richard Bartlett, Alfred Fisher, and an array of charmingly gowned and pretty show girls.

TO DISTRIBUTE PRIZES.

Pries will be distributed tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Kenyon Gardens. All interested are cordially invited to attend. Only children having plots of ground in the gardens will be admitted. Parents of children are invited to be present.

AEROPLANES VISIT ARIZONA CAMP

Army Aviators Are Practicing Daily Down in Arizona.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 18.—Announcement made last night of the results of the non-commissioned officers' examinations held last week indicate that Troop C, of the Essex detachment, will have an almost entirely new personnel of officers to get acquainted with during the remainder of the stay here. When First Lieutenant Hobat B. Brown, of Newark, was elected major of the First Squadron of cavalry to succeed William A. Bryant, of Montclair, who retired, it necessitated the raising of Second Lieutenant Lewis B. Ballantyne, of Maplewood, to the first lieutenant office, and Top Sergeant Joseph Lecour has now filled Ballantyne's former office. Line Sergeant George Wherry has been made top sergeant and the following corporals have been raised to sergeants' rank: John Kean, Cecil Agate and Douglas Sproule. The following first-class privates are now in possession of corporal warrants: Edward Twombly, Nelson Perry, Herbert Gawley and Warren Holmes. Captain Wilbur Kyle has appointed Nelson R. Perry to act as lance corporal for a term of six months.

The appointments are all popular ones with the rest of the troop, and the men are now breaking into their new duties on the eight-day hike which this outfit is participating in. The examinations given the candidates for the vacancies were stiff ones and considerable credit is due the men who passed.

Announcement was made today that the United States War Department would send Sergeant Pheoneas Staunton, of Troop C, to Hot Springs to recuperate from an attack of rheumatism which came upon him down here. He has been in the base hospital for a number of weeks, the ailment having affected his right arm most seriously.

Militiamen in the Jersey camp have become greatly interested in the aeroplane flights that have been staged in this section during the past two days. The first army ship to appear around here came from Columbus, N. M., Friday morning, a distance of 115 miles, covering the trip in one hour and thirty-five minutes. Lieutenant Thomas S. Bowne and Carl Spates were in charge of the machine and they landed at the regular camp after circling about over the Jersey outfit for several minutes. At first it was reported that the ship had come with important dispatches from General Pershing to General T. F. Davis, commander of the Arizona division, but inquiry developed that the flight had been made as a test. The two aviators visited the Jersey soldiers and proved themselves keenly interesting personages during the stay here. They stated that similar flights would be made here each day for a week or more and every man is now on the lookout for arrivals.

Some excitement was occasioned Saturday morning by the booming of cannons and a general disturbance coming from over the international boundary. Sudden thoughts of Villa's coming crowded the minds of the Jerseymen and everywhere was heard the question: "What's all the noise about?" The soldiers were keyed up to a pitch of excitement where they were ready for anything that might come.

However, the noise died down in half an hour and later in the day it was learned that the cannon's roar was merely the signal for the opening celebration of Independence Day in Mexico, this being the social celebration of the one hundred and sixth anniversary of the independence of Mexico from Spanish domination. Throughout the entire day there was a general disturbance in the gaudily decorated Agua Prieta, but venturesome soldiers were kept from crossing the line by strict orders from commanders. Many of the men sought to borrow civilian clothes in which they could peacefully explore the quaint little Mexican holdout, but threats of court martialing made them think better of the scheme.

Stories of the Gravediggers.

Grimly humorous is the tale of the Scottish gravedigger who complained that he did not get constant work.

"But, George," said the minister, "if you were to be constantly employed in the duties of the office you would soon bury the whole parish."

"That micht be, sir, but hoo am I to keep a wife and family unless I get regular work? 'Deed, sir, I havena buried a leevin' soul for the last six weeks."

Harder still was the case of another gravedigger who was asked to reduce his fee for digging a grave because, "mind ye, James, she was an auld woman and was sair spent."

The power of the press can be applied to any business by using good Printing.

A printer's best work is not obtained on the competitive basis. It cannot be.

The man who asks for competition in price seeks estimates on so much stock, composition and presswork and nothing more. He does not bargain for the skill, originality, time and individuality of the printer, and he does not get them.

We get only what we pay for in this world and nothing else that is worth having.

CARRANZA'S GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

Co-incident with the news of the latest Villa appearance there comes from New London reports that the American and Mexican mediators are discussing the advisability of removing American troops from Mexican soil and from the border, leaving Carranza to guard both Mexican and American lives and property. As much as we would have "our boys" come home even the suggestion is viewed with alarm. Authentic reports of the battle between Villa and Carranza soldiers at Chihuahua City are that it was a victory for the outlaws and that 1,000 regulars in the army of the First Chief quit his army to enlist under the black banner of the man for whose head the United States has offered a price of $50,000. Who won the battle means nothing, but if Villa is growing stronger each day it would be utterly foolish to leave the preservation of order to Carranza's puny little comic-opera army. If Carranza wants the good will and respect of the American people he will at once propose a plan whereby the army of Gen. Pershing will co-operate with soldiers of the de facto government in effecting the capture of Villa and his band. The good will of the American public may mean nothing to the bewhiskered and bewildered First Chief, but without it Wilson will not dare lend further aid to Carranza or take more insults from Mexicans. For once the settlement of the Mexican situation is in the hands of the American voters. It is too near election for President Wilson to work out any elaborate humanitarian plan. The first move Villa makes toward the American border will precipitate action, and if Carranza has anything concealed behind his whiskers he will be on the safe end of the United States machine guns when they begin spouting lead.

One of the few unpleasant incidents of the primary campaign in New Jersey occurred in Jersey City this week when men friendly to the candidacy of former Governor Franklin Murphy published personal attacks on Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, who is Mr. Murphy's opponent for the Republican nomination for the United States Senate. Mr. Frelinghuysen kindly doubts that his opponent sanctioned such attacks, and it is hard to believe that Mr. Murphy would have been so foolish as to encourage publication of the report that Mr. Frelinghuysen is not a resident of the State. It would not be very difficult for Mr. Murphy to spoil whatever chances he may have of getting the nomination in this manner, because the voters of New Jersey will not countenance personal abuse as a stepping stone to the high office of United States Senator. Everyone knows that Mr. Frelinghuysen has always been a resident of Raritan, and lives there the best part of the year.

While Robert Bacon made a wonderful fight for the Republican nomination for United States Senator from the State of New York, his defeat cannot excite any expressions of sympathy except from personal friends and admirers. Mr. Bacon, according to his own announcements, was "running against the Kaiser." No matter how strongly pro-Ally, or anti-German, if that sounds better, a citizen of this country may be in his individual mind he cannot truly represent any part of the American people, no matter how small a constituency, if he openly disavows neutrality. Whatever its citizens may think, the nation is neutral, and those who hold national office represent the nation.

Wives and mothers in Australia are to decide by ballot whether or not their husbands and sons shall be forced to fight for England. This is hardly a fair test of the sentiment of the women of the country, as there are thousands who have already sent their loved ones as volunteers and they will surely vote in favor of conscription, but it is a step forward. Perhaps sometime they will let wives and mothers vote on the question before a declaration of war is issued, and then there will be no more wars.

It develops that the wonderful armored caterpillar-tractors that have been crawling over trenches and bomb craters to the delight of the British and the defeat of the Germans were really made in Peoria, Illinois. When we stop to think how much we have really contributed to the European war it isn't very difficult to see why this country is not prepared.

Out in a little town in Indiana all the justices of the peace got together and agreed to charge a minimum fee of $3 for performing a marriage ceremony. But the people wouldn't fall for it. Young men couldn't be made to believe it was worth $3, and now the J. P.s. are down to fifty cents again.

• • • • • •

Whatever the Murphy men may say about that Hudson County Republican Association indorsement of Frelinghuysen it came from the throats of more than 500 voters, according to reports from both sides, and it means 500 votes if nothing else.

Papers in China.

Papers published in China are reported as having several classes of readers, the first class being those who first purchase the papers at the subscription price. When these papers have been read and thrown away they are carefully gathered up and sold at a less price to a less prosperous element among the people, and from these, in turn, they are passed on down to the poorer classes, each paper, if it has lasted that long, thus finding three grades of readers.—Christian Herald.

"From the clouds, my son."

"And where do the clouds get it?"

"Eventually it gets back to the ocean."

"Well, why couldn't it stay in one place all the time and save all that trouble?"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Victor Hugo's Double.

Victor Hugo had a real double in flesh and blood, who exploited his physical resemblance to the man of genius. He cut his beard like Hugo's, copied the master's dress in its smallest details and so for eighteen years divided with the master the admiration of the public. His especial delight was to pose in a poetical attitude in front of a Punch and Judy show. He did this at a particular spot every Thursday afternoon for years, thoroughly enjoying the murmurs of curiosity and applause proceeding from the gaping crowd which he deceived. We do not hear that he reaped any other reward but pleasure.

A Splendid Pose.

"How would you like to be the captain of a submarine liner?"

"The idea doesn't appeal to me at all," answered the man who is fond of display.

"Well, why not?"

"For me half the fun of being the captain of an ocean liner would be to stand on the bridge and sweep the sea with my glasses in full view of hundreds of admiring passengers scattered about on the upper deck."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

On the Spur of the Moment

The Poor Bo.

A tramp drew near a cottage door.
And rapped upon the sill;
A kind old lady looked him o'er,
And beamed with her good will.

He said: "Kind friend, in me you lamp
A cold and hungry bo;
I'm sure you'd keep a poor old tramp
From starving in the snow."

The lady listened open-eyed;
His smile lit up the gloom.
She quickly turned and went inside,
Then came back with the broom.

"You shall not starve upon the snow,
It is too cold to lie on;
But you shall take this broom, ye know,
And clean a place to die on."

You can lead a horse to water, but you cannot make him drink; surround a fool with wisdom, but you cannot make him think. You show an ingrate kindness and get injured for your pains. You can dress a dude in fashion, but you can't give him brains. You can bring the rich to justice but it takes a lot of time. While the poor man goes to prison, the rich one pays the fine. If you study human nature you'll find freaks of every strain. Some you see excel in stature; others great with nerve or brain. You'll find lots of faults to criticize—perhaps some traits to praise; but it's just as Nature made us guys. That explains our funny ways. Don't get too close to the buzz saw or tickle a mule that's tame. Don't give advice to those in love or bet on another man's game.

Current Events at Hickeyville.

Aloysius Smith, the noted bugologist, claims that he has discovered a microbe that will kill the potato bug. The scheme is to catch the potato bugs and inoculate each one with one or more of these microbes. It may be a tedious task, but potato bugs killed in this way never have to be killed a second time. Mr. Smith expects to organize a stock compnay for the purpose of selling these microbes to the farmers throughout the State.

A mother has received the following letter from her son, who is at college:

"Dear Mother: I must have a gymnasium suit and a pair of tennis shoes; please send them to me. If I get them here I will have to pay for them out of my allowance. Also send me along three ties, a pair of gloves, a laundry bag, and a lounging jacket. I am sending a pattern for a fraternity pillow, which please embroider and return. And say, mother, kindly slip me a 'five' occasionally, as dad does not give me a very liberal allowance. Now you do not deserve this letter, as you have not written this week, so I am not going to write you another word. Your loving son."

- Proctor's Theatre -

Thomas Dixon, the author and producer of "The Fall of a Nation," which appears at Proctor's today for the last time, is emphatic on one point that his preparedness spectacle is not anti-anything but pro-American. He says: "In view of the criticism of certain scenes, I wish to reiterate the statement that "The Fall of a Nation" is not directed against any nationality, class or racial element in this country. My friend, S. Stanwood Menken is quite mistaken in saying: 'Your picture is manifestly anti-German.' Against Mr. Menken's expression I would put the opinions of the local German press which are uniformly as favorable to my play, and the great majority of the English language papers. The entire point of the play is that all nationalities here, whether British, Irish, Teutonic, French, Italian or Eastern European should be fused into a United States Americanism." Many of the hundreds of local film fans who have seen "The Fall of a Nation" heartily agree with Mr. Dixon's views. An added attraction today is the presentation of William Farnum, one of the most popular of screen stars in this vicinity, in one of his most successful plays, "The Man From Bitter Roots."

Tomorrow a double feature program will be presented at Proctor's at the regular rates of admission. By special request Geraldine Farrar, the noted operatic screen star, will be featured in what is conceded to be her most popular vehicle, "Temptation." Olga Petrova, another artist with a host of admirers among local film enthusiasts, will be starred in a Metro production entitled "The Scarlet Woman."

On Monday a double feature V. L. S. E. program will be presented and will include Orrin Johnson in "The Light at Dusk," Lucille Lee Stewart in "The Conflict," and the 4th episode of "Beatrice Fairfax." On Tuesday a Triangle feature entitled "Pillars of Society" will be presented. The star in this attraction is no other than Henry B. Walthall, the popular hero of "The Birth of a Nation."

·· Plainfield Theatre. ··

"The Garden of Love," a delightful miniature musical comedy, and one of the largest productions to be seen on the popular-priced circuit, hit the fancy of the two capacity audiences that filled the Plainfield Theatre yesterday afternoon. The act is considered one of the most amusing and tuneful yet presented at the local house. A chorus of pretty girls are introduced, together with a pair of able cemedianes and singers of rare ability. Special stage settings and costumes are also carried. "The Garden of Love" will head the vaudeville bill today and tomorrow at the West Second street house.

Maurice and Rizzo pleased the audience with violin and piano selections, the latter being a past master of the violin. Beside the Maurice and Rizzo presentation, the program contains other musical numbers. The Sherwood Trio, two men and a woman, render up-to-the-minute songs in a catchy way. Howard and Phillips demonstrate the latest dances, together with "nifty sayings and nifty doings." The entire bill is rounded out with Vassar and Arkin, comedians. They offer a line of jokes that are absolutely new and contain a laugh in every line. Taken all in all, the vaudeville is up to the usual high standard secured for the performances at the Plainfield Theatre.

Photoplays intermingle with the vaudeville and lengthen out the program. Pathe comedies and dramas, featuring many of the popular filmdom artists are seen at every performance. The Pathe Weekly, containing the latest Paris fashions as well as pictorials of current events, is seen each day. The afternoon performances at the theatre commence at 2:15, while the evening show runs from 7 to 11 o'clock.

In talking to Joe Hurtig, the musical comedy producer, regarding his co-stars, Stone and Pillard, in his newest spectacle, "The Ragdoll in Ragland," he was positive that burlesque audiences would appreciate the innovation which has come with this very show. And the genial producer, who is known to have always found the right vehicles, has again been selecting a fairy story for those most noted of all eccentric comedians. The story runs in the following lines: Twinkle Tootsie (Etta Pillard), a very beautiful girl, has a rag doll, Raggy (George Stone), that is her sole companion. A former admirer, Captain Al, has just returned from war and insists that Twinkle Tootsie should marry him immediately. But the "Evil Genius" beats him at his own game and changes Raggy into a real live fellow. At Raggy's suggestion, Tootsie decides to accompany him to Ragland, his home. Just when they thought they were in safety, the Captain and his army appeared on the scene and after a few embarrassing moments they all rag over "the end of the world," while Tootsie and Raggy dance clear "off the earth."

The greatest portion of hilarity is woven into the second act, when Raggy is made formally King of Ragland, after passing the 14th degree. Characters familiar to all since childhood days, are introduced one by one, including Red Riding Hood, the grandmother, the wolf and many others, too numerous to mention. As all fairy tales end with every one happy and contented, so does this particular one. The first presentation of "The Ragdoll in Ragland" in this city will be offered at the Plainfield Theatre next Monday, matinee and night.

FINED $5 FOR FIGHTING.

Stanley Hossack, of 672 South Second street, was fined $5 when arraigned before Judge DeMeza yesterday afternoon in city court on a charge of disorderly conduct and fighting. Hossack interfered in a business deal Edward Burgess, a shoes salesman, was having with a merchant of the West End and struck Burgess.

THE BIG PUSH
By BRINKERHOFF.

IS THIS WORK WORTH ONLY $700 A YEAR?

The following interesting story concerning Dr. Paul W. Harrison, missionary from Trinity Reformed church, to Arabia, appears in the October number of the American Magazine:

Paul W. Harrison is a missionary pioneer in Arabia, and in his short time in that country has already added a Christian page to the "Thousand and One Nights." He startled the missionaries already there by acquiring Arabic sooner than any of them had thought possible. Then he had to get a Turkish diploma, and the examination for the diploma had to be made in French. Harrison knew book French. He was shy on speaking it. So he planned to go to Paris during his second summer in Arabia. The usual journey from Arabia to France takes nearly a month and costs a considerable sum. So he took a short cut across the northern Arabian Desert from Bagdad to Damascus, almost breaking his back on a camel to accompany the post rider. He reached Paris in record time, and spent a month talking to everybody, from the janitor's little boy to the head surgeons of the Paris hospitals. Then he rushed to Constantinople, went to the American colony, and told them he wanted to take the examination for a Turkish diplomat right away.

"Right away!" they exclaimed. "Things aren't done that way in Turkey. You will have to go every day to the government office, and when they are tired of seeing you they will give you what you want, to get rid of you."

He went the first day and soon returned looking happy.

"I went there and told one old fellow what I wanted," he said; "then another came and asked me two medical questions. He went back and in a few minutes another came and told me that I had passed the examination and that a diploma would be sent to me."

"Well, if that's all," said the old-timers, "you have introduced a new system, for they have never done anything in such American style before."

The Arabs are accustomed to strange tales. They are brought up on genii and Harun-al-Rashid. It takes something unusual to startle them. Harrison did it:

He conducts a dispensary and operates on everything from sheiks to donkeys. One day an Arab brought his little son to Harrison's dispensary in Kuweit. The boy was suffering from water on the brain, and the pressure of the water made the boy an idiot. As soon as Harrison saw the child, he said: "Why didn't you bring your boy here sooner. Something might have been done for him, but he is dying now."

"Cannot you do anything for him?" said the father.

The doctor considered.

"There is one thing that might help him. I can transplant a vein into the boy's neck and make a drain so that the lymph, the water, may flow from his head to his shoulder, and perhaps the head will decrease in size and the pressure be relieved. Your son may live and even become normal again. That's just a chance."

"Oh, do it!" exclaimed the father.

"Well, you are the boy's father. Will you give me a vein out of your arm or your leg to make that drain?"

"What! Do you mean that you want to cut me? No, let him die first."

"Well," said Harrison quietly, "will you let me do whatever I want with the boy?"

"You say he is going to die, anyway," answered the Arab. "Yes, he is in your hands, do whatever you want with him."

So the doctor took the little fellow, put him on the operating table, and took a knife in his right hand and cut open his own left arm, under local anaesthasia, took out a vein six or seven inches long and transplanted it into the little boy's neck.

I wish I could tell you that the boy lived; but he died. The Arab spread the story of what the American missionary had done. One night Doctor Harrison and I were together in an Arab's house. Nearly a score of men were seated on the floor along the wall, and one of them said to him:

"Doctor, we hear that you cut open your own arm to save the life of a little idiot Arab boy. Is that true?"

"Yes," nodded the doctor.

"Will you show us the place?" they urged.

So he bared his arm, and the Arabs looked at the long red scar in amazement. Then one of them—the finest in the lot, one of the ruling families, exclaimed:

"You could fill this whole room full of silver, and I wouldn't do that for anybody!"

The Arabs are unwilling to help each other, to hurt themselves in order to help each other. Harrison thinks that makes them need his help all the more. He is a poor man, as most sons of ministers are. He worked hard to get the finest training in Johns Hopkins and the Massachusetts General Hospital could give him, and he has dedicated his life to Arabia. The Arabian Mission pays him seven hundred dollars a year for his support, and much of that he spends for medicine and instruments for the Arabs.

Daddy's Bedtime Story—

An Emperor Visits Some Crafty Weavers.

"I see nothing at all," thought the emperor.

[Adapted from Hans Christian Andersen.]

DADDY took his big chair, and the children climbed on his lap for a story:

"Some rogues once deceived a silly emperor till he believed they could weave a cloth that was invisible to stupid or unfit folks. So nobody dared say he could not see the cloth for fear he might be thought stupid or unfit for his place in the world.

"The emperor sent his faithful servant to see the stuff and tell him when this remarkable cloth would be done so he might have robes of it. The servant looked and looked at the empty loom.

"'Isn't this a beautiful piece?' asked one swindler, making all the motions of weaving, explaining a beautiful pattern and colors that were not there.

"'I know I am not a fool,' thought the servant, 'so I must be unfit for my duties. But it will never do to let people know this.'

"So he, too, went back to the emperor and reported that the cloth was charming. Finally everybody in town was talking about the splendid stuff.

"Then the emperor himself thought that he would like to see the cloth before it was taken off the loom. So he chose a number of courtiers to go with him, among whom were the two trusty ones who had already seen the fabric, and went to pay a visit to the two crafty swindlers, who were working away at an imaginery loom when the royal company got there.

"'I can see nothing at all,' thought the emperor. 'This is terrible! Am I a fool? Am I not fit for my duties as emperor? Nothing worse than that could happen to me.'

"'Oh, how beautiful this cloth is!' he finally cried. 'It has my highest approval!' And he nodded his satisfaction as he gazed about the empty room.

"The whole lot of courtiers gazed and gazed, but could see nothing more than the first man that went there could. But they advised the emperor to wear robes of the cloth at a big procession that was about to take place.

"'Gorgeous!' 'Excellent!' went from mouth to mouth. So the emperor gave each of the rogues an order of knighthood to be worn in their buttonholes and the title of 'gentlemen weavers.'

"The night before the procession the two swindlers sat up all night, burning sixteen candles, so that everybody might see how eager they were to get the emperor's new clothes ready. They cut them out in the air with a huge pair of scissors and stitched away with needles without any thread in them. 'Now the emperor's clothes are ready!' at last they cried!"

Training a Husband

by MRS. EVA LEONARD

In Which Marian and Morris Argue Over the Responsibility Which the Boys Should Carry.

"Have these hens been fed?" asked Morris Southy sharply as he passed the kitchen door.

"I don't know, Morris. I will ask them." Marian nodded brightly through the window.

"I thought you recommended that pup," Morris spit out the word with great vehemence, "as a great educator of youth in the care of animals, yet these chickens go hungry half the time."

"Oh, I am sure you are mistaken, dear. I have seen them feed the hens nearly every night this week." Marian was too placid about the subject to suit her husband. He had an idea that interest must be accompanied with a great demonstration. "I wish you would take it upon yourself to see that the hens are fed every day. I hate to keep any animal and half starve it; besides, if we are to make anything on the chickens we certainly must feed them."

"I have entirely too much to do, Morris, to undertake anything more; besides, it is a poor way to teach children to shoulder responsibility by assuming it yourself for them."

"You said you thought it would be a good thing to have them take the care of the hens, didn't you?" Morris stood in the kitchen door, causing a draft on the baby, who sat in his high chair by the table.

"Please come in, Morris; the baby will get cold in this draft." Her husband gave the door a vicious little bang.

"Well, what do you think we had better do about those chickens; sell them? We certainly shall not keep them and take care of them. That is a bad business and bad education for the boys as well," resumed Morris.

"Certainly. They must be fed regularly, and they must be fed by the children themselves." Marian stood thinking on the knotty problem. "How would it do to have the boys lose some little pleasure or privilege every time they forget to feed them?" she suggested presently.

"That might do. What would you suggest as a means of discipline?" Morris had come to rely almost entirely on Marian's judgment in matters of discipline. Perhaps he had enough of that in school and was glad to escape the additional burden, besides Marian always had some sane original little method that she wanted to try out. Morris therefore gave her a free hand and brought his complaints to her instead of disciplining the children except when he was angry.

"I have been thinking for some time that it would be a good thing to give the boys a small monthly allowance and——"

"An allowance! We can't keep them in necessaries, let alone spending money," interrupted Morris.

"Oh, nothing worth mentioning. A child is as pleased with a nickel as with a larger sum," was the smiling answer.

"Don't you think it. They know the difference."

"Well, a nickel or a dime a week as an allowance will be a different thing from having small change given to them in a haphazard way. Let us tell them that the allowance will be paid if the hens have been fed every day without fail," suggested Marian.

"Meantime you or I will have to watch to see if they have fed them." There was disgust in his tone.

"Indeed not. We will have a little calendar on the door of the hen house with a pencil attached. Every time the chickens are fed the date can be marked off."

"If they forgot it they could mark off the entire week at once," was the sarcastic answer.

"The boys are honest so far, besides I know about what they are doing without their knowing that I am watching them." Marian showed some warmth in her reply.

"All right, we will try it. It sounds pretty fair," said Morris, turning toward the door.

"You propose the plan, to them. It will seem more like business if it comes from the business head of the house," laughed Marian.

VELOUR DELAINE.

For Coat This Beautiful Soft and Velvety Material is the Keynote of Fashions in Outer Garments.

By Mary Glynn.

To have a coat that is not only warm but looks warm is the ideal condition. That is what one will be able to buy this autumn. Manufacturers of fabrics have made up a most wonderful line of Velour Delaine, that is, wool velvet cloakings, and manufacturers of garments have bought materials of these clothes and are making them up into the most fascinating kind of styles.

It used to be that when a woman bought a big coat, she thought only of how warm it would be. Now she may think of not only how warm, but how beautiful and how becoming.

The new Velour Delaine comes in the most wonderful shades, and the coloring are so soft and the tones so subdued, that one may wear a red, or green, or purple coat, without the least offense to good taste, and how much more becoming these are than the sombre grays and dull tan shades which have previously dominated in cloakings!

Can you imagine anything more attractive than a mulberry red Velour Delaine coat, trimmed with a broad band of sealskin fur with a big Russian collar and deep cuffs of the same glossy brown pelt? Add to this a lovely brocaded lining where mulberry tones melt into pink and gray, and you have just the ideal coat for wintry days.

You can if you wish have your hat in seal brown to match the fur, or you may extravagantly buy a mulberry velvet trimmed with some tiny heads of ostrich or appliqued with flat bunches of fruits or flowers in faded mulberry tones intermingled with silver. If the gray note is to be further enthused, choose a pair of high button boots in dull gray kid with gray cloth uppers, and you will be perfectly dressed whether for morning or afternoon promenade.

With such a coat, and two dresses, one a simple serge, and the other a satin or velvet, the autumn wardrobe is quite complete. The pockets of the new coats are so capacious that one can very well do away with a muff and with a hand bag, so there is real economy in these new coats.

Autumn Colors.

The powers that be who determine what woman will wear next season have put their heads together in Paris and decided upon the new autumn colors. Would you like to know what they are to be? Yellow, it seems, is leftout entirely, and green, so fashionable this year, will have a few adherents. There are purplish blues, nickel and gun metal grays and several charming reds, including fuchsia, geranium and brick red. Browns will be exclusively fashionable, with a gamut from bisque to chocolate. The great feature in this respect, however, will be chameleon, each chameleon shade combining two others in shot effect.

Types of Suit Skirts.

The new suit skirts are mostly on simple lines. Some are in semicircular effect, others show the introduction of plaits, and a few very dressy models have long overskirts.

Serges, poplins, broadcloths and wool velours are the principal materials, with a few novelty checks. The tendency is for plain fabrics.

Chinese Bracelets.

Plain Chinese bracelets are used as trimming on hats, arranged so that the hat can be carried by them as if they were loops.

Family Tree to Highest Bidder.

Albert Terhune, who died at Paterson, N. J., aged eighty, considered his "family tree" of some value. In his will there is a clause which directs the executrixes to "dispose of my family tree to whichever of my nieces or nephews shall bid the highest for it."

Another Difference.

"I don't see any difference between you and a trained nurse except the uniform," said her sick husband.

"And the salary," she added thoughtfully.

EPISCOPAL WOMEN PLAN FOR CONVENTION

Representatives From All Parts of World to Meet in St. Louis.

Women from all over the United States and from lands beyond the seas will be present in thousands at the General Convention of the Episcopal Church to be held at St. Louis in October. Each of the 68 diocesan branches of the Woman's Auxiliary to the Boardof Missions is entitled to send five delegates to the missionary conferences and meeting connected with the convention and delegates will also be present from China, Japan, Africa, Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines and Honolulu.

Their meetings will be held in the Sheldon Memorial Building where, every day, mission study classes will meet, to be followed by conferences addressed by mission workers from all parts of the world. At the noon hour all work will be suspended for the offering of special prayers for missions.

The climax will be the great service to be held in Christ Church Cathedral on October 12 for the presentation of the women's united offering. During the year the women of the church have distributed thousand of mite boxes for small gifts for missions. These are opened twice a year and the money is accumulated for the triennial united offering. At this service each diocesan missionary district will place in the alms boasin its gift. The total at the general convention of 1913 was $306,500, and it is expected that amount will be exceeded this year.

The united offering service will consist of a celebration of the Holy Communion at which Bishop Tuttle, presiding bishop, will officiate, assisted by Bishop Arthur Selden Lloyd, president of the board of missions, in addition to which more than one hundred bishops will be in attendance. When the offering is formally presented the Doxology will be sung by the vast congregation, and hundreds of women who cannot obtain admission will take up the strains outside. It will be one of the most impressive sights of the convention.

The secretary of the Woman's Auxiliary is Miss Julia Emery who has filled the office with signal ability for 46 years.

EDUCATIONAL SUNDAY.

Calvin N. Kendall, State Commissioner of Education, with the approval of Gov. James F. Fielder, has set October 8 as Educational Sunday in New Jersey, and in a proclamation issued this week urges the clergymen of the State and their congregations to unite in observing the day with appropriate services. In his proclamation Commissioner Kendall says among other things: "The beginning of another school year calls attention to the large place which our institutions devoted to education occupy in the life of the State. More than 600,000 of our young people have the advantage of these institutions. Not only to the children and youth of the State is education of importance, but it is also important to all others because education is a necessity in a democracy."

"DIPPER" JONES GETS BUSY.

Announcement has been made to the effect that Gifford Jones, the manager of the Plainfield A. A. basketball team, will resume operations in a few weeks. Jones will have his men on the courts as soon as the weather and enthusiasm permits. We understand that he expects to have a nifty combination and that he is going to make an effort to lead his charges against any and all opposition that presents itself. "Dip" is an enthusiastic manager and takes pleasure in arranging only the best games. He is of the opinion that his five men will be able to take care of all opposition. And what's more, Mr. Jones is going to pay personal visits to prominent basketball leaders around these parts.

WHY NOT HAVE A LEAGUE?

Plainfield ought to have a bowling league. Plainfield ought to have a basketball league. Is Plainfield going to have either? Perhaps the Queen City is going to enjoy the sensation of having well-organized basketball and bowling leagues, but from present indications very little action is being taken in the matter. A fraternal bowling league would be just the thing. If the league were purely local, the following teams could and undoubtedly would gain entrance: Tabs, Knights of Columbus, Elks, Eagles, Juniors and the Moose. Other lodges could enter teams and the crack Imperials, although not a fraternal team, could add "spice" to the competition. Four alleys would be available. Therefore eight teams could enter the league. Why not get busy boys? If anyone is really interested in the formation of a bowling or basketball league let him see the Sporting Editor, in order that something definite can be accomplished. Call us up on the 'phone, if you care to, Mr. Bowler.

BIG SHOW ABOUT READY.

On the Horse Show Grounds tomorrow will be staged the Fifth Annual Dog Show of the Plainfield Kennel Club. This show will be under the management of Wilbur Purcell, who has had considerable experience along these lines. Mr. Purcell has arranged a very good entry list and expects this show to outshine any other affair of like nature held this year. Plainfielders should support the undertaking. It is not a money-making idea; it is merely a sportlovers' effort to help along a most worthy charity, the Volunteers' Aid Fund. Judging begins promptly at 11 o'clock and those who want to enjoy the whole day's program should be on hand at an early hour.

PRACTICE ON MONDAY.

Coach Ralph Patch has called practice for Monday afternoon. In taking this action Mr. Patch has but followed the lead of other Union county coaches. Carl Eliason, who is coaching Rahway this year, has had his men on the field for a week or more. Walter E. Short is just beginning active work and "Hub" Stine says that he is about to start. If the Red and Blue boys go at this work with a will, we feel that they will not regret the effort. There is a roseate chance of their capturing the county championship. Reports state that Rahway has a light team. And everyone knows what that means. It means that brains and not brawn will have to carry Rahway through. Battin has a fairly good squad, but we have yet to hear anyone "rave" over Elizabeth prospects. Just what kind of a team "Hub" Stine will be able to turn out we do not know. "Hub" told us that he would call practice as soon as possible and perhaps he has done so. Rest assured, Herbert will do something worth while.

HOLY CROSS MANAGER, ATTENTION.

Appearing in the various newspapers of the State are football challenges. The Century A. A. is a Jersey City football team that believes itself capable of trimming the better elevens throughout Jersey. The Stapleton Field Club also has a football team and claims to have won the championship of the metropolitan district. It might be a good stunt, Mr. Doyle, to talk business with the managers of either of these teams.

THOSE LEAGUE RACES.

"It is beginning to look more and more like Brooklyn and the Boston Red Sox for world's series contenders, not because they have margins of any great width between themselves and their nearest contenders, but because they are winning just enough games to stay out in front. Theirs is a defensive, not an uphill struggle. Of the two, the Red Sox look like the surer bet, because they are playing a peppery brand of aggressive ball and yesterday took the second straight from Detroit, their nearest rivals, making the third straight defeat Jennings' men have suffered. This, without a doubt, will take the heart out of the Tigers.

"The Brooklyns are muddling along with less ginger and with two hard series ahead, as they are still to face Chicago and New York before winding up the season. Their salvation probably lies in the fact that the close of the season will see Boston and Philadelphia, the other contenders, fighting it out in Philadelphia. But even this isn't too safe an outlook to bank on, as Robbie's band will wind up with the Giants, and the Giants are traveling with the gears locked in high and the muffler cut out, with no place to go.

"Brooklyn won the series from Cincinnati, but without much show of decisiveness. They won one last Saturday and tied the other; Monday they spilt a double-header, and then took the last game of the series Tuesday. Yesterday they began a series with St. Louis with a victory. They should have been fighting at top speed with Cincinnati, and they ought now to be making top speed with St. Louis in order to accumulate a safer margin than one and one-half games before tackling Chicago, while Boston is playing the Pirates and Philadelphia is toying with Cincinnati. Perhaps it takes the shadow of impending disaster to spur Brooklyn on.

"Things are not half so uncertain in the American League, for Boston will have nothing but second division clubs to meet for the rest of the season after finishing with Detroit. The Sox face Cleveland, New York and Philadelphia in turn."—Newark News.

COLLEGE FOOTBALL SEASON WILL OPEN

Two of "Big" Eastern Teams Will Get Busy on Gridiron Tomorrow.

New York, Sept. 22.—Football, which has been hovering on the horizon for a fortnight, will become an actuality tomorrow, when minor contests will be played on the eastern and western gridirons. The opening in the East will be the more important in the calibre of the competing teams, as two of the so-called big teams, Harvard and Dartmouth, will inaugurate their schedules, the Crimson clashing with Colby at Cambridge and the Dartmouth eleven taking on New Hampshire State at Hanover.

One week hence Yale, West Point, Annapolis, Syracuse and Pennsylvania will be seen on the gridiron. Princeton and Cornell, too, were scheduled to play their first games on that day, Sept. 30, but the infantile paralysis epidemic caused a change and it is probable that neither will be seen in action for the first time until October.

Indications point to unusual interest and enthusiasm in the great American college game this fall. The season will be longer and more games will be played than ever before. The teams of the leading universities and colleges of the country will figure in more than 1,300 contests, while the preparatory and high school elevens will compete in more than twice that number, bringing the total close to the 5,000 mark.

Intersectional games stand out as one of the most noticeable features of the season's schedules. Among the more important of the intersectional contests will be those beween Syracuse and Ohio, Yale and Virginia, Harvard and North Carolina, Georgetown and Dartmouth, Illinois and Colgate, Army and Washington and Lee, Missouri and Texas, Dartmouth and West Virginia, and Yale and Virginia Polytechnic. The Michigan schedule provides for the three customary games with Eastern institutions—Syracuse, Cornell and Pennsylvania.

The Army-Navy game, which for years has marked the close of the season, will have to share the honor this year with the Harvard-Yale game. Both of the big contests are to be played the same day, Saturday, November 25. The game between the cadets and the middies will be staged in New York and that between the Crimson and the Blue at New Haven.

The Western conference, which embraces nine of the leading universities of the Middle West, is looking forward to the best season in its history. Unless the early signs go astray there is going to be a hard battle for the conference championship. The advent of four new coaches, such well known figures as Dr. Paul Withington, of Harvard; Howard Jones, of Yale; E. O. Steihm, from Nebraska, and C. A. O'Donnell, who has been turning out champion teams for the Everett (Mass.) High School, has added a new flavor of style and element of importance to the Western conference season.

At this early date Minnesota and Illinois are again favorites for "Big Nine" honors. Chicago is considered stronger than last year and may develop into an equal contender. Wisconsin, under Dr. Paul Withington, is as yet an unknown quantity. In the second division Purdue is expected upon to make a good showing. and Indiana, under Stiehm, is countupon o make a good showing.

What Jones will be able to do at Iowa is as much unknown as Withington's prospects at Wisconsin. Coach Wilce, of Ohio State, is hoping for another season as eventful as the last, when the Buckeye institution held Illinois to a tie. Northwestern, with J. L. Driscoll as captain, is looking to better success than last season. The university has several excellent players in addition to Driscoll and it is thought will do well.

On the face of the advance prospects the campaign about to begin among the "Big Nine" gridironers promises to be a memorable one because of the strength of three and probably four of the leaders and the appearance of new styles of play with the new coaches.

LAJOIE AS MANAGER.

Napoleon Lajoie is considering an offer which will end his big league career and make him a magnate and manager of the class AA minors if he accepts it. The Salt Lake City ball club in the Pacific Coast League has offered Lajoie the place as playing manager, with the option of a big block of stock in the club.

Lajoie is now in Cleveland, his playing days for the present season being over because of a strained ligament in his leg.

FIFTH ANNUAL SHOW OF KENNEL CLUB WILL BE HELD AT HORSE SHOW GROUNDS

Everything is in Readiness for "Big" Event—Over 650 Entries Received—Special Trolleys Will Be Run—Complete List of Judges.

The Fifth Annual Show of the Plainfield Kennel Club will be held at the Horse Show Grounds, on Randolph road, tomorrow morning and afternoon. Over six hundred and fifty entries have been received and judging will commence at eleven o'clock promptly. An aggregate sum of fifteen hundred dollars has been awarded in prizes and some of the best dogs in the country will compete for honors.

This show is under the management of Wilbur Purcell, of New York. Mr. Purcell has given the affair wide publicity in New York State and has had publicity agents at work throughout New Jersey. Every city of any size in Northern Jersey has been informed of the show through the medium of the newspapers. Consequently, it is expected that an unusually large attendance will greet those in charge of the show on the morrow.

Luncheon will be served on the grounds by a local caterer and special trolley cars will meet all trains from New York City and Philadelphia. A handsome trophy for the best dog in the show has been donated by the president of the club, and it is expected that there will be keen competition for this prize. The vice-president's trophy will be awarded to the best dog of opposite sex to the winner of the president's trophy. The secretary offers a trophy for the best sporting dog, while the treasurer's trophy goes to the best non-sporting dog. The Bench Show Committee offers a trophy for the largest exhibit owned by any one kennel or exhibitor.

The names of the judges for the show follow:

Mrs. Abbie Rubino, Bergenfield, N. J., Belgian and German sheepdogs; Fred Hill, Valley Cottage, N. Y., Great Danes; R. F. Height, Lakewood, N. J., Airedales; George Greer, Rye, N. Y., Sporting Spaniels; James E. Meade, Brooklyn, N. Y., Boston Terriers; C. N. Denault, Pittsfield, Mass., French Bulldogs; Udo M. Fleischmann, New York City, Pointers and Setters; Dr. J. E. DeMund, Brooklyn; Vinton P. Breese, Newark, and Dr. Henry Jarrett, Philadelphia.

There have been many local and State entries received for the show. The complete list of Plainfield and State entries follow:

Plainfield—Francis Keegan, Mrs. Arthur Lane, A. G. Hooley, William B. Nash, Mrs. John J. O'Donohue, John J. O'Donohue, R. L. Rosenthal, James K. Rossman, St. Helier's Kennels, Sidney R. Tisworth, Mrs. J. G. Voorhees, John G. Zerega, Fred Bimble, Boreas Kennels, Mrs. T. Dean, John Conway and Richard Harrigan.

New Jersey—John Amman, Jr., of Irvington Allstone Kennels, of Bound Brook; Joseph Adamson, of Kearny; M. P. Barnwell, of Elizabeth; Henry Fass, of Elizabeth; Thomas K. Bray, of Westfield; Charmion Kennels, of Newark; John Clark, of New Brunswick; John G. Bates, of Morristown; Robert A. Fairbairn, of Westfield; Haley Fiske, of Bernardsville; Hayworth Kennels, of Hayworth; Hilterfar Kennels, of Morristown; Charles K. Lester, of Englewood; Carwin Mabey, of Montclair; C. I. Nielson, of Middlebush; Mrs. M. V. Mackin, of Paterson; William G. Porteous, of Kearny; Miss Maude Thompson, of Englewood; Ernest Truslow, of Short Hills; Henry Ungerer, of Westfield; Francis Lloyd, of Bernardsville; Miss Sarah Willowby, of Kearny; Mrs. C. Woehr, of Lakewood, and many others.

JACK MARTIN HAS CRIPPLED SQUAD

Milwaukee Aggregation Gradually Going From Bad to Worse.

Jack Martin is managing a badly crippled team in Milwaukee. In fact, it is said that President Al Timme is disgusted with the aggregation. Surely, Martin must feel the same way. At least, he felt that way about a month ago.

Al Timme says that he is going to build up the squad. He states that he has put in bids for several new players and hopes that he will be successful in his attempt to land these men. A large number of youngsters will be secured for Manager Martin, according to the present plans of the Milwaukee owner. Not a word has been said regarding the manager for next season. Perhaps Jack Martin may retain the position and perhaps he may not. Timme wants the central offices of the American Association located in Milwaukee.

WESTFIELD WILL TRY TO REPEAT VICTORY

Tommy Apgar and His Men Promise Trouble for Ortleb's Clan.

Tommy Apgar is going to give the Westfield baseball team a chance to repeat their recent defeat of the Dunellens on Maurer Oval tomorrow afternoon. Incidentally, Thomas feels that "It Can't Be Done." The Westfielders, with George Ortleb on the mound, are of the opinion that they accomplished the impossible when they so easily defeated the Apgarites.

On the mound, Thomas will use John Dixon. It will be remembered that Norman Harney did the pitching the last time the Westfield crew appeared on the horizon. And Norman was warmly received. But, Johnny Dixon has yet to be introduced to the Westfielders. In some quarters it is felt that the Westfield clan will regret that they ever met the gentleman.

George Ortleb will, in all probability, do the pitching for the Westfielders and Hunt will receive his slants. Marenghi and Gilmartin, stars of last year's High School squad, will also be on hand.

HIGHLANDERS PLAY ON BORO GROUNDS

Will Oppose St. Joseph Team in Second Game of the Series.

The Highlanders will perform on Hyde Field tomorrow afternoon, according to present plans. The St. Joseph team will form the opposition and a nifty attraction is assured all those who attend.

The last time these two outfits met the Saints lost an eleven inning 1 to 0 encounter. Tommy Mullin allowed no hits during the entire course of the game and did not seem to extend himself at all. Billy Dodd handled the receiving for the Highlanders and the rest of the team was composed of fast City League talent.

Eddie Conshay will probably be on the mound for the Saints. Eddie held the Highlanders to three hits in eleven innings the last time he faced them and is hopeful of repeating the feat. Andy McDonough will do the catching for the North Plainfield boys. Earl Moran and Matty Coughlan, City Leaguers, will play with the borough boys.

Unreasonable Woman.

Mrs. Pickleton (with newspaper)—Here's a writer who figures out that in fifty years we undress for bed over 18,000 times. Pickleton—And yet you kick if I break the monotony once in awhile by going to bed with my clothes on.—Boston Transcript.

Princeton.

Princeton's first eleven didn't encounter a great deal of difficulty in its tussle with the second team yesterday. The varsity scored several touchdowns in a short time. Because of an injury received in a scrimmage Wednesday Trainer Fitzpatrick would not allow Eddie Driggs to get into his uniform yesterday. Georgi, fullback on last year's freshman team, was sent in to take Driggs' place. He took advantage of the opportunity and played a fine game. In fact, it was Georgi who did most of the ground gaining for the first team.

Haas and Arnold alternated at quarterback on the first eleven, while Mathiasen and Moore played in the other backfield positions. Ebberstadt, another quarterback candidate, put in an appearance at the camp yesterday and joined in the practice. Ebberstadt was a substitute quarterback on the Tiger eleven the year before last. He did not play last year because of parental objection.

Columbia.

Columbia's football squad put in two hard sessions at South Field yesterday. Head Coach Metcalf ordered the men out for both morning and afternoon work. The morning drill consisted of an hour's workout with the men running and falling on the ball. The matinee session was of longer duration and the men were glad to call it a day's work when the practice was over. Several men were a little stif as a result of Wednesday's practice, but there were no laggards when the short run around the field was called at the close of the day's labors.

Four new aspirants for the eleven came out for practice, bringing the total number of candidates up to thirty-five. Neither Kennedy or Wilber, guard and tackle respectively on last year's team, put in an appearance. They are not expected before the first of the week. Several of the regulars who were out Wednesday were absent yesterday, taking examinations.

Harvard.

The Crimson football team made a big advance yesterday. Playing much much faster both on offence and defence than the day before, the eleven ran riot against the scrubs, scoring four touchdowns and also getting a field goal. The ball was driven to within scoring distance on line plays, and then Flower, Minot and Casey ripped off long runs around the ends.

Taylor, Dadmun and Harte all played with the varsity. Zack has been improving so fast that he was put at tackle on the first team, Captain Dadmun going back to guard on the defensive. Murray Taylor, the leading quarterback, who returned from Texas, will make a great fight against Robinson as soon as he starts into the thick of the play.

Williams.

Announcement was made yesterday that Hal Wright, captain of the Williams varsity football team, had been declared ineligible to play this season. An opportunity will be given him to make up college deficiencies at the midyear examination.

The William team is rapidly rounding into condition. The players engaged in a lively scrimmage yesterday.

"HUB" STINE GETS BUSY WITH WESTFIELD CLAN

Herbert "Hub" Stine, of Plainfield, the recently engaged coach for the Westfield High School football team, will have the squad out for practice next Tuesday. Ted Davies is captain and manager of the team for the coming season and he has hopes that several good players will develop in practice. The schedule of games has been announced. The schedule:

October 7, Somerville H. S., at Somerville; October 12, Plainfield H. S., at Westfield; October 21, Rahway H. S., at Rahway; October 28, Somerville H. S., at Westfield; November 4, Woodbridge H. S., at Woodbridge; November 7, Plainfield H. S., at Plainfield; November 11, open; November 18, Alumni, at Westfield, and November 15, Battin School, at Elizabeth.

WORLD SERIES RESULTS.

With the pennant races in both of the major leagues at critical stages, the Lehigh Valley Railroad has arranged to keep baseball fans who ride on its through trains advised of the score of all the important games. At several points along the line where trains stop to change engines or for other purposes, the scores are gathered and furnished the train crews. In the smoking cars and compartments these scores are promptly posted, while cards giving the same data are placed in leather holders and passed through the cars for the benefit of feminine fans as well.

It Can Be Done!

Somebody said that it couldn't be done,
But he, with a chuckle, replied
That "maybe it couldn't," but he would be one
Who wouldn't say so till he'd tried.
So he buckled right in, with a trace of a grin
On his face. If he worried he hid it.
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

Somebody scoffed, "Oh, you'll never do that,
At least no one ever has done it."
But he took off his coat, and he took off his hat,
And the first thing we knew he'd begun it.
With the lift of his chin and a bit of a grin,
Without any doubting or quiddit,
He started to sing as he tackled the thing
That couldn't be done, and he did it.

There are thousands to tell you it can't be done.
There are thousands to prophesy failure.
There are thousands to enumerate, one by one,
The dangers that wait to assail you.
But just buckle in with a bit of a grin,
Then take off your coat and go to it.
Just start in to sing as you tackle the thing
That "cannot be done," and you'll do it!

WOMEN'S CAMPAIGN TRAIN A NOVELTY IN POLITICS

Will Tour Twenty-eight States and Stop at 100 Cities.

The American people are to be treated to a decided novelty in campaigning when the Women's Hughes campaign train starts out on its tour of twenty-eight states in October.

The train is not going out to campaign for "votes for women." It has nothing to do with woman suffrage. Those who will make the tour are interested in the election of Charles E. Hughes, the Republican candidate for president.

The train will be entirely financed and managed by women. It will carry as speechmakers some of the foremost women writers and leaders in the fields of women's activities. The invitations to make the trip through the country have been sent out by Mrs. Mary Harriman Rumsey, Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney and Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth.

As the train proceeds through the country it will be met by reception committees in each state. These committees will travel with the party through their respective states. Meetings will be held, which will be attended by both men and women, and the speakers will be men.

For instance, on the boundary line of Minnesota the train will be boarded by a committee of ten women. A meeting at one of the large hotels will be held at 2 o'clock. This will be followed by a luncheon. At half past 5 there will be an automobile parade from St. Paul to Minneapolis. In the evening Governor Burnquist will preside at another meeting. In Kansas several associations are working together to make demonstrations in Topeka under the direction of Mrs. Arthur Capper, wife of the governor.

About 100 cities are on the itinerary of the campaign train, and more may be added en route.

16 INCH SHELL HITS HOUSE.

Woman and Child In Adjoining Room Escape Death.

One of the first shells fired in the test of a new monster sixteen inch navy gun at Indian Head, near Washington, D. C., crashed through the steel target and into the house of one of the men operating the gun. William D. Swann was the gunner whose home was partly wrecked, and he is thankful today that his wife and baby happened to have been in another part of the house, out of the way of the shell. The incident has been reported to the navy department.

The sixteen inch shell caromed off from the target and grazed the head of a cow in a nearby pasture, injuring one eye, and continued on to Swann's house, crashing straight through the walls.

A TRULY GOLDEN VOICE.

Caruso, Famous Tenor, to Receive $6,666 For Each of Thirty Performances.

Enrico Caruso, the famous tenor, will receive next summer what will probably be the largest amount ever paid an opera singer for a season's work. He has signed a contract to sing at thirty performances at the Colon Opera House in Buenos Aires, for which he will receive $200,000, or $6,666 a performance, more than twice the salary he receives from the Metropolitan Grand Opera company of New York.

PLAINFILEDER MAY PLAY WITH RUTGERS

Bowlby, Former Red and Blue Star, Almost Certain of Backfield Position.

The Rutgers football eleven, of which George Foster Sanford is the coach, owes much to the schools of New Jersey for material. Nearly all of the stars of the eleven had their early training on the high school or prep school teams of the State. Bowlby, one of last year's substitute halfbacks, played for three years on the Plainfield High School eleven.

Roselle, a backfield man, was the star of the Rahway High School eleven and, a few years ago, took great delight in making things generally inconvenient for the Red and Blue aspirants to the Union County title. Jack Whitehall, the Rutherford star and first all-scholastic quarterback, is almost certain of one of the halfback positions.

Her Delight.

She was walking around the corridors of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts with her pince nez held at elbow length, evidently admiring some of the works. Although the gown that she wore was very expensive, it did not show good taste, and a single glance would convince one that she was of the class known as the "newly rich."

An acquaintance accosted her with the remark, "I didn't know that you were such an admirer of curios, Mrs. ——."

"Oh, yes, indeed," she replied; "I just delight in iniquities."—Philadelphia Ledger.

PHARAOH'S PALACE FOUND BY AMERICAN SCIENTIST

Announcement is made at the University of Pennsylvania museum of the receipt of a communication from Dr. Clarence S. Fisher, head of the Eckley B. Coxe, Jr., expedition in Egypt, describing the discovery of the "greatest of all palaces" occupied by the emperors of ancient Egypt.

According to Dr. Fisher's letter, the excavated palace contains the famed Biblical throne room where Moses and Aaron appeared before Pharaoh and demanded liberation of the Israelites.

CHALLENGE WILL BE ACCEPTED BY TABS

Knights of St. Peter Manager's Challenge Will Not Go Unheeded.

Several days ago it was announced that the Tabs basketball gossip was under way. James Heffernan, manager of the Knights of St. Peter team of New Brunswick, evidently heard a little of the talk or read a little of the results of "space-grabbing." He sent a challenge to the local team and wants a "home and home" series.

The Knights' season opens on October 11 with a dance and gala gathering. Heffernan wants the Tabs to indulge in a basketball battle in New Brunswick on that date. Inasmuch as the local season will not begin at such an early date, it is highly improbable that the Abstainer manager will be able to round up his boys in time for the engagement. However, it is said that a band of Tab basketball players will take it upon themselves to furnish the amusement. In other words, the challenge will not go unheeded.

DEWITT HUBBELL, SECRETARY.

WILL EUROPE'S NEED REQUIRE USE SOON OF TEXAS IRON?

With steel industries producing at top speed but sold ahead for months, where is the billion dollars' worth of steel to come from to rebuild Europe when war ceases? From Texas, say the experts, who recently reported the available iron ore in the district of that state as practically inexhaustible with which to operate furnaces at Texas City, the port where Uncle Sam recently spent $2,000,000 in harbor work.

What the demands of reconstruction which can be financed will be cannot now be estimately closely, but the figures run into the billions. A total of $1,000,000,000 is given as the needs immediately after peace is declared, but later needs will run into more staggering amounts.

One writer says: "It would pay American business interests to organize at once some direct investigation in Europe of the rehabitation in detail." Another adds: "It is imperative that preparations also be made by construction of more steel mills in the vicinity of the ore beds now undeveloped, the largest and most available of which are in Texas, beds of basic ore for basic steel. From the shipping point, Texas City, the freight rates to Atlantic ports is less than from mills dependent upon ore from Lake Erie ports. An economic shift of gigantic importance is due."

NEW TROOPS ORDERED TO BORDER TO REPLACE THOSE WHO WERE RELEASED

War Department Orders Out National Guard of Tennessee—Border Patrol to Be Kept at Present Strength.

May Investigate Irregularities In Supply Department of Illinois Regiments—New York Trooper Killed In Accident.

THE war department has ordered the national guard of Tennessee to the Mexican border. Other state units will be sent to the border coincident with the withdrawals already ordered. There probably will be as many men units sents down as are ordered home so as to leave the effective force for patrol duty at approximately its present strength.

To Question Illinois Officers.

Following the departure from Fort Sam Houston of the First and Second Illinois regiments, it was discovered that the First Illinois was short twenty-one public animals, and the Second was short thirty-three. General Funston has requested that the regimental supply officers of these two organizations be not mustered out of the federal service and that they be ordered to return to Fort Sam Houston in order that the necessary investigation may be made of their failure to give proper care to public property intrusted to them and with a further view to instituting disciplinary measures in case the result of the inquiry calls for such action.

To set at rest rumors that various units of the national guard soon were to be withdrawn from the border Secretary Baker reiterated there was no fixed policy regarding the maintenance of the state troops there and that the length of their stay depended on the status of the border situation.

He said they would be brought home as soon as they could be spared without increasing the danger to life and property in the border section.

"When Do We Go Home?"

In all camps the question "When do we go home?" is on every lip. All along the frontier, wherever the militia is stationed, the question has spread.

At McAllen, where the New York regiments are quartered; at Llano Grande, where a division of Minnesota, Nebraska, Texas and other state troops is stationed, the question fills the air. Rumors had the troops entraining at the end of a week, next week, the week after that and by Oct. 15 surely.

To convince the men how useless all the speculation is Colonel Fisk of the Seventh New York regiment has suggested that every man convince himself that he is doomed to stay the rest of his life and accept with thanks any change in that schedule.

General McNair left with Battery A to try the three inch guns at target work on the La Gloria ranch near McAllen. The La Gloria country is desolate. It was inhabited by Mexicans and was laid waste by Texans in retaliation for bandit raids on the McAllen ranch, twenty miles north.

New York Trooper Killed.

The first fatal accident since the New York troops came to the Mexican border occurred when Private Fred Bishop of the First ambulance company shot and killed himself trying to find out how an automatic pistol was operated.

Bishop, who lived in Johnson City, near Binghamton, N. Y., had an ordinary 38 caliber revolver, the regular equipment of the First ambulance company. He went to visit his cousin, Roy E. Kimble, quartermaster sergeant of Battery C, First field artillery. Kimble was equipped with a modern automatic, which Bishop picked up. He experimented with the pistol with the barrel turned to his face, and it went off and killed him instantly.

Right on the heels of the hike record of the Sixty-ninth infantry, which made eighteen miles from Sterling to McAllen in one march, most of the distance by moonlight, the 103 men of Company C, Twenty-second engineers, have established even a better record. They came in all the way from La Gloria to McAllen in one day, a distance of twenty-three miles.

They went to La Gloria to install a pump so that the artillery would have better water for their projected week of target practice. When the work was done evening was coming on, and with the evening star came a glorious flood of moonlight. The men started out, and the lure of the moonlight kept them on the way until nearly morning.

The Major's Namesakes.

"Cussing out" an officer is a serious offense in the army. That was why Major Larue D. Carter of the Indiana division at Llano Grande, in command of field hospital, was shocked to hear a buck private using his name in vain. Wondering what it was all about, the major stepped from his tent and found Don Hinkle, private, holding a one sided conversation with one of the ambulance mules. Inquiry revealed the men of the ambulance company have named the mules after their officers. Chester is named after Sergeant Chester Padgett, who is small and quick. The namesake of Sergeant George W. Baker, Indianapolis policeman, is George Big, powerful and notoriously stubborn. Ben, the worst kicker, is named for Ben Gray, the horseshoer. The leader of the mules is named after Major Carter.

The Meal That Startled Bob.

Bob Eicheldorfer of Battery B, who quit a fine job to be a soldier, lay on his cot at Llano Grande and dreamed he was in one of the fine hotels at Indianapolis. He ordered cold consomme, cornmeal mush and broiled lake trout. He had a steak two inches thick and ten inches wide smothered with mushrooms and some sliced tomatoes and cottage cheese and some kippered salmon and sliced peaches and casaba melon and coffee. After lighting his cigarette he stopped on his way out and gossiped pleasantly with Fred Sims, heard about the apple crop from big Ed Smith, told Tom, the manager, that Llano Grande would be a fine place for him and then he woke up with the rain beating in his face. The next day Bob got a bill from the same hotel for $11. "Was it a dream bill?" Bob was asked. "I should say not. It was one I owed when I left home and forgot to pay. I took $11 out of my $15 a month and settled."

A Match Famine.

There has been a match famine at Llano Grande. Rain after rain made the matches so damp that only one in twenty would strike. In Company C, First Indiana, every cigarette a man succeeded in lighting with a match did duty as a tobacco torch for a dozen other cigarettes. News that Corporal Stewart Jackson had a lighted cigarette penetrated into another company street and brought whole squads charging to the tent to beg a light.

Quartermaster Captain Walter Kelley, Second Indiana, has set up an office tent next to the regiment headquarters. Sergeant Pickels of the supply department says the tent was put up because he was badly sunburned walking across the big parade grounds to the supply office.

"It's another piece of evidence that we are going home soon," commented a soldier. "They don't want to spoil complexions because they know we will have to show them at home soon."

A sick horse corral will be opened at once back of the Second Indiana, to be used by the whole camp.

Eight Indiana troopers have been released to aid in the support of dependents. They are Marion Hand, Battery A, from Whitestown; Sergeant Harry C. Travelbee, Battery B., Lafayette; Clyde Horn, Battery B, Lafayette; Paul Koeppen, Company B, First Indiana; Leon H. Chambers, Company B, Second Indiana, Terre Haute; private Sahneyfelt, company F, Second Indiana; Cecil Hakins, company H, Second Indiana, Lebanon; Gabriel Ginn, Lebanon.

Missouri's Music Loving Troops.

The harmonious tones of the St. Louis symphony orchestra have not been forgotten by members of Battery A, Missouri artillery, at Camp Laredo, Tex. Several have written to Manager Arthur J. Gaines, asking him to reserve seats for them with the understanding that the reservation be canceled if Battery A is still away from St. Louis. Manager Gaines has assigned the seats and will hold them until the last minute.

The Seventy-first Returns.

In good health and fine spirits after the long railroad journey from the border the Seventy-first regiment, the first contingent of New York guardsmen to be recalled, is encamped at Camp Whitman, Beekman, N. Y. After their arrival the men marched a mile to the new camp site and in an hour had the company streets mapped out.

Because of the possibility of paratyphoid the regiment is still under military quarantine and no one may pass between the lines of the camp, which the medical authorities consider sufficiently isolated. If paratyphoid should make its appearance the Seventy-first is due for an indefinite period of quarantine at Beekman.

There is but one case of sickness in the regiment, and the ill man, James Reagan of Company E, shows few of the symptoms of the disease which were evident in the three members of the regiment left at the regular army base at San Antonio. The Fourteenth regiment is due at Camp Whitman, and the men of that regiment will be subjected to a more rigorous quarantine, as paratyphoid originated in the Fourteenth and the majority of the cases were reported from that regiment.

Casement Bombs Washed Ashore.

What are believed to be relics of Sir Roger Casement's ill fated expedition against British rule in Ireland have been found on the coast of County Kerry, according to dispatches received in London. They are several cases of bombs and explosive material washed ashore.

It is believed that the material is part of the lot Sir Roger and his associates tried to land for the use of the Sinn Feiners. The military authorities took charge of the explosives.

Do You Want a "Guest-Tenant?"

When you rent a room of your home to someone, you secure a "guest-tenant." Your "roomer" is a guest of your house, on a business basis—but still a guest, somewhat in touch with your home, and this makes it highly important that the person should be of the right sort.

In advertising a furnished room it is a simple matter to indicate that the tenant-to-be must have reasonably convincing credentials as to character. You will thus have applications from a desirable class of people while a door sign or window card would merely bring to you the chance passer-by.

"ANTI SOUR FACE" CLASS LEARN PHYSICAL STUNTS

The Anti-Sour Face Class" recently organized under the direction of Abraham Lincoln Chapter, I. C. S. Fraternity of the World, met in the "Frat" rooms last night and the members were put through a series of physical culture movements and given instruction in the art of correct breathing, proper carriage of the body, eating for health, strength and endurance and training of every nerve, muscle and vital organ of the body for physical efficiency and preparedness.

George A. Keene, the physical director, put the class through "stunts" that brought smiles and laughter to every member, one of the students remarking, "this is more fun than going to a show or the 'movies.'"

The class will meet every Monday night at 8:30 o'clock and all men, young and old, are invited to join and learn how to increase or reduce their weight.

ORIGIN OF PUNCHINELLO.

A Memory of the Days When Harper's Weekly Was a Power.

In the days when Harper's Weekly was at the height of its popularity and influence it commanded the services of the foremost illustrators in America, including the cartoonists. Every once in a while a group of these artists would become dissatisfied with the Harper parental control and would leave to establish an independent illustrated paper.

Having squandered their substance in riotous printing, these artists would come to themselves and return to the Harper home, where was bread enough and to spare. No fatted calf was killed on the return of such prodigals, but Henry Mills Alden, the veteran editor of Harper's Monthly Magazine, asserted that the house of Harper never held a grudge against any contributor, whether artist or writer, who left to try other pastures. Such was the origin and such was the end of Punchinello, a comic cartoon weekly which first appeared in New York city on April 2, 1870.

In calling attention to the fact that the first number was dated the first day after All Fools' day, Punchinello remarked: "This is cheering, since thus it is manifest that Punchinello leaves all the fools and jesters behind and is therefore first in the race for the crown of comic laurel and the quiver of satiric shafts." During its short life—less than a year—it was entitled to that honor.—Cartoons Magazine.

FAILED TO LOOK AHEAD.

A Blunder That Has Brought Many a Family to Grief.

In the American Magazine a writer says:

"A man engaged in business in one of the trades or professions is strong and healthy, and his earnings are adequate to meet the needs of himself and family and lay a little by to combat the proverbial rainy day.

"In trying to make a good appearance among his friends he lives up to his income, sells the birthright of his family for a mess of pottage in order to gratify his vanity or procrastinating habits. He is strong, and the future seems a long way off.

"Eventually on account of accident or disease he leaves the scene of action, and his wife and a number of small children must face the gloomy days of the future unassisted by a bank account or life insurance policy simply because he failed to look ahead.

"Another man has a mortgage upon his property, and he soliloquizes in this manner: 'I shall meet the interest and next year begin paying off the mortgage.' The years pass, the mortgage is foreclosed, and he realizes when too late that he failed to look ahead.

"Still another man lived upon the principal of his physical bank account. He failed to bank energy and conserve health in the form of proper physical exercise and careful hygienic living and exacting nature foreclosed by striking her victim with apoplexy."

Canton's City of the Dead.

In Canton, about eighty miles from Hongkong, there is a place known as the City of the Dead. There are 194 small houses, in each of which a corpse is lodged, at the rate of $25 for the first three months and then at a reduced rate until the geomancers employed by the relatives of the dead person decide when and where the corpse shall be buried. Silk or paper lanterns and imitation fruit are hung from the roof. There are screens in each room between the door and the coffin. Tea, fruit and any other kind of food which the dead person liked when on earth are placed on an altar before the coffin each morning. There are cardboard servants standing about to wait on him with pipes or cardboard cups of tea. There are also two handsome paper females placed there to guide his spirit on the way to heaven.

Hitching to a Star.

Many people interpret the familiar phrase "Hitch your wagon to a star" as being an injunction to "aim high." Emerson, who introduces this expression in his essay on civilization, meant no such thing. He says his imagination is greatly stirred by the waves. If an engine could be built which would accumulate all the power of the waves, since the tide makes the waves and the moon makes the tide, we could use this enormous power to run our manufactories and move our wagons. Thus we would "hitch our wagon to a star."—Professor John Erskine at Chautauqua.

Don't Be Envious.

Crush all envy out of your heart. The envious person is in pain upon all occasions which ought to give him pleasure. The relish of his life is lost, and the objects which administer the highest satisfaction to those who are exempt from this passion give the quickest pangs to persons who are subject to it. All the perfections of their fellow creatures are odious. Don't be envious.

AUTOMOBILE TOURS THROUGH DUKE'S PARK

Somerville Merchants' Ass'n Arrange for Trips About Beautiful Estate.

By courtesy of James H. Duke, his beautiful estate will be open tomorrow afternoon under the auspices of the Somerville Merchants' Association. The association will conduct three automobile tours through the park in charge of former Chief of Police A. L. Beilis and Secretary William S. Woodruff. The former will pilot each tour and the latter guard the rear of the line.

The tours will form at Court House Square at 2, 3:45 and 5 o'clock. Positively no one will be permitted to use the private driveways of the park unless accompanying the committee in charge of the tour. The association will be even more rigid in the enforcement of the regulations of the park than on the previous tours. Gates to the private driveways will be opened before each tour and closed immediately after. Guards will be stationed at the gates to see that they are open only when a tour is passing through. Cars will not be allowed to drop out of line. People not complying with these regulations will be summarily dealt with.

ROYAL ARCANUM RATES INCREASED

Litigation May Result From Change in the Old Schedule

Notification of the raise in all rates of the Royal Arcanum has recently come to the members of that order in this city. The new schedule, more than trebling the rates in the case of older members, was forecast at a meeting of the Supreme Council in Atlantic City last May, and was definitely decided upon September 6.

As the action has come from the governing body of the organization there are practically no steps for the individual lodges to take. The need of the increased rate was recommended by expert actuaries after a careful study had been made of the situation.

It is likely that the new rates will be the subject of litigation among some of the members of the organization, more than 300,000 being scattered over all the United States. Litigation arose when the rates were increased ten years ago and at that time the Supreme Court ruled in favor of the heads of the order.

It is admitted that the new rates will bear hard on some of the older members. The claim of the men in charge, however, is that the new schedule is within reason and that it has been adjusted so as to work the least hardship upon the greatest number. The increase, it is claimed, follows the adoption of uniform insurance laws by thirty-seven States, and is caluculated to place the order on the "100 per cent. actuarial basis."

The age of the individual and not the group age is the determining factor in the new scale. Under this system a man of 50 will pay $14.08 a month on $3,000, instead of the $4.64 he paid previously. The new rate for men over 60 is $31.92.

Westfield.

The local tax rate this year will be two points higher than that of last year, the rate per $100 valuation being $2.03.

Fireside Council, Royal Arcanum, will go by automobile to South Orange tonight to visit the South Orange Council.

Charles A. Baechtold, former Mayor of Mountainside, will leave this week for Los Angeles. He has been on a visit here for two weeks.

Just Like the Blind.

As an example of the ability of the juvenile scholar to evolve unexpected meanings, a correspondent of the London Spectator relates that the following question was put to a history class: "What misfortune befell Bishop Odo?" The reply came quite readily, "He was blinded." An explanation was demanded, and the genius brought up the text book. "There, sir" triumphantly, "the book says so." The sentence indicated read, "Odo was deprived of his see."

PROGRESSIVES WILL FOLLOW ROOSEVELT

H. W. Hermann Pledges Support to Hughes at Union County Banquet.

Among the Plainfielders who attended the Union County Progressive Republican banquet in Elizabeth last night were Dr. W. G. Hermann, George W. V. Moy, H. W. Hermann, John Dahl and Curtis Dahl.

H. W. Hermann was one of the speakers. He said in part:

"To ask a Progressive Republican (a veteran of 1912) to speak about Theodore Roosevelt in 1916 is to invite troubles; it is rashness of the most extreme type, for that is the man we loved for the enemies he had made, that is the man we followed because of the issues he had made, that is the man who because of what he, himself was and is and has done in 36 years of public life, has enshrined himself in our hearts and imaginations as the ideal American—and we wanted him for President.

"We will not conceal it, we are not ashamed of it, we glory in it—yes, we even think that because he is our political hero, that we ourselves are better citizens and better Americans and better politicians than we ever would have been without that hero worship.

"First, because he is a real American.

"Born in the purple and educated among aristocrats, he grew up a real Republican (not a Democrat), not an aristocrat but a broad minded, warm hearted man among men; to whom men were men and appraised for their manhood and character and patriotism and courage and not for any of the adventitious circumstances of birth or good fortune.

"Second, he was courageous.

"Not because he went to Montana, became a cow-boy, rode mustangs and rounded up long horn or short horn cattle; not because he went to Africa to hunt lions or elephants; not because he went to South America and was wrecked in the great Amazon wilderness and at a critical moment urged the young men of the party to leave him and press on, as he had had his fling with fortune and fame and they had life before them; not for any or all his daring in war or peace as soldier or hunter.

"But because from his first appearance in Albany in 1880 to his last day in Washington, a period of 29 years, he had no fear of tigers or elephants or jackasses in politics, and he was always ready to lasso long horn or short horn bosses; he was not afraid of Great Britain in the Alaska dispute when he refused to either accede to demands made nor to arbitrate—and he gained a diplomatic victory without notes; he was not afraid of Germany in the Venezuela matter when, without fuss or publicity, he gave the Kaiser 10 days to change his mind; nor was he afraid of Japan in the California matter when he sent the fleet around the world; he was not afraid of eithe capital or labor or precedent in the great coal strike when he took the great common people's side and settled that strike by arbitration and settled it right.; he was not afraid to tell the American people a year and a half ago that they were unprepared—when they thought they were and Josephus Daniels said they were and Woodrow Wilson said they were.

"In spite of bitter disappointment to friends, and bitter denunciation by foes, in spite of cries of trickery and claims of selling out to Wall street, in spite of old friends turned against him crying 'traitor,' he said, Progressives and Republicans unite—for the country's good unite and turn the Democrats out.

"And I say unto you, gentlemen, it was the biggest and bravest thing he ever did—and we are going to follow Teddy and unite behind Hughes and follow Teddy to victory."

DAVID H. ROLAND IN SENIOR GOLF EVENT

Makes Creditable Showing in Field of 175 Contestants.

The second company of seniors, and a goodly company it was, for there were 175 of the veterans, arrived at the Apawamis Club prepared to do their two-day bit in the twelfth annual tourney for the golfers of the land who have passed the age of 55. They lost no time in getting out n the links and shortly before 8 o'clock this morning the struggle for the fine array of prizes began.

Not only did those who played Wednesday have each other to contend with, but they also had the scores made by their predecessors on Tuesday and Wednesday before them as marks at which to aim. As far as the best gross score was concerned the two leaders today, W. E. Truesdell of Fox Hills, and E. J. Haase of the Philadelphia Country Club, who tied at 85, failed by one stroke to reach the standard set by C. Gilbert Waldo of Brooklawn in his first day, but the zest net score today, 94—22—72, made by J. F. Fahnestock of Merion, exactly equalled Tuesday's winning total. When play was over today the general opinion was that the second group of seniors need yield nothing to the first.

David H. Roland, of this city, competed and returned a card of 103—20—83. Mr. Roland finished thirty-ninth in a field of 175 cotestants.

Valuable Guidance.

Get the Habit of Drinking Hot Water Before Breakfast

Millions of folks bathe internally now instead of loading the system with drugs. "What's an inside bath?" you say. Well, it is guaranteed to perform miracles if you could believe these hot water enthusiasts.

There are vast numbers of men and women who, immediately upon arising in the morning, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it. This is a very excellent health measure. It is intended to flush the stomach, liver, kidneys and the thirty feet of intestines of the previous day's waste, sour bile and indigestible material left over in the body which if not eliminated every day become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the bowels, the quick result is poisons and toxins which are then absorbed into the blood causing headache, bilious attacks, foul breath, bad taste, colds, stomach trouble, kidney misery, sleeplessness, impure blood and all sorts of ailments.

People who feel good one day and badly the next, but who simply can not get feeling right are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store. This will cost very little but is sufficient to make anyone a real crank on the subject of internal sanitation.

Just as soap and hot water act on the skin, cleansing, sweetening and freshening, so limestone phosphate and hot water act on the stomach liver, kidneys and bowels. It is vastly more important to bathe on the inside than on the outside, because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, while the bowel pores do.—Adv.

PROPOSALS FOR CULVERTS IN FANWOOD TOWNSHIP.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Committee on County Roads of the Union County Board of Chosen Freeholders at the Court House, Elizabeth, N. J., at 3:00 p. m., on Wednesday, Sept. 27, 1916, for the following described work.

Two new culverts crossing Cooper Street at intersection of Terrill Road in the Township of Fanwood, Union County, N. J.

Each bid on this work must be for both culverts together in lump sum and must be accompanied by a certified check for $50.00, as required by the specifications.

The Committee reserves the right to reject any or all bids as may be deemed best for the interests of the County of Union.

Plans and specifications for this work may be examined at the office of the County Engineer, 120 Broad Street, Elizabeth, N. J.

to have it seem that the opposition is wider than merely in and about Newark and North Jersey, the local press agent included me among the speakers and supplied the speech it was hoped or thought I ought to have made.

Of course, you know I am affiliated on the other side of the fence. I do not believe that I have a right, as a Democrat, to favor or oppose any candate in the Republican primaries, but of course this is not the only reason for my silence at that time.

I am writing this in the hope that you, as an old friend, will convey to Senator Frelinghuysen the disavowal and denial of the activity assigned to me in the press reports of that meeting.

Yours very truly,

FAMOUS AUTO DRIVERS TO COMPETE AT EXPOSITION

Friday, Sept. 29, at Trenton Fair, will be given over to a race meet of the wonderful high powered automobiles. They will round the sharp turns of the half mile track, driven by some of the most famous drivers in the country.

There is no more thrilling sport than automobile racing. Immense speedways, in many instances costing over $100,000 each, have been built in various sections of the country since the opening of the Indianapolis Speedway several years ago.

Small automobile race meets are put on at some fairs, but the automobile races at Trenton are, next to those of the New York speedway, the biggest in the automobile racing line in the east.

BEST OF TROTTERS ON TRENTON FAIR'S CARD

No fair or exposition in the east offers better harness racing to its patrons than the big Fair at Trenton. Here are gathered each year the best trotters and pacers from the New England states, Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania and New Jersey. The prizes offered this year total $7,000.

Many of the horses follow the various circuits throughout the summer and early fall, but at Trenton they all come together, and the result is contests that thrill every lover of a good horse race.

Trenton has always been a favorite spot with horsemen, and the better known stables of trotters and pacers congregate there each year for the annual exposition which Secretary Margerum offers bigger and better each year.

The program that has been arranged by Racing Secretary Horace P. Murphy covers so many classes that it fits almost any stable racing over the half mile tracks. There are classes for trotters ranging from a 2:12 trot to the slow class for green trotters. There is also a class for three-year-olds on Wednesday, which is expected to bring out the best baby trotters owned in the east. The pacers are also well taken care of from the 2:25 class for the green ones to the free-for-all for the fast ones.

"And he?"

"He sold her a spool of thread."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Soon ...oors of the central offices began ...ing open to newcomers—opera... off duty who were hurrying in their homes to the central offices ...p give the service that they knew be demanded. And so it was ...efore the shock of the explosion ...airly awakened the public, addi... operators had taken up their po... at the boards.

...as not simply the operators who ...ned to be off duty at the hour ...olunteered to help in the sudden ...ency at the switchboards. Many ...ere in town but worked in other some even who were no longer employ of the telephone com... were among those who hurried Jersey City and neighboring central offices immediately after the explosion. A young woman who had been a supervisor before her marriage, realizing the pressure which would come at the switchboards, as soon as she heard the explosion hastened to her old post and worked for several hours giving the service which so many subscribers were demanding.

Several men in the various offices, hastening to their posts expecting to find serious damage to the wires, discovered that the explosion had not impaired the equipment, and finding that they could be of service at the switchboards they volunteered as operators until the rush was over.

Regulars and volunteers alike worked with might and main, and their splendid response to the situation has, in the words of one who saw the work at Jersey City, "added another chapter in the history of service to humanity."

TIME ENOUGH TO WORRY.

A much perturbed individual, quite needlessly excited as the event proved, rushed up to the watchman at a telephone exchange in northern New Jersey, about 9.45 one evening in obvious need of the "perpetual service" of the telephone, although he did not know how to apply it to his predicament.

"I want to see someone who can get a message to Columbia, just across the river from Portland, Pa.," he said. "I've been to the telegraph office and they tell me everything is closed there at 9 PM." There was no telephone at the house he wished to reach, but the necessity of his getting a message through in some way was apparent when he went on with his story:

"Two elderly persons, over eighty, now staying with a minister in Columbia, are leaving there early to-morrow morning, and there will be no one here to receive them. It is very important that a message telling them not to come to-morrow be delivered to them to-night. Since everything is closed, and will not be open until after they have started in the morning, I thought I might be able to talk to someone here who would know just how to get someone in Portland to send across the river and deliver the message."

Pointing to the booth, the watchman assured him he could take his troubles there and tell them to the toll operator.

The toll operator soon located and connected him with a grocery store, and he was promised a message would be delivered that night.

When the patron came out of the booth the watchman remarked: "I suppose you left your troubles there."

"Did the central upstairs do that?" asked the patron.

"Yes," replied the watchman, "time enough to worry when the telephone fails you."

"Wonderful!" the patron exclaimed. "I thank you all;" he marched off with a beaming smile on his face, which reflected his admiration of the telephone, and the celerity of the efficient toll operator.

Eating Four Hundred Years Ago.

Four hundred years ago eating was practically confined to two meals a day, but in many parts the second or evening meal was of such a protracted character that laws were passed limiting its duration.

Thus at Berne there was a law against persons sitting at table more than five hours.

At Bale from 10 o'clock in the morning to 6 o'clock in the evening was the maximum permitted, but the town council was unable to practice its own counsels of perfection and on great occasions finished in private.

In Saxony the innkeeper was forbidden to serve more than four dishes at one meal.

Anticipating.

"About what?"

"About where we would go if we had money enough to travel."—Washington Herald.

The Store That Satisfies You

Vol. 2, No. 3 NEWARK, N. J., SEPT. 22, 1916 Priceless

Editorial

We cannot reiterate too often the fact that a man cannot afford to be shabbily dressed—even if he is out of a job and on the verge of being down and out.

It is essential that professional and business men, store and office workers, manufacturers and others transacting daily business should be well dressed.

There is no apology for careless, shabby apparel.

A man need not be a "dandy" just because he wears clothing appropriate to his occupation.

Let each man dress according to his work, but let each dress as nearly right as he knows how—and don't let a few dollars stand in the way of decency and a proper respect for your fellow-men.

Good Clothing can be bought cheaply in this establishment. Few can have any excuse for going without it.

"Boys Will Be Boys"
In the Suits We Sell Them

Boys' Clothes with every juvenile kink that makes them boyish—suits that dress them dashingly, yet give them fullest freedom and ease—suits that make 'em feel right are what we've stocked our great second floor with.

You'll enjoy picking from such a stock.

Boys' All-Wool Suits, in New Norfolk model; three-piece belt; sizes 7 to 18; excellent value at $5 and $5.95.

Boys' High-Grade Two-Pants Suits, new English pinch-back models, three-piece belt, a line of suits tha cannot be surpassed in quality, pattern or style—certainly not in price; extra values for school opening days at $7, $7.50, $8, $8.50 and $9.00

Sizes 7 to 18.

SOME OF AMERICA'S MOST FAMOUS MEN ASK AID FOR DEFENDERS OF VERDUN

Prominent Bankers, Diplomatist and Educator Appeal for Funds in the Name of the Suffering Soldiers of France--

The National Allied Relief Committee, co-operating with the War Relief Clearing House for France and her Allies, is sending out what perhaps will be the most broadcast appeal yet issued on behalf of the war sufferers of Europe.

This appeal is for funds for the relief of the soldiers of France wounded in the fighting around Verdun.

What lends additional interest to this appeal is the fact that it is signed by six of the most prominent men in America. Those who signed it are: August Belmont of the banking firm bearing his name; Hon. Jos. H. Choate, Ex-Ambassador to England; Dr. Charles W. Elliot, President Emeritus of Harvard University; A. Barton Hepburn, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Chase National Bank; Edwin G. Merrill, President of the Union Trust Company, and Henry L. Higginson of the banking firm of Lee, Higginson & Company, Boston.

It is anticipated that the contributions received from this wide-spread appeal will be devoted also to relief work among a large number of wounded resulting from the greatly increased activities of the contending armies.

The appeal is reproduced herewith.

CUPID COMMANDS ON THE BORDER

New Jersey's Marriage Record to Jump When Soldiers Come Home.

LONG DISTANCE WOOING

Captains, Lieutenants and Enlisted Are Included—Douglas Mail Is Filled With Pink Envelopes That Smell Sweet.

By JAMES J. McNAMEE.

Douglas, Ariz., Sept. 18.—This winter will be a prosperous one for the marrying parsons" of New Jersey if the remainder of the State troops now stationed here are allowed to return to their homes before they forget the many good resolutions made during the past two weeks, when home and loved ones have been constantly in their minds. Dozens of times recently has the question: "What are you going to do when you get home?" been asked and the answer invariably is: "Get married."

Everybody is going to do it, captains, lieutenants, corporals and enlisted men. Danny Cupid has been having the time of his life down here. In fact his presence has seriously interfered with the ethics of good militarism in many instances. From the time Uncle Sam sounded the mobilization call Cupid has been constantly on the job, and that his percentage for the year 1916 will be considerably fattened when the soldier boys return to Jersey is a foregone conclusion.

Dan Cupid was the first general to mobilize his forces and he's just as anxious as any of the enlisted men to get back home and enjoy a much deserved vacation. He has been the hardest worker in the Jersey outfit, has accomplished the most; all this despite the broiling heat and the fact that the men he has had to engineer many long distance wooings and proposals.

Jerseymen who vowed three monthe ago that they had never been blessed with a spark of love for anything but money, have "fallen" and fallen hard Hundreds of pink and blue envelopes are dropped into the camp postoffice in mail sacks each day for as many expectant khaki clad youths, and not a day goes by but what some soldier shyly admits that the border trip will soon result in his becoming a benedict, even though it has accomplished little else. That's the reason many of the Jerseymen are homesick and are anxiously awaiting the order to entrain for home. If you don't believe this just take a trip to Sea Girt the morning they arrive there and view for yourself the welcomes many of them will get from pretty Jersey misses, many of whom have never been kissed before.

That certain "something" which attracts marriageable maidens to soldier uniforms and instills within them and overwhelmiing degree of patriotism, that carrie with it a love for the wearer, was never more prominent than when the Jersey troops entrained for the West on those memorable days in June and July. Bashful misses who hadn't quite made up their minds whether or not to accept the aatention of zealous wooers were forced to lift the bans of independence as the troops pulled out of Sea Girt and ever since that time they have been avowing their love in letters bold. Likewise with the soldier element. Since coming here the boys in khaki have had plenty of time to let their minds wander through sentimental paths and have retreated under General Cupid's steady fire. They have spent many hours writing sweet nothings to the girls they left behind them. Hence, the cry for help that has gone up from the Douglas postmaster. Before the soldiers came here he had a cinch —now he and his assistants are forced to do real work eight hours a day and that's not altogether to the Westerners' liking.

Already plans have been made for marriage ceremonies as soon as the soldiers get back and it is safe to conclude that the marrying clergymen along the coast will even be called in to accept a share of this business. The Jerseymen have become well acquainted with Uncle Sam and will take no chances in the future. Their initial precautionary step will be to get married as soon as they land on Jersey soil for fear that the government might experience a sudden change of mind and ship them back to the cacti desert before the mustering out is completed.

Dainty Snails.

Snails are most dainty feeders and strict vegetarians, as many gardeners know to their cost. Apparently three centuries ago snails were more popular in England than they are now. The fastidious author of "The Faerie Queene" gives a recipe for their preparation:

With our sharp weapons we shal thee fray
And take the castill that thou lyest in;
We shal thee flay out of thy foule skin,
And in a dish, with onyons and peper,
We shal thee dresse with strong vynegars
—London Standard.

Only a Lady In the Making.

Five-year-old Freddy often showed pugilistic tendencies. One day he had been using his fists on three-year-old sister Helen. His visiting auntie said: "Freddy, don't you know that a gentleman never strikes a lady?"

Instantly Helen stopped crying and exclaimed, "They do too."

"Why, Helen!" said auntie. "When did you ever see a gentleman strike a lady?"

With an air of convincing proof the little maid replied, "Why, my daddy spanks me."—Christian Herald.

Dressing the Girl for SCHOOL

BY HESTER WINTHROP

Fur Adds a Charming Touch on the Little Maid's Coat

A Graceful Little Dress of Dark Brown Taffeta and Poplin

A Jacket Frock of Navy Serge and Blue and Green Taffeta, with Pockets and Braid Trimming

A Sensible and Pretty Gym Suit of Navy Serge

An Excellent School Coat of Mixed Worsted has a New Yoke and Collar

A Knockabout Coat and Hat of Good Style for the Schoolgirl--Blue Serge the Standard School Fabric--Reddish Brown Shades Fashionable--Braid and Button Trimmings.

ALL over this wide land, from Maine to California, now, mothers are turning their attention to school raiment, and sturdy yet attractive frocks, coats and hats for every-day wear are receiving special attention. Whether the young girl is being prepared for boarding school, or only for attendance at the day session of a school at home, she will require a supply of new wearables for which the first requisite will be neatness and the second serviceability. If she is to attend the grade school in her vicinity her wardrobe should be simple and not too expressive of expense. It is not good taste to dress a girl so much better than her schoolmates that she will be a conspicuous figure because of her fine clothes; her frocks, coats and hats may be of the best materials and possess the distinction of exclusive style without being ostentatiously smart or elaborate.

If she is to attend a private school in her neighborhood, she should still dress simply, but her raiment must possess a certain distinction; it must have the hallmark of style. It is as unfortunate—for the little school girl—to be poorly dressed among smartly attired young misses as overdressed among schoolmates of humbler station. Girls are apt to be very critical of each other's clothes at the beginning of the teens and lest the youthful aspirant to social prestige in a fashionable private school be subjected to envy, perhaps even heartache from the cruelest of all snubbing—that given by youth to youth—she should be properly equipped to take her place among the girls who will make up her little circle.

Navy Serge Always Admirable.

The standard material for school dresses in England, France and America is dark blue serge. Nothing wears better, keeps its freshness better and fits the picture of school day life more agreeably. A rather hard-twisted serge should be selected and the finer the quality the smarter will be the little frock. The style should be simple but smart and modern and there should be all the little touches that bring a frock up to date. One's heart aches for the little maid whose school dresses are cut, year after year, in a stereotyped pattern that appeals to parental opinion as being proper and sufficient for its purpose.

Such attractive little school frocks are ready in the shops that most mothers prefer nowadays to buy ready-made. Much smarter style can be obtained in this way, for the manufacturers of such frocks employ skillful designers and models are kept up-to-the-minute in cut and trimming. If the frocks are to be built in the home sewing room, it will pay to spend a day looking about the shops and noting the special features of the ready-made frocks, the manner of cutting the skirt, the length of the skirt, the location of the belt and the cut of the sleeves—this gives the modish silhouette. Special trimming features should also be carefully observed; the location of buttons and pockets, the shape of collars, slashes, strappings, revers, and the like. But it is the silhouette that is most important. If the frock is made at home it may be made of better material than one is likely to obtain in a moderately priced ready-made model, and may have the added distinction of being stitched throughout with silk. French frocks for little girls show this daintiness of silk stitching even in details hidden from the eye; unfortunately the American manufacturer chooses to economize in this important detail of distinction and the cotton stitching in ready-made frocks detracts from their good looks and their durability. Two spools of sewing silk—enough to stitch even a pleated frock, cost such a trifle compared with the daintiness of finish secured, that one deplores the ugly cotton stitching so often quite visible to the eye in ready-made models.

Of Course, A Middy For School!

Every young girl will want one natty middy frock at least to alternate with other costumes through the school semester. It should be of navy serge of course and should have, this season, a pleated skirt with pockets more or less exaggerated, set on at the hips. The waist will be confined by a trim belt and will go under the skirt—the middy that hangs over the skirt is for sport wear and is not suitable for school. The very essence of a middy effect is in the divided waist—the shoulder portion overlapping the lower portion in an irregular manner, stitched in smart tailored style. The sleeves may be set in or of the kimono type at the shoulder, with the overlapping, stitched low armhole on as line with the overlapping of the waist portion. A sailor collar and big, soft tie of black silk complete the correct middy ensemble. A frock of this sort, made of very dark, fine serge, with edges bound with black braid and every detail flawlessly tailored will be very smart indeed; but the middy must be perfectly cut and tailored if it is to possess distinction and style.

Mohair Frocks In Favor For Fall.

Mohair is an excellent material for the autumn school frock—or even for an all-winter school frock for the matter of that. This material is very fashionable this season and many of the smartest French trotter frocks for women are of mohair or alpaca. Very attractive school frocks of navy mohair have pleated skirts, and tunic waists with very large arm holes, the edges of the tunic bound with braid or scalloped by hand with silk. Underneath this tunic goes a guimpe of white lawn or of plaid silk—if lawn is considered too thin for winter. The modern school is well heated and many mothers keep little girls in lawn guimpes throughout the winter; but it should be remembered that several times a day windows in the school room are likely to be thrown wide open in the interests of perfect ventilation, a condition not so apt to occur at home. Fire drills also send the children out into the street at intervals improperly protected against the cold though each child is supposed to catch up hat and wraps on the way out.

Combinations of serge, or mohair, with plaid taffeta make bright and serviceable school dresses and one model is pictured. The jacket frock is particularly attractive. The green and blue silk frock, in one piece, is sleeveless and rounded out at the neck, and may be worn on warm days with a white lawn guimpe. The smart little jacket of navy serge makes quite another costume of it. This jacket is trimmed with narrow black braid and the pockets, belt and trimming around the neck on the silk frock match the jacket. The neat little collar is of hand scalloped pique. This little maid of twelve or thirteen years old wears her skirt in the correct length for her years. Her serviceable school shoes are of brown glazed kid and are matched by brown stockings.

Brown School Frocks In Vogue.

All shades of brown, and particularly the reddish or tobasco browns are fashionable for children this season and for the brown-eyed little maid a brown school frock will be charming—particularly as so many other girls will wear blue. There is a picturesque daintiness about the brown costume pictured, a combination of pleated skirt and loose taffeta tunic with a graceful sash at the waist. The panel arrangement of the pleats is good and a facing of stiffening under the hem will keep the pleats crisply in place. The tunic buttons at the back and the armholes, V neck opening and scallops at the lower edge are finished with fine cording. The machine embroidered collar and cuffs add an extra note of daintiness for special occasions.

The School Coat Question.

No less important than the problem of the school frock is that of the school coat. It must be sturdy, it must be good looking, it must not mind rough weather or rough usage, and it must be roomy enough to grow in for the girl will probably do some growing between autumn and distant spring. The formal coat, worn on high days and holidays needs far less care in selection than the humble school coat which will be worn every day but Sunday, the season round, and will be tossed on, dragged off, tumbled in heaps and otherwise inconsiderately treated. The pleated coat shown is of mixed worsted in neutral tan and green tone with a new yoke and sleeve, and plenty of flare at the edge. The wide belt fastens around at one side. The collar may be crossed snugly and buttoned close to the throat, or worn open. Such a coat will cost about eight dollars, made of good material. With it is worn an admirable felt school hat in the dashing continental shape, with pleated ribbon cockades.

A bit more distinguished in style is the dark green coat with collar and cuff trimming of skunk fur. The simple lines, loose belt and ripple flare of this model are especially good, combined with the distinction of excellent material and fur trimming.

The gym suit is best made of blue serge for an overheated child cooling off in an airy gymnasium needs the protection of wool in her costume. The belted tunic pictured is smart and modern, and more comfortable for reaching exercises than a blouse gathered at the waistline.

Things You Can Fashion With Ribbons

IT is absolutely true that there is scarcely any limit to the things that can be made of ribbon. If you are delayed in getting out your Christmas gifts and have time neither for extensive shopping nor hours of needlework; ask every woman you know for a ribbon-gift suggestion, jot down all the suggestions and then spend an hour buying all sorts and shades of ribbon. After this you may set to work and two dozen pretty and acceptable gifts can be turned out in a few evenings. But be sure and have your ideas and your ribbons ready to hand; shopping at the ribbon counter requires time and patience in the weeks before Christmas, and it is well to get all you will possibly need while you have a place in the front row and a saleswoman's undivided attention.

You can make ribbon remembrances ranging in size from a rosebud sachet for a chemise to a sofa pillow for the chaise longue; or from an envelope safety-pocket for jewelry to a hooped petticoat to go beneath an evening gown. All you will need will be plenty of ribbon—yards and yards of ribbon, satin, grosgrain, warp-printed Dresden sash ribbon, tinsel woven trimming ribbons, and narrow No. 1 ribbon for drawstrings and rosettes.

A ribbon bag may be used for theatre and restaurant with an evening costume; or it will make a glorified dustcloth bag for somebody's dainty guest room. It is made of Dresden ribbon in blurred pinks and blues and plain pink satin ribbon of good width. There are two bon, straight at top and bottom and rounded at the ends. These sections are not separate but are joined by a strip of the ribbon which passes under the bag and makes an oblong bottom section, the latter stiffened with an oblong of cardboard. The ends of the bag are made of pink satin ribbon, gathered to the Dresden ribbon. Two shorter pieces of the satin ribbon, gathered to the straight upper edges of the Dresden sections, form the sides of the upper part of the bag. The six ends of pink satin ribbon, gathered into a frill, form petals which turn back over the drawstring of the bag. These strings are of Nattier blue ribbon run through a casing. Be sure and face the sides with a resilient stiffening. Inside the facing, of course must go a lining of some sort and the pink satin ribbon, used for making the top of the bag will do for this lining also. Between the lining and facing, in the bottom of the bag, lay a section of cardboard so that the bottom of the bag may be kept perfectly flat. The side sections of flowered ribbon should be about four and a half inches wide at the lower, or straight edge, and the strip at the bottom will measure four and a half by two and a half inches. Thus the bag will be of dainty size and will just accommodate a small opera glass, a handkerchief and small vanity outfit.

The gay lady who presides over a telephone is dressed in a ribbon gown with spreading skirt and panniers in the lively Watteau fashion. Like the famous Queen of Spain who, according to a fastidious courtier of her time, "could have no legs," the telephone lady, below the waistline is composed only of petticoats. The upper part of her is a tiny bisque doll. Her voluminous skirt is made of several strips of wide sash ribbon in orchid and violet shades and hoops of featherbone tubing are run through casings under the flounces of ribbon to make the skirt stand out crisply at the hem and what would be the knee, did the lady possess nether extremities. The flounces are of violet satin ribbon, the gathered panniers also, and the latter have a trimming of very narrow gathered ribbon in the same shade. The little bodice is made of the flowered ribbon, attached to the shoulders of the doll with paste. A reticule of the ribbon, hung from one arm by drawstrings of baby ribbon completes the ensemble of this fetching dame. These telephone covers are very popular for dainty boudoirs and bed rooms furnished in Louis XVI style; they are not so appropriate for a library or living room.

A Whole Cushion, In The New Pancake Effect May Be Covered With Corded Ribbons, Wide Sash Ribbon Being Used For The Top And Bottom Sections.

A cushion covered with wide ribbon is in the flat, elongated shape now fashionable. Very wide sash ribbon in rich shades of rose, garnet and violet was used for the panels at top bon for the gathered sides. The ribbons are joined by corded pipings made with inch-wide satin ribbon in deep rose color and two ribbon-made roses combining the colors in the cushion, are fastened at one end.

Other color combinations will suggest themselves for a flat cushion of this type. A rose pink cushion all in one tone would be lovely for a chaise longue in a boudoir; one of gold colored and black ribbon would add an effective note in the drawing room.

The bed room slippers are dainty affairs, made of pale blue satin ribbon, within and without. A braided ribbon trimming is most effective as a finish at top and bottom—to cover the stitches. The upper part of the slippers are made of a straight strip of satin ribbon, mitred in a bias seam to form the sloping toe, and this strip should be reinforced with a strip of stiffening in exactly the same shape and size. Thus stiffened, the ribbon slipper is sewed to a ribbon-covered sole (these soles may be purchased in any shoe shop where materials for worsted slippers are sold). The lining of the slipper and sole is sewed up separately and slipped into the slipper with seams on the under side. Lastly, the braided ribbon trimming is tacked on.

This Watteau Dame In Her Ribbon Gown Presides Over The Telephone; The Bag Is Also Made Of Fancy Ribbons.

Cushions for hatpins have for a foundation a tall, slender glass in which the pointed ends of the pins rest. The "rose" is made of gathered ribbon over a bit of cotton batting; the calyx of the rose is of ribbon also and the folded ribbon strips are lined with stiffening. After the calyx has been shirred into place and the shirrings covered with gathered narrow ribbons, the puffy rose which forms the top may be fitted into its ribbon cup and fastened securely.

Laced ribbon pin cushions are very pretty for the dresser. Two shades of ribbon, or contrasting colors are laced in basket-weave fashion as garten. This makes the top of a square cushion and the edge may be finished with a ribbon ruching. A corset case is made of two long strips of wide sash ribbon feather-stitched or buttonhole-stitched together at the edges; the rolled-up corset slipping into one end. Some of these corset cases, hand-embroidered, or hand-painted on the outer side, are very beautiful and make most acceptable gifts to women who like to keep their corsets thus daintily enveloped. A dancing-petticoat hoop made of ribbon and featherbone tubing will be a dainty gift for a young woman. The two featherbone hoops, run through ribbon casings, hang on strips of narrow white ribbon which depend from a ribbon belt. There should be six of these ribbon strips, the three in front a bit shorter than the three in back. One hoop should be set to come just below the hip, the second hoop

SCOTCH PLAINS IS ON THE EVE OF BIG BOOM

Things Are Looking Up in Scotch Plains.

With the recent extensive developments made upon the property, one time the Flanders estate, there is considerable promise of a substantial impetus in building there.

Purchased last spring by Lawrence R. Jones, of New York and Cincinnati, Flanders Park has been converted into a high class suburban development. The property lies in the center of the town of Scotch Plains, facing on Front street and running back across the street car line to the Coles estate. A new street cut through the center of the property has been named Flanders avenue. Sidewalks have been built on each side parallel with Flanders avenue; also walks have been laid on either side of the car line on East Second street.

Naturally such elaborate improvements to this staid and dignified old homestead would presage other enterprises.

The eighty-odd building lots, together with the eleven-room house occupying the park will be offered for sale at a public auction on the property begining Thursday, September 28, at 2 p. m. Every arrangement has been made looking to the comfort of those attending the sale. Handsome souvenirs will be distributed, and these choice lots will be sold without reserve to the highest bidder on the grounds.

Street cars run east and west through the property. Union cars may be taken from Plainfield and Westfield direct for Flanders avenue.

Beginning Thursday, September 28, the sale will continue at the same hour Friday, Saturday, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Sept. 29 and 30, and Oct. 2, 3, and 4.

Mr. Jones' headquarters are at 173 East Front street, Plainfield, where maps and all information pertaining to this sale may be obtained.Adv. **

GREEN SHELLED FLEAS.

Tiny Parasites That Attack Nearly All Fresh Water Fish.

Scarcely any species of fresh water fish is free from the attacks of the little disklike fish flea, its flattened, greenish body being pressed close against the skin of the fish.

The so called fish louse is neither flea nor louse, but a member of a simple group of crustaceans, well known to naturalists for the parasitic habit of most of its members.

It is far from having reached the ultimate degeneration of the chronic parasite, however, and often forsakes its victim to enjoy the pleasures of the free.

I have watched the fish fleas during these excursions into the open water, apparently engaged in their gambols—tiny greenish disks dashing hither and thither in direct course, diving suddenly downward or upward or turning over and over in a series of rapid somersaults, which have been reckoned to number some hundred a minute.

Should a fish flea wish to rejoin a host it approaches until it is caught up in the swirl of water which accompanies the movement of the fish, and, so soon as it touches, it lays quick hold upon the skin of its victim by a pair of peculiar sucker organs, placed on the under surface near the mouth.—London Tit-Bits.

Voracity of the Cormorant.

Fishing with cormorants used to be an English royal sport. The bird's voracity is such that some have wished to spell its name "corvorant," though the true derivation is "corvus marinus," sea cow. The contrast between the cormorant when darting after its prey, as one sees it at the zoo, and when standing, the picture of dull lethargy, must have been present to Milton when he described Satan sitting in the tree of life "like a cormorant."—London Chronicle.
